HENRY FORD AND WALL STREET

RECENT press dispatches announced that Henry Ford might be prevailed upon to join one of the railroads in opening a big bank in New York city. The object of this move, it was stated, would be to oppose the "money trust" of Wall Street.

Mr. Ford is said to be the richest, or second richest, man in the United States. Apparently authoritative estimates place his daily income at close to $500,000 a day. That is pretty good pay. What is Mr. Ford doing with all his money?

With all his wealth, Henry Ford is the idol of many who spend the greater part of their time denouncing other men who have been financially successful. Other millionaires finance world-wide institutions for the feeding of the needy, several have given away millions that such diseases as tuberculosis and cancer may some day be wiped from the face of the earth, scores of wealthy men have endowed colleges and schools where the poor man's son might have a 50-50 chance with the son of the millionaire.

What has Henry Ford given away? It is true that he has been greatly responsible for the lower prices for automobiles that prevail in the United States. But Henry, we believe, has reduced the price of flivvers not because of any desire to allow everyone to ride in an automobile, but because it was a good business stroke. When other makers of small cars come near the price of the festive flivver, Henry having the lead in the small car field and by far the biggest organization, at once lops off a few dollars and creates consternation in the ranks of the competition. But even at that, Henry is not giving anything away. The lower the price the more he sells. His income steadily increases.

What is Henry Ford doing with all the money he makes? Is he turning over a portion of it to benefit that long-suffering humanity that he seems to sympathize with so often? Apparently not. The Ford income seems to be going into railroads and mines and factories that will further increase the power of Henry and young Edsel—the Alvin York of Detroit. Henry Ford is already a big figure in the financial world. His word is law to thousands. He is a flivver and financial emperor.

But Henry is a different kind of financial czar. His subjects do not curse him, no matter how much he does for them. Henry's subjects follow him blindly. The money he makes goes to Henry Ford and those close to him. He is a born money maker and, to all appearances, a born money hoarder. If he keeps going as he is now going, Henry Ford will, in a few more years, have in his pockets a goodly proportion of the world's ready cash.

But Henry Ford is following a different route from that usually taken by those who seek great wealth. Henry is continually painted as the bosom friend of the "common people." He is the richest, or second richest, man in the nation. He makes much and gives back very little. His desire seems to be to some day step to the throne of financial leadership.

Henry, aided by his press agents, is waging a bitter war on the "money kings." The fact that he is one of the greatest "money kings" is continually covered up by the smoke screen thrown out by his followers. Henry Ford would chase the financial barons out of Wall Street, and then, no doubt, Henry would drive his flivver in and take charge. Henry Ford's war on wealth is nothing but a war for wealth.

And, unlike the others whom his lieutenants paint in such hideous colors, what's Henry's seems to be his for keeps.

Nevertheless, it is an interesting fight, regardless of who may win. Mr. Ford delights in telling that he once was poor. So were John D. Rockefeller and Andrew Carnegie. But we have not yet heard of any Ford Foundations or Ford Libraries. There doesn't seem to be any choice between Henry Ford and Wall Street, except that the wealth of Wall Street is distributed among hundreds of financiers, whereas Henry Ford would have it all in his own pockets.

Many a man has tried to sneak up the back alley to power while calling attention to what the boys on the main street were doing.

NERVES

A jail prisoner in New York is found dead and his cellmate tells police that he beat him to death because "He was making too much noise and I wanted to sleep."

Some of the rest of us have had a similar impulse on such occasions as when a neighbor plays his phonograph "after hours."

How much worse is the actual deed than committing a crime or transacting evil mentally?

CORN COBS

CORN-COBS are being turned into automobile fuel, also a hard-rubber substitute used for phonograph records, pipe stems, varnish, buttons and electrical parts.

This commercial alchemy happens not in Germany, famous for its utilization of by-products, but right here in America. It is the result of six years of research by La Forge and Maine, chemistry experts of the Department of Agriculture.

Chemical engineering is one of the biggest fields open to young men today. It is the modern Aladdin's Lamp.

GATS

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION considers urging a national law to prevent making of firearms and ammunition except under Uncle Sam's supervision.

This would do a lot to shut off the gunman's supply of gats, now procurable by mail-order.

Shooting will not be eliminated until guns are eliminated. Each move to put pistols farther from the reach of criminals is a step toward disarming the enemies of society.

There is One Thing Your Uncle is Real Good At

THIS IS THE MAN WHOSE DIARY IS SAID TO HAVE CAUSED MANY PROMINENT SOCIETY FOLK WORRY

PHOENIX, Ariz., Oct. 23. — Who killed Guy N. Dernier, clubman and bon vivant, may never be known.

His extraordinary fascination for women, which officials declare caused his murder here, is the means now of protecting his slayer or slayers from the vengeance of the law.

Dernier has been accused of breaking up numerous homes. His diary, recently found, is said to contain the names of many women, socially prominent in the southwest.

Fearing lest the finger of scorn be directed toward their feminine relatives, powerful men are said to be subtly but effectively blocking the police in their efforts to unravel the mystery.

The acknowledged Beau Brummel of Arizona's capital was strangled to death and his body thrown into an irrigation ditch near here. His clothes were left neatly piled in his automobile which was left near the ditch, apparently to give the impression that Dernier took his own life.

PIECE OF CHEESE THREATENS TO CAUSE POLITICAL REVOLT IN TINY EUROPEAN REPUBLIC

ANDORRA, Oct. 23. — A piece of cheese threatens to disrupt the peace of Andorra, smallest and oldest republic in the world.

Neither the age nor the fragrance of the cheese has anything to do with it. It's the quantity.

The question is this: Shall the Bishop of Urgel be allowed as semi-annual tribute two cheeses, as formerly, or only one cheese?

Political strife and schism revolve around these cheeses—which are six feet in circumference!

The "two-cheese" party insists that the Bishop of Urgel be satisfied with ancient custom, which, according to the "Acte of Passage" of 1283, the Magna Charta of Andorra, decreed that he should receive in addition to his salary of 460 francs two large cheeses and two hams twice a year.

Now comes the cry for government economy—and the birth of the "one-cheese party." These people believe that the bishop has been tasting too highly of the joys of life, that in this area of the high cost of living one cheese should suffice for one man's needs.

The bishop refuses to say what his cheese needs are, nor will he comment on his annual cheese capacity. He is going to let the people decide. And while they are deciding, this little republic of 175 square miles, perched high in the Pyrenees mountains, is far more disturbed than they were during the World War.

'Royal' Dog Denies He's a 'Sissy Purp'

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Oct. 21. — This story is just to give "Tanky," a pedigreed Pekingese purp a chance to deny a few things that have been printed about him.

"Tanky" has just arrived in America, accompanied by Monsieur de Tallyrand-Perrigord, first Duke of Tallyrand, and Duchess de Tallyrand, formerly Anna Gould.

True, he is of royal dog blood, but—He eats plain meat.

He doesn't sleep on a fancy pillow, nor in a royal bed.

He is bathed only once a week (though he jumps in a puddle of mud whenever he gets a chance).

He mixes with common dogs when he slips out for a stroll.

He's traveled a lot—but would rather stay at home if the duke and duchess would let him.

And "Tanky" sincerely hopes that this will correct all the rumors that he is a milk drinker and a lounge lizard, and put him in right with the democratic American dogs he expects to meet over here.

Some suppose Hebrew to have been the language spoken by Adam.

NOTED DOCTOR TELLS HOW YOU CAN AVOID COLD

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—The season of sickness approaches. The air will become dusty, full of germs, ready to be stirred into life and activity when a warm lodging in nose or mouth can be found. The usual winter ailments, coughs, colds, tonsillitis, grippe, pneumonia, are on their way here.

How to prevent them? Dr. Allan J. McLaughlin, assistant surgeon general and president of the American Public Health Association, lays down these rules:

1. Keep clean. By that is meant, not only bathing daily, but washing out the mouth and teeth after every meal. It also means gargling the throat and douching the nose. For the nose and throat wash, use a solution of one teaspoonful of salt to one pint of warm water.
2. Keep the pores open and functioning through daily baths is of little value unless you wear the proper clothing. Loose-fitting, well-ventilated underwear is the thing.
3. Get plenty of exercise. Eat heartily of substantial food. Consult your physician as to diet, exercise and rest.

JUST FOR FUN

Sandy Was Smart.

The kirk was in urgent need of repair, and McNash, a very popular member, had been invited to collect subscriptions for the purpose.

One day the minister met Sandy walking irresolutely along the road. The good man at once guessed the cause.

"Sandy," he said, earnestly, "I'm sorry to see you in this state."

"Ah, well, it's for the good of the cause," replied the delinquent happily. "Ye see, minister, it's a through these subscriptions. I've been down the glen collectin' fun's, an' at every house they made me have a wee drappie."

"Every house. But—but, surely, Sandy, there are some of the kirk members who are teetotalers?"

"Aye, there are; but I wrote tae those!"

A Model Young Man.

The fussy old gentleman asked the chance traveling companion: "Have you any children, sir?"

"Yes, sir; a son."

"Does he smoke?"

"Ah, sir, he never so much as touched a cigarette."

"So much the better, sir; the use of tobacco is a poisonous habit. Does he frequent clubs?"

"He has never put his foot in one."

"Allow me to congratulate you. Does he never come home late?"

"Never. He goes to bed directly after dinner."

"A model young man, sir; a model young man. How old is he?"

"Just six months."

Shame Better Than Regret.

"Are'n't you ashamed, William," exclaimed the indignant minister, "to hit a smaller boy than yourself?"

"Well, I don't know," said William, who was a bit of a philosopher. "I guess I'd rather be ashamed to hit a smaller boy than be sorry I hit a bigger one."
