An Interesting American Story by Miss Drake.

Reviews of a Number of Recent Publications.

New Books Issued in Many Lines of Work-A Number of Coming Issues. Notes About Authors and Their Productions.

[BY L. B.] Miss Jeanie Drake is a new American author of a charming love story, entitled In Old St. Stephens. The story is supposed to be made from the records and diaries bequeathed to the writer by his grandfather, a South Carolina planter, in the early part of the century. It presents a very fascinating sketch of the old family, and shows phases of life, customs and conditions of southern life that are now wholly matters of history. General Lafayette is among the characters introduced in this book, and John C. Calhoun plays a prominent part in the plot. The other characters are members of old wealthy families and negro slaves. There is a charming freshness in the story, which is full of constant human interest. It is told forcibly and vividly, and holds the reader's attention and sympathy.

Out of the Jaws of Death, by Frank Barrett, will fascinate the average reader of good novels and exciting literature.
The adventurous career of those who find their life work in opposition to the czar of Russia and his commands has czar of Russia and his commands has furnished material for more than one romance; but in the book Frank Barrett has treated the subject in a somewhat newer light. The leading figure is that of a very bad Irishman who finds in Russia a field for his special powers, and he works so skillful and persistently that he makes trouble for every one that he makes trouble for every one whom he meets, until he finds his match in an English girl, who brings him to grief. The excitement of the conspirator's life is but secondary to the prettily-told story of the rescue of a little waif from the slums and the blind devotion of the girl to her rescuer, who devotion of the girl to her rescuer, who, after a series of escapes and deeds of courage, which are entertainingly woven about the main thread of the story, marries her. Plots and counterplots, intrigues, suspicion, politics, cruelty, knavery and virtue combine to make this a bighly avaiting book, and a more this a highly exciting book, and a more thrilling story of its kind would be hard

There are so many kind-hearted authors who think of the needs of the young readers. But children tire much quicker than elder readers when book after book is brought forth whose scenes after book is brought forth whose scenes and plots and adventures are all laid in similar places and amid the same surroundings. Marian Brewster has departed from these well traveled roads, and takes the boy and girl reader to a new country—the water oaks and low pertions of Florida. The title of the book is Under the Water Oaks, and is prettily told. It is the play of three little boys, one of whom is a quaint little colored boy, which takes place mostly under the water oaks. The principal adventures occur during a deer hunt, the taking prisoner of a tramp, being lost in the woods, and similar everyday events that come to all bright, adventuresome and fun loving children. It is especially recommended to children of from 8 to 14 years of age.

The Snare of the Fowler is a new novel by Alexander and is a much more exciting tale than For His Sake, brought out earlier this year. Myra Dallas, an orphan, about whose birth there is a mystery, is discouped by her guardian's wife as soon as the wife becomes a widow, but the girl is found by an old friend of her father's, who guards her, teaches her to draw and paint and finally falls in love with her, although he has reasons for not declaring himself promptly. She has a wicked old aunt who casts dark suspicions on the child's parentage and subjects her to all sorts of persecutions in order to get hold of the child's inheritance. The girl is afterward re-called to the family that had dropped her and is used to further some schemes which come to naught, although she is frequently put in perils which arouse the sympathy of feminine readers. There are many characters and many complications in the story, but like all others of Mrs. Alexander's stories the women are faithfully and capitally drawn and in great contrast.

The Chautauqua students and their friends are now deeply interested in the study of Grecian literature; one of the books of the course is entitled Callias, or the Fail of Athens. It has proven to be an exceptional book on historical and classic themes. The readers will therefore doubly welcome the author's new book entitled Pictures from Roman Life and Story. Rev. A. J. Church, M. A., is so well known as a writer on classic themes that a new book from his pen has all the attractions of a popular ro-mance, and yet the studies of ancient manners he puts forth have the weight of indisputable history. As professor of Latin in University college, London, he has become perfectly acquainted with the Latin tongue, and so well versed in Roman literature and history as to be recognized as an authority on such subjects. His story has not the dry enumeration of statistics and dates, but is written in an interesting stylesuch a story as you would write an eastern friend in describing the wonders of California, the sizes of its ranches, the products and the historical facts connected with the places you might visit. He depicts in that graphic and judicious style, of which he is master, the careers of the various emperors and the vicissitudes that befell some of the men who ever associated with them. His opening chapter, entitled, A Child of Fortune, describes Augustus or Caius Octavius. The second chapter is devoted to Maecenas and His Friends. The third-so interesting to the student-is A Day with Horace. Then in succession The Death and Burial of Germanicus, The Rise and Fall of Sejanus, The Deification of Claudius, The Great Fire of Rome, and The Last Hours of a Philosopher-that noble especially instructive and interesting. His pictures are invariably drawn with a certainty of erudition and a fidelity of color that are very charming. This book will be a source of pleasure and knowledge to most grown persons, and intelligent boys and girls with a taste for the better sort of literature will recur to it again and again with unfailing delight.

In one grand chapter The Death of Nero is given in a style displaying the wonderful sagacity of the author, in the judgment of the fate of that monarch. His tribute to the younger Pliny, whom he styled a true type of the Roman gentleman, will be of interest to all readers interested in educational work. To the Chautauquan student the last chapter, A Roman at Athens, will prove Fredericksburg bottled beer.

Mrs. Keats Bradford, a peculiar title, is written by an old favorite, Maria Louise Poole. Mrs. Bradford is the Louise Poole. Mrs. Bradford is the same woman who was the heroine of Roweny in Boston, where she appeared as a very clever country girl with a rage for art. She was quite attractive, too, largely because she was naturally superior to a great number of common people by whom she was surrounded. As a married woman, however, she is less interesting, partly because she is doubly married—wedded to her husband and also to her art, the first of which has the first place in her mind and her affection. Like a great many young women who take to some form of art, she has little mind and heart through which natural disabilities she brings herself occasionally to grief, besides making a great deal of trouble besides making a great deal of trouble for her husband and such other mem-bers of her family as retain interest in her in spite of her lack of any practical regard for them. Between the character and the story, however, there is a wide difference, for while Mrs. Bradford has become extremely expasperating, the author continues to write most amusauthor continues to write most amusingly and charmingly. To fully appreciate Mrs. Keats Bradford, the reader should first be sure to become acquainted with Roweny through the earlier book. Together these two volumes, besides pleasing every one who will read them, should do the world a great service if they fall into the hands of imaginative young women who think they have a divine call to some department of art, and that such a call is sufficient excuse for most appalling selfishness and heartlessness. The book might also save a great deal of trouble to estimable young men, as a warning that it is never well to fall in love with a young woman who imagines herself wedded to art.

The new Zigzag book, by Hezekiah Butterworth, is entitled, Zigzag Journeys on the Mississippi from Chicago to the Islands of Discovery. This volume has a special aim, as had the previous volumes of the series, to prepare its readers to discuss the meaning of the prevent world's fair of 1892 and the hisgreat world's fair of 1892 and the historical progress that the enterprise represents and illustrates. Hence it is a book of stories associated for the most part with the Columbian discovery, with Chicago and the Mississippi valley.

Mrs. Elizabeth W. Champney, the author of the charming and instructive Vassar Girls' series, has prepared a new volume for this year. The Vassar girls in the book travel through the east, from Egypt and the mouth of the Nile through Palestine to Jerusalem.

All the above mentioned books are for sale by Stoll & Thayer, on Spring street. near Second. BOOK CHAT.

Mr. Leslie Stephen's new volume of essays will be entitled, An Agnostic's Apology.

The Pearl Fisher is to be the title of the new novel just being finished by Mr. Robert Louis Stevenson. Manville Fenn's new book for boys is entitled The Rajah of Dah, and a similar book for girls is Miss Pringle's Pearls, by Mrs. G. Linneaus Banks. The literature of the stage will soon receive an addition in the shape of a new romance by David Christie Murray, the title of which will be A Rising Mr. Harold Frederic, a very interesting writer, has sent to press his new story of our civil war and of Ireland. The title is to be the Return of O'Mahoney. A posthumous novel of Walcott Balestier's will be printed as a serial in the Century magazine during the coming year; the title of which will be Benefits Forgot. A neat little book in a dress of red and white cloth, trimmed in gold and enti-tled the Redbird's Christmas Story, is by Mrs. Holmes. It is very pretty and will be one of the holiday attractions. One London firm since Charles Dickens' death, have sold 643,000 copies of Pickwick Papers; the profits on his works amount to £8000 a year. This is exclusive of the large number of editions issued by other publishers.

Henry Harris, an American living in Paris, is a noted historian on Columbus events. He has written several books on the life, discoveries and times of Columbus. Lately he was honored by receiving from President Carnot's hands the decoration of the Cross of the Legion of Honor.

Rev. James Stalker's new book, entitled The Four Men and other Addresses, will describe the man the world sees, the man seen by the person who knows him best, the man seen by himself and the man whom God sees, and also contains lectures on conscience, culture, youth, age, public spirit, humanity, etc., etc.

Some of the new books soon to be is sued are: The Story and Life of Mackay of Uganda, The Story of John G. Patton, both of which are capital books for boys; La Belle Nivernaise, by Alphonse Daudet; Zarbara Dering, by Amelia Rives; Irish Fairy Tales, introduction by W. M. Yeats; a chronicle of a quiet village, by Miss Evelyn Everett Green, entitled Miss Audrey.

Mr. Rider Haggard made a visit to Mexico for several months to acquaint himself with its earlier history and traditions, its ruins and their history. The result of his researches and imagination is now to take shape in a novel entitled Montezuma's Daughter, and is founded on incidents in the history of the old Mexican empire. It will be published first as a serial story in a noted London weekly.

An Attic Philosopher in Paris was issued several years ago, written by Emile Souvestre. The sale was large, and it has remained very popular up to the present time. There will be a finely illustrated edition in rich binding issued in time for the holiday trade, uniform with the illustrated edition of Colette. The cuts will be full page and vignette illustrations made by the French artist, Jean Claude, who also illustrated Colette.

The notable story on the subject of of the horse, entitled Black Beauty, which had such a phenomenal success and sale, is soon to be rivaled by a book devoted to the dog entitled Where is My Dog? by a clergyman named Rev. Charles A. Adams. The subject is treated in the same manner as that of Black Beauty, and is said to be a powerful appeal for humane actions towards man's most faithful friend and companion—the dog.

The use of Hall's Hair Renewer promotes the growth of the hair, and restores its natural color and beauty, frees the scalp of dandruff, tetter, and all impurities.

The Varied Career of a Chicago Candidate for Congress.

William Vocke, recently nominated for congress by the Chicago Republicans of the Fourth Illinois district, has figured creditably both in peace and war. He was born in Minden, Westphalia, in 1839, and received a good elementary education there. He came to America in 1856 and worked first in New York and in New England at whatever employment he could get. He reached Chicago in 1857, and met with many hard knocks in those early days. In 1858 or 1859 he became a carrier for The Staats Zeitung, then published by Captain George Schneider, and studied law at the same time under Professor, afterward Judge Booth. Subsequently he became collector for Ogden, Fleetwood & Co., but soon gave up that position to go the front for his adopted country. On the 16th of April, 1861, he enlisted in the Lincoln infantry for ninety days. As soon as that period of service was completed he enlisted with the Twenty-fourth Illinois. He served with that regiment during the war and was mustered out as captain. While attending to his military duties he managed to furnish the war correspondence for The Staats Zeitung, and when peace was restored he became city editor of that paper. In 1866 he was appointed clerk of the county court and served till 1869, when he entered on the practice of law He has been an eminently successful practitioner. Captain Vocke served one term on the board of education when Mr. Heath was mayor. He is a great student and is master of many languages. He has published a volume of English translations from the German poets, is corresponding member of several of the German literary and scientific societies and is in every sense of the word a ripe scholar. He lives in the Twenty-first lie Has Brains, Wealth and a Handsom Wife.

The new minister of Spain to the United States is a comparatively young gentleman, with a handsome wife and a brilliant record both in letters and di-Plomacy. He is of a very old and distinguished French family, his ancestors dating back to Hugo Raimundo Dupuy, who served with Godfrey de Bouillion in the crusades. The family took its noble title from its estate of L'Ome, which was turned into Spanish when this branch emigrated; so the minister's name is Henry Dupuy De Lome.

His father was an eminent writer and reformer, and was active in introducing steam machinery into Spain and establishing silk manufactures, for which he was awarded a gold medal. The son was born in Valencia in 1851, was grad-

In 1873 he was attached to the legation in Japan, in 1875 he filled the same position at Brussels, in 1877 he was made secretary of the legation at Montevideo, in 1880 at Buenos Ayres, in 1881 at Paris, and soon after became first secretary of the Spanish legation at Washington.

When Senor Barca committed suicide the chief duties devolved on him, and he performed them with such success that he has been intrusted with difficult negotiations in other countries and is now sent to the United States as full minister. He is also an author of some note, and master of English, French and
