IS THERE any reason to believe that a judicial candidate whom the people didn't want last year is now preferred by them to one who has given them ten years of honorable and illustrious service, and whose name is a familiar one throughout the entire state?

For Clerk of the Courts.
John H. Thomas, clerk of the courts, has been properly designated a true servant of the people. Like many other well-known residents of Lackawanna county he has worked his way to prominence from modest circumstances that bordered on obscurity. Left an orphan at an early age, he labored manfully for the support of a widowed mother, climbing up the ladder of success step by step until he is today one of the best known and popular of Lackawanna county's officials. Mr. Thomas was born in Carbondale and has been identified with politics in that thriving city for many years and has ever been found on the side of true Republicanism, having performed signal service for the party of protection and prosperity.

During his career in office in Scranton, Mr. Thomas has made many new friends by his courteous treatment to visitors and uniform politeness. The affairs of the office of clerk of the courts have never been more accurately conducted than under the administration of Clerk Thomas and his able assistants. The candidacy of Mr. Thomas received the hearty endorsement of the Republican county convention at the last meeting of the delegates, and there is no doubt that Republican voters throughout Lackawanna county will ratify the action of their representatives by increasing the past majorities given John H. Thomas.

BECAUSE GENERAL HASTINGS does not propose to lie about the condition of business today, the Democratic organs are calling him a calumny croaker. But even if he were that, he would be a great deal more acceptable to the people of Pennsylvania than a Democratic calamity breeder.

Facts That Talk.
In the Carbondale Leader of Oct. 17, in the report of a Democratic campaign meeting held in that city the night before, we find the following language attributed to Representative M. T. Burke: "The story circulated by his opponents that he had voted against a measure which was in the interest of the workmen (the free text book bill) was a lie; that he had supported that act, but had voted against all measures calculated to increase taxation and further burden the people of the state." This denial corresponds with that personally made by Mr. Burke in THE TRIBUNE office on Sept. 27, and also with one indicated in the following editorial paragraph published in the Scranton Truth of the same date:

Hon. M. T. Burke, the Democratic candidate for representative in the Fourth district of Lackawanna county, assures us that the resolution of the Republican convention arraigning him for opposition to the free text book bill did him an injustice, as he voted for that excellent measure. It was the obnoxious compulsory school law that Mr. Burke opposed in the house, and in doing so he deserved the thanks of his constituents. Fair play is a few that even politicians cannot ignore with impunity, no matter what party they may be anxious to glorify.

In view of these assertions, we feel constrained to call the attention of Mr. Burke and of the esteemed Truth to the following article from the Carbondale Evening Herald of April 1, 1893, under the heading: "Hon. M. T. Burke Interviewed—He Says Farr and His Friends Refused to Accept Proper Amendments and That If the Bill Becomes a Law It Will Prove Unsatisfactory Because It Does Not Provide What the People Want." The body of the interview is as follows:

Some interest having been manifested by our citizens as to why Hon. M. T. Burke voted against the Farr free text book bill, a Herald reporter last evening interviewed that gentleman as to his reasons for opposing the measure. In response to the question whether or not he was opposed to free text books, Mr. Burke replied:

"Decidedly I am not. On the contrary I am heartily in favor of the principle." "Why, then, Mr. Burke," queried the reporter, "did you vote against Mr. Farr's bill?" "Let me explain to you," was the answer. "In the first place," he continued, "the law as it now stands provides that the school boards may furnish free text books, but the Farr bill changes it so they shall furnish them. Now that may sound all right, but it is not, for the reason that the bill is not what it purports to be, a real free text book measure. It did not satisfy many of the members of the house who opposed it, simply because of its shortcomings. I was one of those who were dissatisfied with it simply on account of its imperfections.

"We thought, however, to remedy the defects and thus get the bill in such shape that we could conscientiously record our votes in its favor. To this end Mr. Hartley, of Fayette, on the second reading of the bill, moved an amendment providing that the state should pay for the books, thus really placing free text books within the reach of the people. The amendment was adopted, but Farr and his friends for some reason were not satisfied with the change, and during the adjournment for dinner they put their heads together and decided to reconsider the amendment for the purpose of knocking it out, which they did in the afternoon, and then talked on another amendment which provides that when the means of the district are exhausted twelve citizens can appeal to court and the court may, if it be adjudged proper, order an additional millage for the purpose of paying for the necessary books, so you see that the bill does not provide for free text books because the district must be assessed to pay for them, and may be assessed on the double at that.

"The changes myself and others who opposed the Farr bill desired to have made in it, would provide that the school boards should purchase the books and in the annual report which they are required by law to make to the court and state superintendents report the number of books purchased, which should then be paid for by the state on warrant of the auditor general to the state treasurer. But this simple plan did not meet the approval of the lobbyists of the book publishing firms who were working in the interests of the Farr bill. The fact that the book trusts wanted the Farr bill to pass, is another reason why I did not like the measure."

"Then you do not think the Farr bill is what its title would imply?" "Well," added Mr. Burke, "it is intended to be a small step in the direction of free text books, but it is by no means what the people want, and will, should it ever become a law, be found very unsatisfactory. Had Mr. Farr and his friends been willing to do what was right in the matter we would have made proper provision for the supplying of free text books at the expense of the state and would in a great measure have shut out the text book monopolies. I voted against the bill because, as I said, it did not provide what the people wanted, and other words it is a misnomer. Lytle, the father of the free text book bill of two years ago, denounced the measure in the severest terms."

The objections which Mr. Burke raised in the foregoing interview have been proved utterly groundless by the law's practical test. But why does Burke now pretend that he voted for the Farr bill? Why does he call those people liars who simply tell the truth about this forgetful statesman, and who, as the foregoing extract shows, have Mr. Burke's own word, of more than a year ago, that Mr. Burke of today is utterly mistaken in his statements.

We trust that the Scranton Truth, with its accustomed fairness, will set these facts right before its readers.

THE DEMOCRATIC campaign managers should call off their dollar-a-day campaign liar or else stand convicted of really wanting to see Bailey defeated. Some lies react.

A word of commendation for the action of Manager Lytle, of the Frothingham, is in order. While many may have been disappointed at the dismissal of the concert troupe on Wednesday evening, all must admit that the course of the manager of the house was perfectly proper under the circumstances. A theatrical troupe or concert company that attempts to introduce substitutes in place of advertised attractions should be made to understand that the system will not be countenanced in Scranton. The action of the management of the Frothingham in refusing to open the house to the New York Celebrities when it was discovered that the main celebrity was absent, was a move in the right direction, and one calculated to inspire the confidence of amusement seekers throughout the city.

IT WILL TAKE decidedly more than John B. Collings' transparent withdrawal to fertilize the Honorable John P. Kelly's desire for a re-election.

William S. Hopkins.
Probably no candidate in the field this fall has a stronger claim upon the voters of Lackawanna county than William S. Hopkins, candidate for register of wills. He is a brave soldier a true Republican, and ever a competent and faithful servant of the people when in an office of public trust. Although he is extremely modest upon the subject in conversation, Mr. Hopkins represents an element that is too often forgotten of late by political parties when rewarding this or that one for meritorious service. William S. Hopkins represents a class of patriots who were willing to lay down their lives if necessary in order that the principles of the best government upon the earth might be sustained. It is a class that is fast disappearing, and the honors to be accorded to the war veteran cannot be given too soon. In a few years more the flippant Demo rate press will have no more occasion to sneer at the "old soldier." Let us honor the veteran while we may. A vote for William S. Hopkins is a vote that indicates that true patriotism is not dead in Lackawanna county.

THE $200,000 recently taken from an Adams express car in Maryland has dwindled down to $20,000 already, and the Cumberland roller whose stocking contained a trifle over fifteen hundred is liable to demand change back from the company before his trial is over. For remarkable and rapid shrinkage, the great train robbery begins to resemble a western real estate deal.

THE MOSCOW Medium, which has been practically without a head for some time past, announces an official editor in the person of Gaige Dalrymple, a young resident of the place, who will hereafter direct its career. Mr. Dalrymple is a talented young man, and from present indications the Medium will boom under his management.

THESE SEEMS no question of the election of James C. Vaughan to the state senate. The majority, however, should be large enough to ensure the fact that Indiana-trial Pennsylvania has no use for free traders in any capacity.

THE WILLINGNESS of Candidate Singler to answer any and all open letters is probably accentuated by the fact that he doesn't expect ever to be in a position to keep his promises.

DEMOCRATIC SUPREMACY is not a necessity. And it certainly isn't a luxury. Are we not justified, then, in calling it a plain misfortune, and in seeking to have it corrected forthwith?

IT SEEMS strange that suicides will persist in jumping before locomotives to die at this season of the year when so many foot ball clubs are going into practice about the country.

LET THE Good Citizens' league flourish by all means. Judged from the standpoint of the league, Republican candidates would not suffer at the coming election.

THE FIELD OF POLITICS.

Here are some prominent figures from General Hastings' speech at the banquet. "In 1892 there was exported and sold by reason of the reciprocity treaties with other countries $20,000,000 worth of ham, bacon and lard than in 1891. The exports of beef products in the same year had increased just $12,000,000, and we exported just $18,000,000 more in live cattle, while the increase in the exports of certain other products was $25,000,000, and in corn $2,000,000. Now the benefit of the reciprocity of the United States can reach out into the markets of other countries and at the same time protect their own. And it is an opportunity that the Democratic party has deliberately sacrificed!"

Congressman Stone, Warren, according to a published interview, is inclined to the belief that Candidate Kulp will win in the Northumberland district. Ex-Senator Buckalew, the Democratic candidate, has been making a hard fight, but Mr. Kulp, who is young and aggressive, seems to have the best of the situation. Mr. Stone says much interest attaches to the contest of the anti-Adams-York district and that everything points to the election of the Republican candidate. "Joe" Sibley is making a peculiar fight in the Erie-Crawford district, but it would take a native to tell just what the outcome is to be.

The Republican state committee conducts from five to ten political meetings daily in various parts of the state outside of those held by General Hastings and the county chairman. Chairman Gilkinson has about 150 campaign speakers on his staff, and he flatters himself that with all the railway ramifications and the possibility of accidents not a blunder has occurred and no gatherings have been disappointed. All the speakers scheduled so far have appeared.

Representative Burke should attend a memory course before denying that he cursed and worked against the Farr free text book bill. Now that he has justified himself and won great popularity it is perhaps natural that he should regret his early indiscretion in voting on the wrong side to him no matter how he may deny the facts in the case—and it may do him a vast deal of harm.

The Harrisburg Patriot, Dem., evidently does not take much stock in Democracy's candidate for congress in this district. Each day it springs a new nickname. Now it calls him Merrifield, and grows sarcastic at his so-called veracity. What is the matter with the Patriot?

Cashier Ben Heywood, of Sharon, predicts that Sam Miller, the Republican candidate for judge in Mercer county, will defeat Judge Mohard by 2,000 plurality. Ten years ago Mohard defeated Miller for the same office by several hundred.

Governor McKinley, whose time is much taken up, will make two speeches in Pennsylvania for a certainty: one in Pittsburgh, the other in Philadelphia.

Tonight at Elmira, Galusha A. Grow will help ex-Senator J. Sloot Fassett open the Chemung county end of the Morton and Saxton campaign.

Edward Morrill is a Democrat this year because he did not have the nerve to say no when the tempters called. But as a victim, he will do.

Congressman Myron B. Wright is dangerously ill, of bronchial pneumonia, at Trenton, Ontario.

Abusing Captain John C. Delaney will not elect the Democratic ticket in Lackawanna county.

Stutterers.
Of course, nobody will be surprised to hear that 1.12 per cent. of the boys in the Boston schools are stutterers; but it will astonish most people to know that even so large a per cent. as 0.42 of the girls should also have this impediment in their speech. A stuttering girl is almost as paradoxical as a white blackbird.

Harrison as a Campaigner.
From the Hartford Courant.
General Harrison has been illustrating anew his remarkable talent for making short speeches that hit the mark. During a two-day tour in Indiana he made twenty-one of those addresses, and it is not on record that any one of them fell short of a success.

The World's Telegraph Lines.
From the Springfield Republican.
If any one doubts that America is a big country he has only to look in mind that by the latest reports there are 1,000,000 miles of telegraph in the world, and that of these America has 540,000 and Europe only 280,000.

A Bad Industry Active.
From the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.
Business of all kinds is reviving. Even the train robbers are making bigger hauls than they made last year.

FORGING AHEAD.

Is a Tip Top Newspaper.

Nanticoke News: "On Saturday last the Scranton Tribune came out with all its columns set by typesetting machines, which necessitated the retirement of several compositors. On that day The Tribune gave its readers twelve pages and it took occasion to felicitate itself on its success so far and promised to 'move ahead' until Scranton and its surroundings shall possess the truly representative morning newspaper that they have long desired. The Tribune is a tip top newspaper, and we wish it unbounded prosperity."

Enterprise, Push and Brain.

Olyphant Record: "The Scranton Tribune came out last Saturday in a new dress. Its appearance was truly metropolitan and the edition was one of the finest daily issues ever printed in northeastern Pennsylvania. The type was set by a typesetting machine of the most modern invention, which has involved an expenditure of thousands of dollars. The Tribune Publishing company has resolved to give its readers the best service and if its progress in the future is as marked as in the past few months, it will undoubtedly take the lead of all the dailies in this part of the state. The Tribune seems to be well supplied with enterprise, push and brains."

A Nod from the Sphinx.

From the Providence Journal.
Perhaps the denial of the report that the president had ordered all his subordinates in the executive departments to refrain from speaking in the campaign may be the breaking of the way for the intervention of the administration in behalf of its ally and valued supporter, the Hon. David E. Hill.

THE JUDGE.

I think about the nearest thing to heaven there could be.
Would be to be a Judge an' ride at one's own liberty.
He 'sides in his pocket an' wears the best of clothes.
An' the porters are polite to him no matter who else goes.
They know he's got the 'fluence if he hasn't got the 'tin'.
An' when they see him comin', they say, 'in.'

An' when he gets aboard the train to go off any-
You bet they hustle round and see he gets the 'softest' chair.
An' push to put his feet on an' a pillar for his head.
An' when he wants a sleeper gets the 'softest' feather bed.
For a Judge is mighty handy to stan' in with 'em, 'sides you see?
That's why he gets a ticket that says, 'free.'

"You ride free."

But when he gets to heaven—will his pals avail him there?
Will it get him through the portals and buy a golden chair?
When St. Peter takes the pasteboard an' scans it o'er and o'er,
Will he say, 'I'm glad to see ye, Judge,' an' open up the door?
Oh, no; he'll call the bell-boy, with a make-me-fired frown,
An' say: 'Gabriel, take this gentleman that says: Show him down.'

KNOWING HOW

Is half of success in everything—as well as in buying. Farming seems simple enough, but let a city man try to manage a farm and the odds are big that he'll ruin himself.

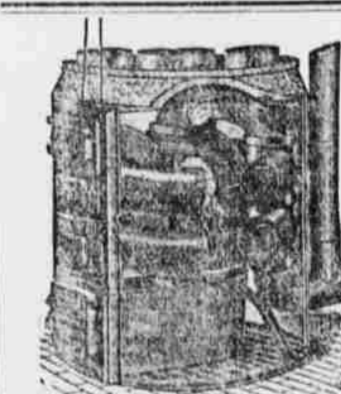

That's the way it is with buying. Take a parlor suit: there's the covering, the "stuffing," the frames and a dozen other things to think about.

A man can't know everything—and that's one reason why retail merchants are so essential. They help you in your buying—that is if they are the right kind.

It's their business to know such things and to give their patrons the benefit of their knowledge. You do your "knowing" by proxy—the retailer acting as your attorney. That's why it is so important WHERE YOU BUY.
