

West Side and City Suburban

DEBATE WAS A DRAW.

Spirited Contest Between Members of St. Brendan and John Boyle O'Reilly Councils, Y. M. C.

The first of the series of debates arranged to be given by the several councils of the Young Men's Institutes of this city was held last evening in Meade's hall under the auspices of St. Brendan council, No. 24. It was impossible to get inside the hall long before the hour of commencing the exercises persons being in attendance from all quarters of the city so great was the interest in the event.

The councils chosen to contest for supremacy on this initial occasion were the St. Brendan council of this side and the John Boyle O'Reilly of the central city. Each council select three gentlemen, tried in previous local efforts and not found wanting, and these gentlemen met to snatch the laurel of victory from the arena of debate. St. Brendan council was represented by Attorney William Sheehan, Harry Gallagher and Thomas McHugh. The champions of John Boyle O'Reilly council were John J. Hart, Attorney John J. Murphy and Anthony Brown. The subject for debate was "Resolved, That the government should control the railroad and telegraph systems."

Previous to beginning of the debate a short literary and musical programme was carried out. John L. Shea, of St. Brendan's, acting as chairman. The exercises consisted of vocal selections by John Stanton, Leo Crossin, Edward Hurst and Edward Walsh. Thomas Hurst read an original essay and William Larkin gave a special reading. This part of the evening's programme was heartily enjoyed but the interest was centered upon the debate. Each trio of debaters was encouraged by the sympathy and applause of their followers.

The chairman introduced the debaters in a felicitous manner, and the contest was on. Space does not admit of the giving of the arguments brought forward, but the debate was one of the best and most interesting ever heard in the city. Rev. P. J. McManus, of Green Ridge, T. J. Jennings and John H. Jordan, of the Scranton Truth, were the judges. Time passed and the judges did not report and the tension was at a high pitch. Rev. P. J. McManus, of Green Ridge, reported for the judges. It was "honors even." Messrs. Jordan and Jennings were divided and Rev. P. J. McManus decided not to take sides one way or the other. His reason for this neutral course he pronounced to give at the last debate of the series.

While the judges were consulting, Edward Walsh sang two selections and William Gilroy, in a spirited manner, recited "Woodley's Soliloquy" and "Sportacus to the Gladiators."

WEST SCRANTON INTERMENTS.

Two Well-Known Residents Laid at Rest Yesterday.

The funeral services of the late Mrs. Mary Morgan, of 318 North Summer avenue, were held yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the residence. Many of those who had known the deceased in life were present, in respect for the dead, and to fulfill the last and tributes of regard and esteem. The floral tributes were numerous and very beautiful. Rev. David Jones, pastor of the First Welsh Congregational church, was the officiating minister and preached the sermon. He was assisted by Rev. D. P. Jones, pastor of the Tabernacle Congregational church. At the conclusion of the services the remains, having been viewed, were borne to the Washburn street cemetery, where interment was made. The pall-bearers were: Alderman Owen D. John, Select Councilman William J. Thomas, Robert M. Edwards, Edward E. Davis, Howard S. Brown and Clement Marsh, sr.

At 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon the services which from the last act of regard and esteem for the deceased were held over the remains of the late Thomas M. Jones, at the residence, 1092 Eynon street. Rev. David Jones, pastor of the First Welsh Congregational church, officiated and preached the sermon, in which he often alluded to the life led by the deceased and the traits which had endeared him to many, and now had been rewarded. The remains were viewed by the large number of friends present, and then accompanied by a large cortege, were borne to the Washburn street cemetery, where interment was made. The pall-bearers were: Daniel J. Evans, Thomas Lewis, John Long and Reese Griffiths.

BACHELORS WILL ENTERTAIN.

Tomorrow evening an entertainment and social will be held at the Welsh Calvinistic Methodist church, on South Main avenue, of which Hugh Davies is pastor. The bible class of the Sabbath school, taught by Thomas R. Jones, have arranged the affair and, being all young men, they have styled it a "Bachelor's Entertainment and Social." An excellent programme has been prepared and a social session will follow the entertainment, with the serving of refreshments. Each participant on the programme is well known. Daniel Moses will act as chairman and the accompanists will be Mr. D. B. Thomas and Terwerth Prosser. The programme is as follows:

- Remarks.....Chairman
 - Piano Solo.....Terwerth Prosser
 - Vocal Solo.....Miss Margaret Jones

FUNERAL OF PATRICK M'GEE.

The funeral services of the late Patrick M'Gee, of 553 North Rebecca avenue, were held yesterday morning. A solemn high mass of requiem was celebrated at St. Patrick's church, whither the remains were borne at 9 o'clock. There were a large number of friends present and the floral tributes were very beautiful. The Catholic Mutual Benevolent union and the Diamond Mine Accidental fund, of which societies the deceased was a member, were largely represented and accompanied the remains to the Hyde Park Catholic cemetery, where interment was made. The pall-bearers were selected from the societies.

X-RAYS WERE USED.

The elbow joint of the right arm of William Tague, the four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. P. W. Tague, which was fractured by a fall from a chair, Sunday afternoon at his parents' residence, was successfully set by Dr. F. W. Lange, of the central city, shortly after the accident. So delicate was the work required to do the work, that it prevented a stiffening of the joint, that Dr. Lange yesterday morning exposed the arm joint to the X-rays and found that he had performed a perfect job.

PERSONAL MENTION.

BILLY BRYAN'S RIVAL.

Something About Congressman Dooliver, of Iowa, by Many Regarded as the West's Brightest Orator.

From the Illustrated American.

With the exception of the speaker, no man in congress is more famed for his witty epigrams and bright comparisons than Jonathan F. Dooliver.

It was he who described the attitude of the Democrats on the tariff question as that of men "emptying hard coal ashes in a high wind, with their eyes shut and their backs to the subject."

"Mugwumps," he said on another occasion, "treat their conscience like the stock in trade of a baking powder company; they solemnly insist that everybody's conscience has alum in it except their own."

When the Democrats during the pendency of the Wilson bill were trying to reach a conclusion, he told them that it would be "as easy to fit the hundred-headed dog of the ancient fable with a straw hat as to put an intelligible tariff platform under the feet of the democratic party. And it was he who first characterized Major McKinley as "the advance agent of prosperity."

A MAN OF BRAINS.

But Mr. Dooliver is more than a humorist. His speeches are noted for their breadth and thoroughness, as well as for their striking interest. He has spoken in nearly every large city in the country. Among his most noted addresses were those at the McKinley banquet at Madison Square Garden in 1896, at the Lincoln dinner of the Republican Club in New York, before the Boston Merchants' Association and to the veterans on Memorial day at Gettysburg and at Arlington.

Although still under forty, he has been, within the last ten years, three times chairman of the republican state convention of Iowa, and the speeches that he has made in congress would fill a large book.

There was a time in Mr. Dooliver's life when the future did not look so cheery as now. He had been graduated in 1875 from the University of West Virginia—of which institution, by the way, he recently declined an invitation to become president. He found it absolutely impossible to get a place to carry a living, even at manual labor.

Times were hard in his native state, and he did not seem to fit in anywhere. He accordingly pushed Westward and taught school in Illinois, one winter in the country and another as principal of a high school at Sandwich, having read law there and afterwards in Chicago and West Virginia.

He settled in Iowa and built up a thriving practice preparatory to coming to congress in 1889.

His ancestors were New Englanders, and so famous as sailors and fishermen in the Colonial days that a head-and-stem vessel of Massachusetts is still known as Dooliver's neck. This geographical name furnished much diversion for his enemies in 1894. During a severe storm that year some vessels stranded on the headlands, and some popular newspapers in Iowa, bearing in mind the strong prohibition leanings of the community in which the congressman lived, thought it a great joke to tell of the wrecks on the Massachusetts coast under such titles as "Four schooners went ashore last night on Dooliver's neck." They also hinted facetiously that that sort of thing was getting very common among statesmen of Dooliver's sort.

Mr. Dooliver's father, who is now eighty-one years of age, was an itinerant Methodist minister in West Virginia. He used to do his circuit on horseback, and relates many interesting incidents of the saddle-bag period of the church's history. He is now somewhat infirm in body, but keenly active in mind and thoroughly interested in everything. He went through the new library of congress a few days ago, and took great delight in reciting the whole of the passages there quoted in part when asked for his general opinion of the structure, he said: "I never expect to see anything so beautiful again until I stand in the house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." That is perhaps the richest tribute the library has had.

In his address in West Virginia the present representative acquired much reputation for other than statesmanlike traits. During one great June freshet he performed prodigies of valor in swimming out after logs which came down the river near his home, getting astride of them and steering them into port. This he did for several days; and when he left for the west a few months afterward some of the old settlers remarked that it was too bad to lose a boy who would make such a magnificent riverman if he would only remain there.

During the last campaign, Mr. Dooliver constructed a large tent which would accommodate 3,000 people. This he carried about from place to place in his congressional district and held meetings in it, at which local bands provided instrumental music and country glee clubs discoursed stirring songs. It is a signal success as a political speaker. In the campaign of 1884, his gift first attracted national attention. Mr. Blaine heard him speak several times, and was so much impressed that he made large prophecies for the young orator.

The congressman's popularity at home is in part attested by the fact that there have been named in his honor eight babies, a postoffice, a new variety of squash, and a lake. Fate has dealt harshly with two of these—Crover Cleveland abolished the postoffice, and the lake dried up. The seed from which the squash grew came from a congressional package which Mr. Dooliver sent to an Emmet county farmer.
