The parents of the child live only a short distance from the railroad track and yesterday morning the little fellow crawled up the embankment opposite the home and was sitting on the track watching No. 11 pass by, when a freight train came along on the new double track and struck the child, knocking him off the track. He is very dangerously injured and it is almost a miracle that he was not instantly killed. The little boy was standing on the extreme edge of the track when struck by the engine and this is given as the reason he escaped being killed.
