

CALE CALVE—NAME IN BIZET'S "CARMEN"

Brilliant Singer at Head of Notable Cast.

HEARD ENTHUSIASTICALLY

Naval a Fine Joke—Production Generally Noteworthy—Audience Most Impressive of the Season.

The incomparable Calve tyrannized last night over as brilliant an assembly as the American Capital can provide. Through an entire evening she made the role of Carmen her own, held her auditors in a skein like that which enmeshed Merlín, and then, triumphant and self-secure, bowed her smiling acknowledgments to the plaudits with which Washington's brief season of grand opera came to an end. It is an old story—as old as Calve's earliest assumption of the role of Carmen. But it has lost none of its power.

The audiences of the two earlier performances pale by comparison with this which responded to Calve's magic touch. Every seat was sold. In gallery, balcony, and orchestra circle the officials of the National and the deputies from the Fire Department were put to their wits' ends to keep the aisles clear. Everywhere were men distinguished by official position, and women adorned with elegant and rich toilettes.

As on Monday and Tuesday nights, the audience itself might have satisfied the general interest in the event.

In one box sat Justice and Mrs. Brown, with the clear-eyed young daughter of the President between them, Miss Roosevelt having just returned to Washington from Boston. Opposite were Senator and Mrs. Foster and a group of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas F. Walsh. Near by sat the ambassador from France with Mme. Jusserand; the Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Hitchcock; the ambassador from Mexico and his family; the minister from Belgium and Baroness Moncheur; the minister from Peru and Mme. Calderon; the delegate from Hawaii and Mrs. Kahanahouale; the Hon. Burke Cockran, who had just taken his seat in the House of Representatives. The parquet was filled with representatives of the army and navy, and of the most distinguished resident society which the Capital affords.

An Irresistible Personality.

But last night this assembly was entirely tributary. Before the first act had ended its attention had been allured to the stage. It was necessary only that Carmen should appear and sing. Her first song is short and her stay on the stage a matter of only a few minutes; but they sufficed to reveal the Carmen which the figure so willful, so pleading, so volatile, so insidious, so caressing, so vibrant with all the notes of human temperament, so graced by all the supple windings and turnings of a beautiful body, that her auditors, like the characters of the story, are irresistibly charmed. It will be noted that these qualities are all attributes of personality. In truth, Calve's Carmen is merely Calve's personality garbed like the cigarette girl of Merime's romance, and, for the moment, limited in action to the scenes of that tense and human story. This, of course, not the greatest acting; but the result is captivating. He is a rare old Puritan, indeed, who can view this Carmen—laughing, sighing, mischievous, irresponsible, untamed, and depraved—and weigh her precept against such a picture of thrilling life.

The opera "Carmen" is Bizet's only great work. He was a musician who worshipped Beethoven, Rossini, Meyerbeer, and Wagner alike. He suffered as a Wagnerian as only a Wagnerian in Paris at his day could have suffered. Yet except that he loved to give his music to the action of his opera, to imbue it with the bright sunlight and brave colors of Spain, he was in every one or two of his characters with musical motifs timidly expressed, he was not Wagnerian at all. In consequence, his opera is much more readily comprehended than a work which expressed deeper convictions and more earnest purposes. "Carmen" is more readily appreciated than "Hamlet."

Notable Cast Well Supported.

His singing roles are attractive, but not greatly impressive. That of Carmen, a mezzo-soprano, suits itself as fully to Mme. Calve's voice as the acting role suits itself to her personality. Last night the star sang exceptionally well, so that now and then the beauty of her voice rivaled the power of her acting. The second woman's role is that of Michaela. It was taken last night by Miss Levey, who, though her voice is singularly liquid and beautiful and who sings with much feeling. Unhappily, her second, the role of the lower tones, and all her notable songs suffered in consequence. Escamillo, a torero, is the chief male figure of the opera. M. Campanari sang the first and second, the second, the former appearing to less advantage than as Figaro, and the latter far surpassing his performance. M. M. Jacoby, in lesser woman's roles, were delightful. Subordinating, a pleasing bass, M. Guadagnoli, also a bass; M. Dufreche, and M. Masiero, tenor and baritone.

These principals constitute a wonderfully fine cast. It is pleasant to note that their support was generally worthy. The scenery was bright and well-painted. The costumes were rich. The orchestra played with fine effect although a trifle irregular. The chorus sang with a precision and confidence sadly lacking in "Carmen."

The production with which the season closed, then, was generally notable. But it will serve the end only to intensify the recollection of the single figure of Calve, adorned again as Carmen. As long as her voice and figure are what they are, and this marvelous actress chooses to embody the character, the role is distinctively hers and hers alone. Her performance was wisely placed at the end of the engagement. It was the crown of the engagement. A. D. A.

Senator Bailey Denies Story of Great Wealth

Texas Statesman Explains in Signed Statement Why He Appears to Be Creditor of the Houston Oil Company.

Some of the Texas newspapers have been commenting on the fact that the report of the receivers of the Houston Oil Company shows upon its face that it owes Senator J. W. Bailey $119,000. In some cases criticism has been made of Senator Bailey's rise to wealth. In reply to these articles Senator Bailey has issued a statement from Washington, which reads:

"The item of $119,333.70, which the receivers of the Houston Oil Company report as due me, does not belong to me and never did. In July, 1903, I went to New York to pay $62,500 to the Maryland Trust Company for the Kirby Lumber Company. At that time Patrick Calhoun owed the Kirby Lumber Company, according to his books, $119,333.70, and the Houston Oil Company owed Mr. Calhoun a larger sum."

"As the payment to the Maryland Trust Company was for the benefit of the Houston Oil Company, it was arranged for Mr. Calhoun to settle his indebtedness to the Kirby Lumber Company by a draft on the Houston Oil Company, which the Houston Oil Company accepted. This draft was turned over to the Maryland Trust Company as a part payment of the $62,500. As there was no officer of the Kirby Lumber Company then in New York, to indorse the Houston Oil Company's acceptance, in order to save the delay of sending it to Houston and returning it to New York, it was made payable to me and indorsed by me."

"I did not receive a cent of the proceeds, and absolutely no financial interest in the transaction."

It is further stated that Miss O'Brien, in consideration of the care and protection given her by Mrs. Triebler, agreed to make her the sole beneficiary of her estate. ## WANT A DIVORCE AFTER 50 YEARS

Moses Stein and Wife Weary of Matrimony.

FORMIDABLE BILLS FILED

"She Is Altogether a Great Fool," Says Husband in Describing His Grievances.

PHILADELPHIA, March 10.—Formidable bills of indictment were filed against each other in Magistrate Kochersperger's court yesterday morning by Mr. and Mrs. Moses Stein. They have been married for fifty years. He hits her with all bones of saying yesterday that they were tired of the trammels of matrimony.
Said the husband, who is eighty-four years old: "She called me a fool and she will not mind me. She will not let me say my prayers in peace. She encourages the children to disobey me, and laughs at my misdeeds. She is altogether a great fool."
In her own behalf Mrs. Stein pleaded thus:
"He makes me trouble all the time. This old man who is no good, and does nothing for his children or his wife. What is he? Worthless. He hits me with his cane and takes the stove from my room and puts it into his. I don't like him. The boys and neighbors come to have him arrested. He has no money for me and gives what he has away. He is a great fool. He has been assaulting her and would give her no money. Stein said that one of his sons, who is a doctor, and their other children supported the wife. When the magistrate dismissed the case Stein hobbled away, muttering disgustedly.
"A fine business for an old man. The boy don't want to give me money, and the fool wife she bothers me because of it. I wish I could go and die in Jerusalem. This country is no good. A free land, and damn can't hit his wife! The schatchen cheated me when I got her. And I paid him fifty roubles to fix the wedding too. I should like to make that schatchen live with her."
