

WASHINGTON, SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 4, 1904.

An Explanation

In response to numerous letters from our friends, asking why we have discontinued distributing programs at the park concerts every evening we beg to state that we have been arbitrarily prohibited from doing so by the authorities, and for no apparent reason.

We return thanks for the many expressions of appreciation from music lovers who have enjoyed the helpfulness of our service in distributing programs this summer.

THE SCOTCH WHISKY QUESTION

The subject of adulterated Scotch Whiskies is fiercely agitated by the press. Bold assertions are made about Scotch Whiskies, to the effect that inferior and fraudulent Whiskies, to the extent that the pure article does not exist in America. One paper, from hearsay, coolly informs its readers that only private persons can obtain it, who order it direct from abroad. Thus that paper casts the stigma on our merchants of being incapable of providing unadulterated Scotch Whisky. In this connection, however, it happens that parcels ordered from Scotland by private gentlemen and bottled here turn out the vilest trash, such that no honest dealer would offer to his patrons. In the midst of poor and bad Scotch Whiskies that may be offered in the market, there are in the hands of reputable merchants good and pure qualities. Writers not given to sweeping exaggerations can ascertain it and tranquilize the public.

Always selecting for his stock the purest and best of many samples he compared, and in the case of Scotch Whiskies, vigorously distinguishing best smoke from creosote fender, flatly rejecting the latter as a vile fraud.

CHRIS. XANDER, 909 Seventh St.

does supply the legitimate kind only.

In his price pamphlet of 1898 he says:

HIGH STANDING OF AMERICAN WHISKIES—Our American Whiskies are the peers of the best of all countries. In no other land are such aged Whiskies of purity and naturalness to be obtained, nor are they appreciated as at home. None of ours, excepting a very few cheap kinds, have their inherent flavor veiled by peaty or other substances like some imported Whiskies.

SCOTCH WHISKIES—Demand for Scotch Whiskies, constrains Chris. Xander to keep two kinds of these in stock. They are the choicest to be obtained at the price. As to the medicinal effect of Scotch Whisky it may be presumed that where our own Whiskies abound for choice and stand supreme, no physician would turn to the imported article.

The above is the opinion of Chris. Xander imports and bottles under his label and guarantee. The distillers of them think it beneath their dignity to lavishly advertise them as for many years their quality sells them readily. They maintain their prestige in the old country. They are:
