HERE'S SUMMER WORK

Suggestions for Centerpieces and Handkerchief Peckets.

There are a lot of pretty new things that girls who like fancy work can do at home this summer without being expert needle women. Fortunately, too most of these are small pieces, or those that do not require days of constant work to finish, so that the embroidery, painting, or bead work taken up as a pastime does not really become a burden, as is frequently the case when elaborate designs are commenced.

One of the newest and prettiest things for home decoration is the handtinted linen centerpices, with beautiful ly-shaded designs of poinsettias in the natural vivid reds, honeysuckles and luscious bunches of large purple grapes, l that are complete, with the exception of being outlined with a tone of silk embroidery that harmonizes with the color scheme of this design. The beauty of these artistic pieces for the table is principally in the painted or tintad flowers; for, of course, the needlework is exceedingly simple. They have this advantage, too, that the colors are guaranteed not to fade, and for this reason are bound to be popular and will be delightful to work on.

Quite as simple, and perhaps more interesting to work on, because they can be worn on gowns, are the new style pockets of white or tan-colored linen, decorated with eyelet embroidery in white silk or any shade to match the frock on which they are to be pinned. These new pockets have already become the craze among the women in the smart set, who are wearing them on their waists, skirts and jackets. They are made in several sizes, according to the purpose for which they are needed, the smallest being for handkerchiefs, the next to carry change when shopping, and the third, or largest, for a bag to carry one or two small toilet articles, or such necessities as are usually needed when spending a day away from home, says the New York Evening Telegram.

They can be made square, oblong, or round, according to the lines of the dresses on which they are to be pinned. nteresting to work on, because they

For one who wishes a glass of lemonade and quickly on a hot day, a lemon sirup is a great convenience. The lemonade can be made with no trouble by any one, if the sirup is always ready. Another advantage is that it may be prepared early while the lemons are still cheaper and better than they are during hot weather. One pound of sugar should be melted with enough water to keep it from burning, and it should be boiled until it will spin a thread. Into this should be turned the juice of a dozen lemons, and the thin rind of four lemons, and the boiling point. Strtain it and when it is cool bottle it. A tatblespoonful of this lemon sirup in a glass of water is sufficient for a tumbler of lemonade, and it is good lemonade, too. No one could find a more convenient way of preparing lemonade to carry to a pienic.

Of course she is. Could there be any question among right thinking folk? In these days it is rather fashionable to deride marriage. Even married people themselves occasionally scoff at the "holy state," and unmarried folk try to find advantages in single blessedness, independence, freedom, loss of the center.
