Washington fans are never fatally shocked by the ascension of a local pitcher, but even the long-suffering and punk-ball bearing capitalities weren't quite ready for the event so early in the game. Falkenberg relieved C. Smith in the first game, after the first two men in the first inning had singled.

Captain Ganley's slashing single to right was the first Washington hit of the day.

C. Jones made a pretty running catch of D. Jones' fly in the second round.

Yesterday must have been a gala day for those far-seeing fan-managers who would put in a new twirler every time the visiting team makes a run.

Judging from Detroit's experience with Jennings, the only man who can make a pennant winner out on the Nationals next season is the long-haired, eccentric band leader of many motions, Mr.

It looked as if Cobb were very much out when he was called safe stealing second, in the third inning, of the first. His Nemesls came a few moments later, when he tried to cop third, and was caught in the act. Further retribution overlook Rossman, who had reached second while Cobb was being killed, was thrown out trying for third.

O'Leary's drive in the third may have been too hot for Del, but there wasn't much excuse for Milan's failure to handle it.

Tyrus Cobb, who is picked to finish at the head of the American League batters, played the game for all he could get out of it yesterday in the first skirmish he tallied four nits, four stolen bases, and was responsible for Blankenship had a bad day. In the first session D. Jones crossed the pan when he dropped the ball, and in the next inning he fumbled, allowing the same runner to reach second. Furthermore, he threw cold water on at least two embryo double plays.

The world is cruelly unjust at times. A man attempted to coach the Nationals from the bleachers much less vigorously than Jennings was cnouraging the Tigers, but he was ejected from the grounds amid no little excitement.

Tony Smith was right to the fore with electric field work in the fifth when he grabbed Schmidt's hot liner and maintained it to Blankenship in time to Mill Coughlin.

In the second half of the fifth of the first game Blankenship beat out an infield hit. While the Tigers surrounded Hurst, putting up stong pleas that it was a foul, which seemed the right answer, Blankenship showed rare judgment and stole second, where there was no one on the bag to stop him.

Warner ran close to the grandstand to wing D. Jones' foul in the eighth of the first.

During Oberlin's tenure of office in in the ninth of the first Rossman fanned, Coughlin flied, and Schmidt was easy on an infield grounder.

The third round of the second was pad going for Washington. Blankenship lost a chance for a double play, O'Brien made a hum throw, and the whole outfit went into the air.

The blearcherites found more amuse-ment in a war balloon that appeared in the eastern sky about this time, and the eastern sky about this time, and when that attraction had disappeared below the horizon they turned their attention to two unfortunate individuals who had inadvertently wore straw hats.

The sixth inning of the second game was all Kay's. His lightning return of a fly caught Schaefer at third. Brilliancy on the National's part oft-times comes from unexpected and bush league

Cobb attempted to get home from third in the seventh of the second after O'Brien had caught a fly in deep short, and died in the attempt.

Delehanty started the rally in the seventh that prevented a shut out. He singled, Kay reached first on a questionable hit, and Del stole second and went home on O'Leary's wild throw to first to stop O'Brien.

In the fourth Washington had a really lucid interval and played nervy ball. Detroit was retired after Cobb had struck out and Rossman flied with the bases full.

That Detroit is Washington's choice for the American pennant was plain yesterday. When the announcement was made from the press box that Cleveland had dowred the Athleties a wild cheer went up, and as Jennings approached the players' bench at the close of the eighth he was given an evaluation that outclassed the greetings frequently tendered young Mr. Johnson Hughey bowed his acknowledgements.

After Years of Faithful Service Promotions Are Secured.

No Charges of Favoritism Are Heard in Army Circles.

In the interesting game of "leap-frog," as applied to army promotions, he who fumps last, jumps best, as demonstrated by the promotion of Lieut. Col. W. W. Wotherspoon, of Washington, to the grade of brigadier general, and the pronotion of Brig. Gen. William P. Duvall to the grade of major general. Both have been the victims of circumstances in their respective branches of the army-infantry and artillery-hundreds Practice With Western of officers having been promoted over their heads from time to time.

Now, at one notable jump, Colone Wotherspoon has reached his own, after years of hard and faithful service, and General Duvall has achieved his proper grade after two notable jumps, the first year ago, when he was promoted from major to brigadier general, over the leads of several hundred majors, lieuenant colonels, and colonels, and now, when he has been promoted over six brigadier generals, all but two of whom are junior to him in age.

No Charges Likely.
