Mrs. Amanda G. Thomas First to Make Home in That Section.

If Mrs. Amanda Gertrude Thomas, of Takoma Park, lives until September next-and there is every probability that she will see many more Septembers-she will have passed the seventyeighth milestone in her life.

Oldest resident of Takoma Park, Mrs Thomas lives in the first house completed in that suburb. She has seen the forests fall around her home and has witnessed the coming of all residents about her. She is well known and well beloved by all with whom she is acquainted.

In 1883 when Mrs. Thomas, with her husband, settled in Takoma Park, forest fires were common, and on one occasion, in 1885, a fire which had traveled several miles from the northeast, came near wiping the village which had arisen, off the map. A back fire, started by some railroad men who were working near, was all that saved the scattered houses of the locality.

Native of New Jersey.

Mrs. Thomas relates that she and other women sallied forth to fight the fire, armed with wet blankets and axes Thick growths of underbrush, which were dry, made the fire difficult to conquer. At that time there was but one road in Takoma Park, the old turnpike, road in Takoma Park, the old turnpike, since named Carrol avenue.

A member of the Wilson family, one of the oldest in New Jersey, Mrs. Thomas traces her ancestory back to the very earliest settlements in the colony of New Jersey, county Sussex. Her great-grandfather Wilson was an officer in the British army during the French and Indian war, and, as a re-ward for bravery and wounds received at the battle of Fort Ticonderoga, King George III of England, granted him large holdings of land in Sussex county, New Jersey, which place has since been the home of the Wilson family. Born in 1833, during the first admin-istration of President Jackson, Mrs. Thomas as a young woman taught in the schools of Sussex county, later re-moving to Iowa, where she married Mr. Thomas. Going back to New Jer-sey, she and Mr. Thomas after a year removed to West Virginia, later coming to Washington.

Talks of Old Times.

Mrs. Thomas, whose memory remains remarkably clear, talks of the days when slaves were freed in New Jersey, and of the days before railroads, when the marketing from the Wilson estate was carried to the old town of Newburg, forty miles distant, oxen being used to draw the huge covered wagons. While Mrs, Thomas is the last of her immediate family, several of her rela-tives are well along toward the cen-tury mark. She lives alone, her husband, who was prominent in the "log cabin" politics at Takoma Park during Benjamin Harrison campaign dying on the day President Harrison was inaugurated, March 4, 1889. By all the older citizens Mrs. Thomas is the older citizens Mrs. Thomas is familiarly called "Grandmother." Mrs. Thomas has but one child, Mrs.

Augusta Wilson Long, whose husband is a mining man in Nevada. Mr. Long was the discoverer of the greatest natural bridge in the world, in San Juan county, Utah, and in 1908 President Roosevelt officialy proclaimed that the bridge should be called the "Mighty Augusta," in honor of Mrs. Thomas' daughter. The bridge is so large that
