

BROADWAY TO PARIS' MUSICAL REVIEW IS WARMLY RECEIVED

Gertrude Hoffman and Winter Garden Company Pack the Belasco Theater.

Beyond a doubt the musical review, "Broadway to Paris," in which Miss Gertrude Hoffman is supported by the Winter Garden company...

The scenic effects did not work as smoothly as they might on the opening night, but these defects are expected at the initial performance of such an elaborate production.

Show Has Been Toned Down. The much talked of company and principals, for reasons best known to themselves, though easily guessed at by Washington theatergoers, had toned down a bit the production which made New York sit up and gasp for a time.

Surrounding Miss Hoffman is a series of stars of lesser magnitude, which received its part of the applause at every appearance.

Miss Hoffman's dances were the feature of the entertainment. A more beautiful stage setting than the opening of the second act, when she appears in the spectacular dance, "The Garden of Girls," with a corps of dancers of the Royal ballet, cannot be imagined.

Costumes Are Scanty. A shiver passed over the quarter-to-twelve audience as it passed out of the Belasco into a light snowstorm after the performance, however, when the scanty costumes worn by both principals and chorus were remembered.

"Broadway to Paris," among other things, is a review of the spectacular type, and is filled with vaudeville specialties. The Charles Ahern company bicyclists, the Skeltons, and Pietro, an unusually clever accordionist, were among these.

Representatives of the St. Alloysius' Truth Society were present at the opening performance, but it is unlikely that anything coming under the ban of the organization was noted.

Carpenter Is Accused Of Passing Bad Checks. Guy F. Gill, a carpenter, twenty-four years old, was taken to Upper Marlboro, Md., this morning by Sheriff Suits to answer a charge of having passed three alleged bad checks.

Concert Tomorrow. U. S. Soldiers' Home Band Orchestra, Stanley Hall, at 3:30 o'clock.

HUGHEY JENNINGS AT CHASE THEATER

Leader of Detroit Tigers Heads Bill of Merit With Several High Class Numbers.

Hughey Jennings may never win any pennants or world's series as an actor, and never get out of the second division as a singer, but it is safe to say there was never an aspirant for histrionic honors who received a more vociferous ovation than that accorded the great leader of the Detroit Tigers at the opening performance of this week's bill at Chase's Theater.

Appearing in a baseball sketch, it couldn't be anything else with Hughey as the star, he is assisted by Ben Smith, a black-face comedian, who sings a number of ballads and ragtime songs and helps Jennings in his "vocal" numbers.

A curtain speech was decried by the many friends of the three-time pennant winner, and his response was pleasing.

Running second to the Tiger leader for the honor here were two, one which has lost none of its charm, was that of Agnes Scott and Henry Keane, entitled "Drifting Miss Scott has a personality, and is an actress of the Annie Russell type. The sketch is handsomely staged, and the bright bits of blended comedy and sentiment make it a most pleasing one.

ELTINGE'S "WIDOW," AFTER THREE YEARS, IS STILL PLEASING

Clever Female Impersonator Is Well Supported in Comedy at Columbia.

A regulation offering of "music with comedy," to quote the program, which can come back three times, surely possesses some feature or features of actual laughing and interest value.

On every page of every Tuesday morning dramatic column in every paper will be found the word pulchritude in some form—it cannot be got away from—some aversion to the word beauty, and an effort to show that one knows how to spell the other, tempts its use.

The three young women most concerned in the affairs of the widow are Margaret Leffingwell, played this year by Belle Adair; Tessie Danforth, played by June Mathis, and Ivy Tracy, played by Louise Orth.

Langton Wells is acceptable in the head of Edward Garvie, Tut Hill Lettingwell is safe with James Spottwood, and Charles Butler and James Sullivan are as funny as ever in their respective roles of the college chaplain and the hotel detective.

neck and arms of exceeding many curves. Julian Eltinge deceives the eye with exceeding tact, the picture of the lovely widow is flawless, but the art of the whole thing lies not entirely in the perfection of the womanly charms.

The winks, the walk, the beguiling smile, which mocks and haunts, the lapses into masculinity, the psychological moment—these are just a few of the meanings for the success of this impersonator's portrayal.

Songs and setting have lost none of their charm, and the strains of "Don't Go in the Water" and "The Fascinating Widow" fall pleasantly upon the ear.

"ONE DAY" OFFERING ACADEMY PRESENTS

Capacity Audience Sees the First Production of Good Play.

"One Day," a sequel to "Three Weeks" and the natural heir to all the public interest in some of the qualities of the latter production, is to be seen at the Academy this week. It is by the well-known Elinor Glyn, whose facility in measuring the ebb and flow of emotionality in periods of time is equaled only by her knack of attracting the public.

After a turbulent tale of romantic misadventure the pair commits suicide, finding life without each other unendurable. Robert Brister is set as the crown prince, and Miss Marion Hutchins displayed emotional power in the role of Opal, Jack Lewis, as Bobby Ramsey, and Jessie Hall, as Lady Alice, do some excellent work in providing comedy relief to the show.

The striking feature of the Cosmos Theater bill this week is its variety of entertainment, all of it of the better class.

"Athletics of the highest order are represented by the famous sensational Carl Dammann Troupe of seven performers, whose fame was widespread even before they became big features of the Barnum & Bailey circus.
