FRIDAY THE 26TH A DOUBLE JINX? SAY, FORGET IT!

Is Friday, the 13th, or its first cousin, Friday, the 25th, a blackbrowed jinx?

Not so you could notice it. The first named is President Wilson's lucky day, and the latter should prove beneficent for the great parade.

President Wilson's intimate acqualitance with the hoodoo number started at the baptismal font. In bestowing upon him the name "Woodrow" his parents assured thirteen letters in his cognomen. Over and over again, fortune and favor have come to the War President on the 13th and on Friday, or on the conjunction of the two.

the two.

The latest piece of "luck" was when President Tener, of the National League, sent him a pass-book numbered 13.

Cast your eyes on these facts as to the Liberty parade. There are thirteen letters in those two words. It is to be held on Friday, the 26th, the only multiple of thirteen in the

The old jinx is due for an awful walloping.

GENERAL MUST STAND TRIAL BY COURT-MARTIAL

MINEOLA, N. Y., April 26.—Brig. Gen. Arthur B. Donnelly, commanding troops at Camp Mills here, today declared that he would not resign under charges. He will shortly be tried before court-martial on charges of playing cards for money in his tent and drinking liquor with junior officers during the games.

The charges were preferred while General Donnelly and his regiment were at Fort Sill, Okla. Influence is known to have been brought to bear on Secretary of War Baker to have the charges dropped, but the Secretary has refused to interfere. A general officer, he told members of Congress who appeared onbehal f of General Donnelly, will receive the same measure of justice that is accorded the rawest recruit.

DANIELS AND BAKER ADDRESS PUBLISHERS

Do You Know the Charming Custom of Leaving a May Basket

on your sweetheart's door step, May Day morning? In many sections of the country, May morning finds lassics—large and small—tagerly looking on their door step to find their May Haskets. Where flowers bloom early the baskets were filled from the fields and flower gardens and left in person on the door step of the maiden nearest the giver's heart.

We have the most attractive assertment of baskets, long handle ones in various shapes. Graceful willow ones in several sizes that look as if they were made to boid yellow daisies or violets. There are larger handsomet ones, with metal linings. A lovely one is of lacquered wicker embossed with bunches of pink roses, the green, lining shows through the wickermo prettler May Basket could be imagined than one of these filled with long stemmed pink roses and ferns.

There are various styles and sizes, understely priced from 40c up.

Kate Hinton Visits the Cold Storage Vault

Yesterday I went downtown to buy navy blue tulle to make a new scarf like the lovely ones you see on the smart-looking girls on F street, and really they are such becoming things that I wonder the fad has not grown faster. All you need is enough tulle to twist about your neck and hang in ends to your knees, with a big silk tassel to tip each end. You know the becomingness of soft tulle about your face, so take the hint and make yourself one.

As I entered the store I remembered that I wanted to send the furs down for storage, and I just decided that I would take a look at the storage vaults. Perhaps your idea of a vault is like mine was—that a vault is a dark, damp, dirty-looking place; but in the future I will always think of a vault as a big, roomy place, all white enamel, with rows upon rows of pegs and racks, for in this modern fireproof vault every individual garment has its own hook, peg, or rack, whether it be muff, or coat, or hat.

There are three floors in the vault, and I saw all kinds of furs, plumes, velvet gowns, fur hats and overcoats hanging safely and securely in neat rows. Rugs were rolled on long racks, fur rugs and steamer rugs hung across the rails, and every article is so carefully labeled that it can be located within three-minutes.

When I went into the entrance hallway the attendant held out a big warm coat for me to slip on, and I thought he was joking, but when we stepped into that spotless vault that was several degrees below freezing, I was thankful for the coat.

The attendant explained to me that when you order articles stored an auto is sent for them, and in it is placed specially constructed fibre trunks fitted with removable trays, which are brought to your door and your garments are placed in the tray, taken to the trunk and securely locked up, not to be opened until they reach the vault. There each piece is numbered, thoroughly cleaned by an electric process, and hung on specially made hangers, with ample room between each garment.

A big lump came into my throat when I saw the number of dress uniforms of our soldiers and sailors hanging in a long row, their gold lace shining bravely, just as their owners are now going bravely into battle for you and for me, and there was a big prayer in my heart that every uniform will again be worn by its owner soon, "When Sammy comes marching home."

Life is certainly made easier for the housewife now, when she no longer needs to worry about storing furs and woolens and rugs throughout the Summer months, but has only to phone downtown and have a messenger call and take them away, and keep them ont of her way until they are needed in the Fall.

Next time you are downtown take my advice and visit the Cold Storage Vault and you will not have one more day of worry about where to place your valuables for safety from the Summer moths, and that is surely a friendly hint from KATE HINTON.

In the Wardrobe of Every Well-dressed Young Woman

There should be a Tailor Suit, and an ever-ready Street dress of dark silk or serge.

Tan and Navy are the popular shades of the season, and we are showing a splendid assortment of jaunty suits in these shades.

There are many models to choose from, in belted, or straight coats, Etons, and the modish military models. Many of the blue suits are braid bound, as is also a suit of tan Covert cloth, which has its binding of brown silk braid, with brown bone buttons for finish.

Ripple-tail coats with linings of the stylish coin dotted silk are much liked. The model suits, the one-of-a-kind ones, have been spe-

The model suits, the one-of-a-kind ones, have been specially priced, and the variety of styles, materials, and prices is wide enough to please all young women.

Street Dresses of Serge, Taffeta, Foulard and Jersey

So many days in this changeable climate of ours demand a dress with warmth and service combined, and we have the loveliest ones in almost all styles and color combinations.

There are Navy Serge Dresses, made entirely of serges, or combined with foulard. One Navy Dress has a touch of battleship gray and artillery red for trimming.

Particularly stylish is a Biege Poiret twill of finest quality, with loose panels back and front, bound with satin. The loose waist finished with a white satin collar.

The Taffeta Dresses are in all shades of blue, from Copenhagen to Navy. One model in Navy, has wool embroidery in taupe shades elaborating the indescribably draped skirt, while a silver cord and tassel adds tone to the waist.

Of Navy Georgette there is a Dress trimmed with wide

Of Navy Georgette there is a Dress trimmed with wide girdle, pointed cuffs, and odd collar of blue and white polka dotted foulard, with the popular tunic skirt inished with the foulard.

There are others of the Tan shades, wistaria, gray, green and brown, all of them combining youth and beauty, plus that indefinable something called smartness.

In Foulard and Georgetle there are many combinations in many shades.

Wool Jersey Dresses in blue, gray and lan, but so popular have they been this season that it has been difficult to keep this stock complete.

THE PRICES ARE MODERATE TO SUIT ALL YOUNG WOMEN.
