The running races at Cincinnati are exciting a great deal of interest in that city. Yesterday the bay colt Herzog, made the finest time on record, a mile in 143%. This time is second to that of the famous winner of the English Der-by-Gladiator, which was 1,39% but the veracity of the report has been questioned by sporting men in general. The crowd in attendance has been very great, Gens. Phil. Sheridan and Breck-inridge, during the first race, were on the judges' stand, and got along together quite amicably. They might have compared notes as to their experience at Stone River, and on other historic fields where they faced each other, each leading a division of braves, but we did not hear that they did so. THE citizens of Cleveland are making great preparations for building a tunnel out into the lake for the purpose of supplying them with fresh water. The plan is similar to that of the tunand in Chicago, though it will not be as expensive. The people of Chicago find that the supply obtained from their water works is insufficient, and already begin to agitate the subject of bulld-ing another in a different part of the PERSONS who are contemplating a tour overland to California as a pleas ant summer excursion had better wait awhile before carrying their purpose into effect. The fare from Cincinnati to San Francisco is $258 70 in currency. This is an outrageous sum. The same amount of money would pay for the first-class passage, berths and meals of two persons to Europe in any but the two most expensive lines of steamers, and would nearly meet their demands That there will be a speedy reduction in the overland railroad rates is quite certain. The Pacific Mail steamers have already lowered their terms, while negotiations are going on between the Central and Union Pacific roads by which fares will probably be fixed at Francisco. The distance between those points is about 1,950 miles, and at the amended rate passengers would pay over five cents a mile, which is double the average charged for through tickets Niphon. Here should we locate our advance, and throw up our outer works. Here should we establish the base from which to operate against Asia. Here, by stretching out one hand, could we grasp Pekin, while with the other we could possess ourselves of the treasures of the islands of the East Indies.'

"Let Chicago seize upon Jeddo. By this movement, we would flank Russia in the Asiatic march, place ourselves in the rear of Europe, and possess ourselves of the future domain of that empire which 'westward takes its way.'"

Mr. Smith must see in this nothing less than an astute and deep-laid plan for the invasion of England. The British empire is to be attacked in the rear; a empire is to be attacked in the rear; a flank march from Chicago is to circum-vent John Bull; here Englishmen may Sumner's speech, and of their refusal to pay our national debt. A CHICAGO correspondent writes to the Evening Mail: The people of the West, as the gentle readers of the Evening Mail have often read in legends of the frontier, are fond of the sports of the chase, and so Chicago men take a pride in the use of firearms. Our policemen have an especial taste for this amusement, and to gratify the noble fellows, who are handsomely supported at public expense, on account of their good looks and high moral characters, they are all supplied with handsome levolvers to use whenever the sweet fancy strikes them. They complain, however, that they are losing their skill on account of the discretize infrequency of opportunities the sweet fancy strikes them. They complain, however, that they are losing their skill on account of the disgusting infrequency of opportunities gusting infrequency of opportunities for shooting at people. Sometimes they go for days without firing at a man and can only keep their triggers in practice by putting bullets through people's pet dogs who chance to loll on the steps of their master's houses. It is true that they can always have the privilege of knocking down people with their clubs and they admit that this is some comfort, as it keeps their muscles in training a little. But they like to use their handsome revolvers, and do it whenever they get a chance at some drunken they get a chance at some drunken the policeman must have some game, and so it is all right.
