CROP PROSPECT.

plendid Fields of Wheat-Magnificen Outlook for Wealth-Western Kans in a Bad Way-Third Term Polities. linois letter in the New York Sun.

In passing across the continent and ack, I am impressed with three thingsthe spendid wheat crop, the opposition of the voting Republicans to Grant's candidacy, and the bad agricultural outlook for poor Kansas.

The wheat crop in New York and may places a half more wheat is in than ever before. Vanderburg county, Indiana, in which Evansville is situated, is almost wholly given up to wheat; Posey county is one continuous wheat field, and Gibson county, north of Evansville, will produce 3,000,000 bushels. Southern Illinois is almost untirely surrendered to wheat. The millers say that Madison county will produce 2,700,00 bushels this year, St. Clair, 2,250,000, and Jersey and Green counties, and, in fact, all of Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, and Missouri, in the same proportion.

Old prairie bottom lands around Champagne, and Tuscola, and Effingham, on which wheat never used to be raised, are now loaded down with it. A dozen crops of corn have reduced the rich alluvial prairie soil so that it now yields tremenof corn have reduced the rich alluvial prairie soil so that it now yields tremendous crops of wheat where ten years ago nothing but corn or wheat straw could be raised. The wheat in Ohio and Michigan could not look better, and everywhere the acreage is increased. The only damaged wheat to be found are a few pieces of winter wheat in Wisconsin and Northern Iowa, which have already been plowed up and spring wheat substituted, and in Western Kanass.

Last apring I estimated the growing ern Kansas.

Last spring I estimated the growing wheat crop for the Sun at 470,000,000 bushels, and the crop measured up about that. This year I estimate the growing wheat crop at 550,000,000 bushels. All dealers crop at 550,000,000 bushels. All dealers and wheat brokers who have looked over the country as I have agree with me in this estimate.

the country as I have agree with me in this estimate.

How about Kansas?

The wheat in Kansas is good up to twenty-five miles west of Topeka, and then it begins to be bad, and grows worse and worse, till it becomes worthless at Hayes City, which is on the 100th parallel west of the rain belt. Crops west of Aberline and Salina in Kansas are a failure three years out of five, and the people might as well know it. I love Kansas and admire the pluck of her public-spirited people; but the truth must be told. Hereare some hard facts gained from personal contact with a thousand farmers who have been ruined by going too far west in Kansas. Kansas west of Salina is in a bad way, and always will be. Her people are suffering, and will always suffer until they leave the desert country west of the rain belt. The other day I met John and James Larradeer jornerly of Racine, Wis. They made a dreadful failure out on the Santa Fe Boad, and came back with G. P. Richardson, all broken up. They report no crops west of Larned, even last year. Mr. Elmer Everett, from Knoxville, Ill., went to Reno county, Kansas, lost four crops in succession by 'hoppers and drought, and then returned to Illinois to start again in life.

Dr. C. M. Zigler went to Western Kan-start again in life. Dr. C. M. Zigler went to Western Kansas from Berlin, Wis. The bad country ruined him. He told me 1,205 farms were for sale for taxes in Peabody.

S. F. Mennes went from Elmira, N. Y., to Western Kansss, and though he worked hard, he did not have $5 worth of crop in Liver Regulator or Medicine, five years. He was reduced to begging corn,like many of his neighbors, and then corn, the many of his neighbors, and then left Kansas.

I meet emigrants every day on the cars returning from Western Kansas ruined and broken up. Something should be done to stop the unprincipled railroad agents from alluring farmers in the East to certain beggary in Western Kansas, out beyond the 100th parallel. Starvation awaits any emigrant who goes west of Hayes City on the Kansas Pacific Railroad, or Fort Larned on the Atchison, Topeka' and Santa Fe.

I have voted for General Grant twice for President, and what I now say I say reluctantly. There is a tremendous feeling against Gen. Grant's third-term candidacy among voting Republicans all over the country. I hear dozens of sound Republicans av daily.

the country. I hear dozens of sound Republicans say daily:
"I will throw away my vote before I will vote for Gen. Grant. He has had enough. We are tired of him. If the politicians foist him upon us voters again we will have to teach them a lesson by letting him be defeated."

The friends of Grant are now talking short carrying a Southern State. I was plicity in early life. This man has conhas his conceited bashfulness to be "taken out of him," as the phrase is. You have a disquiet which you try to hide, and you put on a haughty, guarded manner. You are suspicious of the good will of the company round about you, or of the estima tion in which they hold you. You sit mum at the table. It is not your place to put yourself forward. You are thinking about yourself; that is, you are suspicious about that personage and everybody else; that is, you are not frank; that is, you are that is, you are not frank; that is, you are not well-bred; that is, you are not agreeable. I would instance my young friend Mumford as a painful example—one of the wittiest, cheeriest, deverest and most honest of fellows in his own circle; but, having the honor to dine the other day at Mr. Hobaush's, where his excellence the Crimean minister and several gentlemen of honor and wit were assembled, Mumford did not open his mouth once for the purpose of conversation, but aat and ate his dinner as silently as a brother of La Trappe. Trappe.

He was thinking with too much distrust of himself (and of others by consequence.)

When Mumford is an honest fogy, like some folks, he will neither distrust his best or his converse as himself, he will

The wheat crop in New York and Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, Illinois, Indiana and Missouri, has not looked betrer in twelve years past. In fact, within the last fwelve days I have been in each of these States, and I have not yet seen a single poor piece of wheat. Then, again, the acreage is alarmingly increased. In may places a half more wheat is in than ever before. Vanderburg county, Indiana, in which Evansyille is situated, is almost the strainer, your part and business in society to make people as happy and as easy as is to make people as happy and as easy as you can; the master gives you his best wine and welcome; you give, in your turn, a smiling face, a disposition to be pleased and please; and, my good young friends who read this, don't doubt about yourseli and please; and, my good young friends who read this, don't doubt about yourself or think about your precious person. When you have got on your best coat and waistoat, and have your dandy shirt and tie arranged, consider these as so many settled things, and go forward and through your business.

That is why people in what is called the great world are commonly better bred than persons less fortunate in their condition; not that they are better in reality, but from circumstances, they are never uneasy about their position in the world; therefore they are most honest and simple; therefore they are most honest and simple; therefore, they are better bred than Growler, who scowls at the great man a defiance and a determination that he will not be trampled upon; or poor Fawner, who goes quivering down on his knees, and licks my lord's shoes. But I think in our world—at least in my experience—there are even more Growlers than Fawners.

It will be seen by the above remarks.

there are even more erowers that rawaers.

It will be seen by the above remarks that a desire to shine, or to occupy a marked place in society, does not constitute my idea of happiness, or become the character of a discreet fogy. Time, which has dimmed the luster of his waistcoats, allayed the violence of his feelings, and sobered down his head with gray, should give to the whole of hes life a quiet, neutral tinge;
out of which calm and reposeful condition
the honest old fogy looks on the world,
and the struggle there of women and men.
I doubt whether this is not better than struggling yourself, for you preserve your interest, and do not lose your temper.
Succeeding? What is the great use of succeeding? What is the great use of succeeding? Failing? Where is the great harn? It seems to you a matter of vast interest, at one time of your life, whether you shall be a lientenant or a colonel—whether you shall or shall not be invited to the duchess's party—whether you shall get the place you and a hundred others are trying for—whether Miss — will have you or not; what the dence does it all matter a few years afterwards? Do you, Jones, mean to intimate a desire that history should occupy herself with your paltry personality? The future does not care whether you were a captain or a private soldier. You get a card to the Duchess's party; it is not more or less than a ball or breakfast like other balls or breakfasts. You are half distracted because miss won't have you, and takes the other fellow, or you get her (as I did Mrs.
Pacifico), and find that she is quite a different thing from what you expected. Pshaw!
These things appear as naught—when ers.

HONOR FROM EUROPE.—It is conceded on all sides that Dr. Ayer's Pills are above comparison with other medicines. Uniting the best elements known to the chemist, they are particularly effective against the numerous stomachic disorders for which they are recommended as a cure.
