TERMS OF WEEKLY FREW & CAMPBELL, Wheeling, W. Fa

[Entered at the Postoffice at Wheeling, W. Va., as WHEELING, W. VA., NOVEMBER 10, 1881. THE Steubenville fair project is making progress and assuming shape. THERE is is a great deal diphtheria both at Bellaire and St. Clairsville

Ir is considered an astonishing eircum stance at Steubenville any day these times to find the Panhandle trains on time.

A FARMER in Greene county, Pa., who thought he could get ulong without a newspaper, sold 100 bushels of potatoes at 40 cents when the quoted price was $1.00.

THE question arises, why were not the descendents of Baron Steuben invited to stop off at Steubenville, the namesake par excellence of their distingushed ancestor

THE leading Democrats of Indiana and Pennsylvania are opposed to free trade, If they should be read out of the ranks, as is sed bp some leading journals, what would become of the "grand old party."

The people in Cincinnati and Chicago seem determined to abate the coal smoke nulsance. In Pittsburgh and Wheeling the people do not look on smoke as a nuisance, but as a portion of their natural atmos

THE excursion to Chicago on the 8th from this city, Steubenville and other points does not appear to have been well patronized. Too late in the season. Beside, they have the small-pox bad in Chi-

VERY little wheat is now finding its way to market in Wheeling. The price offered ($1.30) does not attract unsold stocks, Farmers are holding off for another upward turn in prices. They have set their ideas at about $1,50.

THE Tyler county Star does not believe that there is a man along the entire route of the proposed River Railroad that does noi desire to see the road built. It, therefore, calls on the people to manifest this interest by a liberal policy as respects the

By next spring fast trains will run from Newport News, at the mouth of the James river, over the Che sapeake & Ohio and the Lexington & Big Sandy railroads, to Louisville, Ky. The Chesapeake & Ohio is developing into a formidable trunk line, and will be a conspicuous rival to the Baltimore & Ohio.

THE Grand Army of the Republic is having a "boom" just now all over the coun-Since April last one hundred and five new posts have been chartered in Ohio, and applications for charters have reached the national headquarters from North Carolina, Tennessee, Dakota and even from New Mexico.

Mych attention is now given to the question of how the surplus revenue of the general government is to be disposed of. In P., C. & St. L. view of this it will be of interest to recapulate the items of the Federal income and expenditure. During the last fiscal year the income from customs duties was $108, 559,076; from internal revenue taxes, $135,-204,385; from direct dax, $1,516; from sales of lands, $2,201,863; from other miscladeous items, $25,154,850; total, net, $300.

782,202. The expenditures were: For the War Department, $40,460,400; the Navy Department, $15,686,661; pensions, $50,059, 279; interest on public debt, $82,508,741; civil and miscellaneous items: $64,416,324 premiums on purchased bonds, $1,061,248; total, net, $200,712,887. These figures indicate, as has often been pointed out, that over $100,000,000 was drawn from the people more than was needed for the purpos of the government. This was the amount during the past fiscal year; during the present year it is estimated to amount to about $167,000,000.

THAT queer genius, Private Dalzell, who lives out at the little town of Caldwell, Noble county, Ohio, and who writes and writes and writes, and then writes and writes still more, and then keeps on writing for all the newspapers of America, has a remarkable sort of a letter in Tuesday's Chicago Tribune. The text of it is the following extract from a letter sent to him by a friend at Chicago:

"But, my dear fellow, inasmuch as you will write for the newspapers, why do you stay down there in the woods in that Godforsaken country? Why don't you come to Chicago, where you would have scope, material, and opportunities for the exercise of all your powers? Why not come up to the New Jerusalem of the West?" etc.

The Private seldom had a more congenial text than this for one of his multitudinous letters, and he accordingly rises to the oc casion, and sends to the Tribune a solid column of reasons why he prefers Caldwell to any other place on the Continent. He proceeds to draw an imaginary circle nine miles west of Caldwell, and to show that within this sacred enclosure have lived and died ever so many remarkable people. For instance, the "best soldier of Washington's army" (name not given), and Wm. Miller, the oldest Mason extant, and also the immediate members of his own household. Then he proceeds to enlarge the circle-to "extend the radius thirty miles"-and thus he corrals ever so many more celebrities. This takes him into "Bingham's old district"-a district which, he says, is "as well and as favorably known as that of Thaddens Stevens, Joshus R. Giddeys, John Quincy Adams, Henry Ciay or James G. Blaine," (Hardly, Private! hardly.) It also takes him into "Edwin M. Stanton's district." And "this" he says, "is also the birth place of all the fighting McCooks." (As to that, Private, Stanton and the McCooks were born up at Steubenville-a long way from Caldwell-sixty miles as the bird flies.)

vate enlarges his circle, and scoops in pretty much the whole country, in order to make Mecca of Caldwell, we quote the follow ng extract from his letter

Extend the line but a very few miles, and still within a very small circle it takes and still within a very small circle it takes disregarding State lines, for we are near to the river—the birthplace of Blaine, of Maine: the home of Governors Arthur and Allen and all the Shermans! It is an immortal spot of earth. It is but an hour of two's travel, but a little distance, indeed, to the extreme boundary of a circle which includes all I have so briefly statethed and hinted at, and much more than your space will permit me now even to suggest. It is not hyperbole to say that in oratory, diplomacy, war, patriotism, statesmanship, this circle embraces as illustrions names as any equal space of territory on the surface of this globe, in any age of its history.

If we are not mistaken, Governor Allen lived at Chillicothe—which is yet further lived at Chillicothe-which is yet further away than Steubenville-and Blaine (via Wheeling) was born at least 100 miles east of Caldwell. But what is distance to a ivid imagination.

Really the best reason given by the Private for his profound attachment to Caldwell is the following, which, we suspect, s after all the key of the situation :

s after all the key of the situation:

It is not the least of the attractions of this golden circle that it embraces the ground whereon I was married, and where my wife and six children yet live to comlost and to bless me fort and to bless me.
