The scene just after the trains collided wassimply indescribable. The engine of the passenger train lay partly turned over, and the fireman, Boyd, was so wedged in the wreek that he could not move, but lay with his face slowly cooking, his shoulders and chest crushed by their load, and the water from the tender pouring over him. water from the tender pouring over him, and mingling in a slimy mass with the cement and flour scattered about for yards from the wrecked freight cars. He was escued with difficulty.

The shock threw the contents of the six freight cars which were demolished in a shower into the air. Cement, flour and grain rained all over the surrounding ground, over the cars of both trains and the engines, where, mingling with the escaping steam and the water from the tanks it formed a paste which set about the faces and figures of the injured men, rendering them unrecognizable.

The mail car was also wrecked, and it and the broken freight cars were piled in two heaps of broken timber and iron.

A game of base ball was played on the Fair Grounds yesterday, which was interesting if not closely contested. Mr. Harry Laey, of the "Planter's Wife" Combination, and several of the members of the company played, and the balance of the eighteen necessary for a game of base ball were gathered up by Col. Sam Harrison. Mr. Laey, assisted by Frank Woodmansee, commanded a nine that was largely composed of semi-professional players, while Col. Harrison commanded a rather weak nine. The Laey men were so interested in explaining the principles of the game to the Harrison men and encouraging them in their playing, that before they realized the situation the Harrision men had piled up a big sore. To show their gratitude, when this was discovered, at the conclusion of the fifth inning with the score standing 28 to 6, the Harrisonites fearful that they would be beaten, refused to play longer. This refusal was greatly regreated by the large number of the present, which had staked its money on the Laey men.

STATE POLITICS,

Turning to home affairs, Mr. Mason said: It is an open secret that certain usude and heretolore successful managers of West Virginia polities realize the existence of some dissatisfaction in the Demoratic ranks, and it is public knowledge that West Virginia is now claimed as a a cause that also disturbs the Republican party, and it is the out-cropping of a wide-spread and deep-scated belief that the professional politicians and party newspapers are trying to control our votes by ception and trickery.

THE DEGENERATE PRESS.

The newspapers of this State, with rare exception, are conducted either for the purposes of partisan warfare or else with an eye single to making money. In one case the editor advocates anything or any body that may increase the party vote or strengthen party lines, and in the other case he will advocate anything or anybody that augments the advertising or offers present profit.

journals of to-day have entirely lost the confidence and respect of all classes. The connected and respect of all classes. The press has come to be regarded like a law-yer who will argue for either side that pays the highest price and an editor exposes at auction the influence of his columns and his ability to manufacture fulse imns and his ability to manufacture false opinion by deceiving the audience which supports his paper.

A comparison was instituted between the conventions which nominated Henry A. Wise for Governor and Breckenridge for President, and those which chose E. W. Wilson and Cleveland for the same position, and the change was declared to indicate an alarming condition of things. Yet Wilson was complimented as a worthy representative of the non-office seeking class.

Mr. Mason's reference to the State Democratic ring was rather tame:

"The Wheeling convention was not a meeting controlled by the professional political managers. A train of events had roused the Democracy of this State and culminated in a convention which was resolved to eliminate from this campaign at least, the oft repeated charge of bossism and ring rule. The nominee of that convention had not been chosen in secret conclave by political experts, and the people feel a confidence that he does not wear the collar of any clique or combination.

tion a suspicion had gone through this State that the machinery of party politics was used to advance the personal fortunes part of the press of this State had been used to traduce and exclude from the pub-lic confidence those Democrats of capacity and honesty who were not subscrient to the personal schemes of this combination the personal schemes of this combination and had attempted to deceive Democratic voters by suppressing the truth and publishing what was false. The instincts of our people are overwhelmingly Democratic and there came a grounds well which taught the managers of elections that our Democratic instincts had been offended."

THE BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS.

Sin:-Last Friday evening, at a meetin of the Second Branch of Council, Mr. Shanley, of the First ward, asserted that the cause of the defeat of the Loan Ordinance at the late election was Rule No. 4 of the Board of Public Works, and called on the members "to show their manhood" by repealing said rule. Was the welfare of the city his motive or was he merely pos ing for effect? Was he not trying to make cheap capital for himself as an embryo Democratic candidate for City Sergeant? It is an open secret that he is a candidate for the Sergeantcy and it may be possible that he sometimes feels that the people of this city and county have fed and clothed him much longer than his attainments en-title him to and his fierce onslaught on Rule No. 4 is a device to gain favor, with oranged over that election, were intended as hits at the Board of Public Works, it is safe to assert that the great uniority of those votes were expressions of ill will, on those votes were expressions of ill will, on the part of the voters, for some personal grievance and not a rebuke for the Board's xtravagence, and not five voters in every undred knew of or cared for Rule 4. given, that Council would manage the city's affairs more economically in the future than has been done in the past, the negative vote would be twice as large as it was. Suppose Mr. Shanley and his friends repeal Rule 4, where will it place them? The act creating the Board of Public Works says all contracts on account of the streets and alleys shall be made by the Board. Rule 4 limits the amount of the contracts to $5,000. If Council repeals this rule will it place the making of contracts in its hands? By no means—Council cannot set aside an act of the Legislature by an ordinance, and the authority ure by an ordinance, and the authority o contract will still be in the hands of the in the hands of the Board, but wisely pro-vided that a stop could be put in its work, at any time Council chooses to "assert its manhood" and refuse to appropriate at any time Council chooses to "assert its manhood" and refuse to appropriate money on the requisitions of the Board. The uniform manner in which that body has, in the past, honored every requisition made on it by the Board, can be construed in no other way than an approval of the work being done by the Board, and it is in bad taste for one or more of its members to try to shelter themselves from public censure by asserting that one rule of more than lifty was the cause of all the present trouble.

Mr. S. shows that he is conscious of some wrong doing on his part and is trying to conceal his own guilt in a show of virthous indignation at a party whom he thinks the dear people have porved the vials of their wrath upon.

Before the late election the Branch of Council to which Mr. S. belongs "asserted

Council to which Mr. S. belongs "asserted its manhood" by adopting a resolution that no more money would be paid by Council except on contracts first approved by it. This was intended as an assurance to the people that in future Council would be more careful and its passage had no more effect on the vote on the loan ordinance than a puff of wind. This resolution was intended to accomplish more than to repeal Rule 4 possibly could do, but the Mayor and Mr. S. can see no other way of safety than in its repeal.

Mayor and Mr. S. can see no other way of safety than in its repeal.

The true way for Council to "assert its manhood" is for it to so arrange the city's finances that both the people and the Board can know how much money can be spent on the streets and alleys during each year and the sources from which the money can be derived. When this is done in an intelligent and business manner there will be no trouble in passing a Loan Ordinance.

If Mr. S. and his friends would permit a If Mr. S. and his friends would permit a suggestion in reference to the matter, it is respectfully asked if the Gas Trustees and Water Board, after this year, could not set aside their not profits to form a fund for the repairs and improvements of the streets and alleys. These two boards use the streets more than all the clitzens in the trasaction of their respective businesses and it is but fair that the surplus in their hands, which is paid in by our citizens, should be expended for the benefit of the people. Each of these boards could, after setting aside ten percent of their profits to form a contingent fund, pay over five thousand dollars, which is about the amount absolutely necessary for the streets and alleys of this city every year. We have more than fifty miles of streets and alleys and not one fifth of them paved and the outlay necessary to keep them in even passable order is greater than most people imagine.

If this course were nursued in future of the course were nursued in future to the course were nursued in future.

Rule 4 to distract attention from things which Rule 4 has no bearing on. It is not the repeal of Rule 4 which this city's interests demand. It is the setting city's interests demand. It is the setting aside of some of the unwritten rules which have grieved our Councils for years and which enable ward politicians to climb out of Council into paying offices and there feed and fatten at the expense of a city, whose income is not sufficient to pay for the luxury of having them in high places in her government.

The committee was very agreeably surprised over the meeting. It was held at the Blaine and Logan pole, a nicely decorated stand having been erected.
