n Justice W. H. Davis' Court-More Case Justice W. H. Davis' time was largely taken up yesterday by another batch of cases like those he disposed of the day before. The principals were nearly all esidents of that vile row of dives in the econd ward that has been known as Paull's Row, but which name a member of the Paul family repudiates in a card published in this morning's paper. The more that is learned about the row and its immates is learned about the row and its inmates the more it would seem that and the people in it ought to go. Yesterday's trial developed a state of things that was anything but nice. Mrs. Ella Miller, Mrs. Cynthia Miller and Mrs. Adeline Butler were all arraigned on charges of neing profane language preferred by Mrs. Frances Russell, and were each fined $1 and costs, which they paid. Mrs. Adeline Butler was further required to give a bond of $50 to keep the peace for one year. This was also done at the instance of the Russell woman. The Russell woman also had Mrs. Louise Butler, Mrs. Ella Miller and her daughter Ella before the Justice, charged with disturbing the peace, and in each instance a $50 bond to keep the peace for one year was required and given.

VERY DISASTROUS

WAS MONDAY NIGHT'S STORM

day-Three in Sight from One Door-Injuries to Factories and Other Property Here and . in the Vicialty.

The storm of Monday night proves to have been more disastrous than at first supposed. Reports from the country show that beside the barn of D. H. Spindler, near Elm Grove, which was entirely destroyed, with its contents, including this year's crops, at least two other barns were burned. One of these was the barn of Mr. J. S. Garvin, situated on the Wheeling and Fairmont pike, near the County Infirmary, a new structure, and with it were destroyed two stables. The barn was filled with the season's crops, hay, wheat, oats, corn, several barrels of flour, several hundred pounds of han, and all the farming implements. Only two hay, wheat, cate, corn, several barrels of a dour, several hundred pounds of ham, and all the farming implements. Only two buggles and a spring wagon were saved. Another large building near, and a wheat rick containing a good deal of wheat, were the was an insurance of but $2,000, on which there was an insurance of but $350.

The barn of Matt Haziett, not far from Garvin's, was also struck by lighting, and totally consumed. His loss is $1,400, on which he had an insurance of $700 in the German Company.

NEURANCE BOOM.

One man living on a hill in the vicinity stood in his door and watched all three of at the barns burning. At the same time the A MESTING of the Executive Committee of the Society of the Army of West Virginia, has been called to meet at the head-buggles and a spring wagon were saved.

INSUBANCE BOOM.

One man living on a hill in the vicinity stood in his door and watched all three of the barne burning. At the same time the fierce lighting was playing about his own live new barn. Yesterday morning early he came to town and got an insurance policy on the building. There was a mild boom in insurance circles yesterday owing to the atorm.

Strange Freak of Lightning.

At the height of the storm Monday evening a ball of fire, at first resembling a blazing match, but growing to the size of a common toy balloon, fell at the corner of Twelith and Main streets, striking the electric light wire in its descent. The lights were nearly extinguished, and such a charge sent in to the dynamo room as to break the connection and start a small fire, which was, however, extinguished without damage. The ball fell a few feet below the wires after hanging a few moments, and then exploded with the Jond and peculiar report of a ball of molten

John H. Cunningham said he was a brother-in-law of the Prosecuting Attorney. He was excused by agreement. David Jenkins, aged 61, was informed that he could be excused if he desired, being over the limit of age. He did not choose to take advantage of this privilege, and was accepted, the defense excepting. This completed the panel of twenty jurors, and the defendant's attorneys took the list at 3 r. m. to strike off eight. The jurors were requested by Judge Boyd, if jurors were requested by Judge Boyd, il any reason existed to disqualify any of them, to make it known before the pro-ceedings had gone further.

ONECISATIOUS SCRUPLES.

Mr. Pugh rose and said he had scruples against capital punishment in a case where the verdict depended on circumstantial evidence alone.

The State challenged him, and the defense objected. Mr. Hutchinson said the Supreme Court of this State had settled that in the Kaine case, from Jackson county. Judge Boyd asked for the sutherity.

county. Judge Boyd asked for the suthority.

Mr. McSweeney argued the common sense of the proposition. He said West Virginia was the only State in the Union where the State had no peremptory challenge. To permit this juror to sit after his avowal was to hand over the law to one juror instead of the juror to the law. Mr. Moore insisted on the fitners of the juror if he could lay saide his conscientious scruples and render a verdict in accordance with the law as stated by the Court. He was allowed to inquire into this. Mr. Pugh said he could not lay saide his scruples. He was excused, and the defense excepted.

Homer Thayer was then called to fill the vacancy. He said if he knew himself he was unbiased. He was seated. SOME OF THE IMPROVEMENTS.

Reference has been made to the place as the old camp ground; it is old no longer except in name. The changes that have been made this year make it an entirely new place. As one enters the gate at "The Point" the first improvement is seen in the removal of the "Old Mansion" at that point and the erection of a new house for the Saperintendent of the grounds. The removal of the old structure has increased the size of that popular loafing place. Looking east from The Point one sees that an entire row of cottages has been removed, others have been set back and the space so cleared made into a park. Young trees have been set out, and with

IMPEACHING JURORS.

Mr. Hutchinson said he desired to ask George Lambert a question. He was allowed to do so after a debate between himself and Mr. Moore. Mr. Braddock—That is good law, too.

Mr. Lambert returned to the box.

Mr. Jester was then called, and asked if he had said to a young man named Morrow that he knew Baker, and that he would not believe him gnilty nuless he saw the crime committed himself. He said very emphatically he had not. He never said that Baker could not get a fair trial in Bancack county. He did not tell be had from there and the constant breeze that always prevails there, this new park is bound to be the most popular place on the ground.

Out Simpson avenue, the promenade of the place, as far as the hotel, down to the old spring with its ever bubbling stream of cold water, and out through the old park, on every side are to be seen algae of improvements. The old park presents a very attractive appearance; its urns and vases have been newly painted in a variety of bright colors and filled with plants and vines.

Leaving this part and making ones way to the auditorium one flads that just outside of the inner circle of cottages a whole row has been removed, and by this the street has been removed, and by this the trial in Hancock county. He did not tell Tom Godwin that he had looked this ase all over and was satisfied that Bake

Mr. Hutchinson called Thomas Godwin. The defense objected to this procedure, but the Judge said he would hear the evidence. Mr. Godwin was sworn, and questioned by Mr. Hutchinson. He said he had a talk some time ago with William Jenter, and the latter said he knew Baker; that he was a fine man and he thought he was innocent.

Mr. Swearingen said he heard Mr. Jester say some time ago that he was opposed to capital punishment.

Mr. Hutchinson said he had two other witnesses, who could not be brought into court now. He desired time to produce them.

Mr. Jester shook his head thoughtfully.

"If I did I have no recollection of it," he said.

"At the same time," Godwin continued, "you said something else; you said you did not believe in this thing of hanging," said to have originated in a combination of circumstantial evidence and clumsy guess work. The story is that Baker left his western school under a cloud, resigning by request. At the same time, so the story goes, a lady teacher in the school of which he was principal was dismissed. Since Baker's arrest persons interested in his conviction have written to the place inquiring the reason of his sudden departure, for which he himself assigned as a reason the appearance of an epidemic of measles among the pupils. The most definite response received to these letters was that there was "a woman in the case." This was noised about, and when recent-WHO ARE THERE.

This was noised about, and when recently a lady from the West came to Helliday's on a visit, and when she expressed a desire, which if unnatural is surely not uncommon, to see the alleged murderer of two women, people at ones jumped to the conclusion that this matter, the western school episods and Baker's alleged important engagement in the West. western school episode and Baker's alleged important engagement in the West on the Fourth of July had some connection, and as the guess gained circulation it gained positiveness and romantic features, until it found its way into a local newspaper embellished with some new ornaments and rendered plausible by the insertion of a missing link or two.

It is not very wonderful that Baker thinks, as he is reported to acknowledge freely he does think, that all newspaper men are fit candidates for dungeon cells. This is but one of the many stories touch. This is but one of the many stories touch ing on the case which have been printed at were mechanical mixtures of trivia that were mechanical mixtures of trivial truths and glowing imagination.

A story is current concerning Baker that on Sunday a large number of ladies visited the jail to get a look at him. As they passed in single file before his cell, he said a "Step up, ladies, and view the corpse and pass on!"

This may be another invention. It is current at New Camberland.

The action is on a breach of contract to recover $16,018. On July 8 plaintiff purchased of defendant two bills of exchange—one for 2,000 pounds sterling, on Uthoff, London, and the other for 26,000 reichmarks, drawn on the Bremen Bankverein, of Bremen, Germany. These bills were forwarded to the plaintiff's correspondence in Europe and presented for payment, which was refused. Attachment issues because of the non-residence of the defendants.
