WHEELING, MARCH 8, 1892.

THE approaching contest is rendered especially important by reason of the industrial and financial policies of the Government being at stake. The popular decision on these issues is of great moment and will be of far-reaching consequence.

Free Traders Hard Up for Argument.

The New York Herald is on the free trade side of the controversy which relates to the bread and butter of the American people, and which is one of the sharp dividing lines between the Republican party and the Democratic party. Being a free trader and the most distinctly foreign of our American newspapers, the Herald comes at the Republican party in this fashion:
Selfishness, not unselfishness, is still the rule in politics.
We deplore the methods of the past. But on the top of this we pass a McKinley bill, involving misery to millions. And because these millions are not our competitors we rub our hands and beam and smile and chuckle at our own prosperity.
That is to say, some of us do. For there are many—and the many in this instance means the mass—who hold broader, more far-sighted, more thoughtful views of international duties. These do not rejoice at such news as the cable brings us to-day. News of misery and discontent and famine; of working men and women without work; of parents forced to starve their children; of rioting and strikes and trade unionism.
Protection and McKinley have much to answer for just now. To these two factors, which have come to be synonymous, must be ascribed part, at least, of the evils described in the Herald's despatch. The fortunes of a few men in this country may be bought dearly—bought with the lives and happiness of thousands upon thousands in Europe.
More trouble is expected in the Old World. The advent of the First of May is awaited with unusual anxiety. There may be bloodshed in the streets of many cities. First of May.
But what do our protectionists care?

The Herald does not treat its correspondent, Jacques St. Cere, with much more fairness than it accords to the odious protectionists. It is true that in his dispatch from Paris published with the above comments M. St. Cere, who should be above all things a sincere man, puts some of the blame on the McKinley tariff, but he also makes a strong point of the vast and costly military establishments maintained by Europe.

Men withdrawn from industries in which they might support themselves, their support thrown on the men who do work—add this to the old systems of government by which the few are able to eat up the many, and without looking across the Atlantic for a cause there is reason enough why there is chronic distress aggravated, when short crops befall or when a customer who has been buying determines to set up as a producer and supply his own wants.

To lay on the protectionists of the United States the moral responsibility for the acts of parents who slay the children they cannot feed is an accusation as monstrous as it is insane. What is it the protectionists have done to Europe? Simply bought less of certain of Europe's manufactured products than heretofore and provided more employment for the people of their own country. They have provided better for their own household than formerly.

If the nations of Europe suffer by this it is because, unfortunately for them, those nations have so adjusted their economic relations with the rest of the world that they cannot stand industrial development on this side of the Atlantic. They have builded on the assumption that the United States would never find out the advantage of maintaining its own workshops and would go on indefinitely drawing its supplies of manufactures from foreign workshops.

The McKinley tariff has taken employment from foreign wage-earners and given it to our own. This protectionists hold to be right, politic, patriotic, and on this they are willing to go to the country. But the McKinley tariff is very far from erecting a barrier against the interchange of commodities with other nations, and so far from the imports having fallen off under the operations of that measure, they have increased.

During the twelve months ending December 31, 1891, our imports amounted to $228,737,457, against $222,475,457 for the previous year. Last year our imports were in round numbers $90,000,000 above the average of the preceding five years. We bought of foreign countries last year $26,751,900 of manufactures of cotton, $8,752,131 of cotton-ware, stone and china, of flax, hemp, jute and the manufactures thereof $27,000,000, of glass and glassware $8,202,817, of manufactures of iron and steel $41,000,000, of leather and its manufactures $12,442,534, of wool and its manufactures $52,000,000.

Still more of these commodities should have been produced in our own country, and this is the end to which protectionists are bending their energies. It is only recently that they have been accused of the crime of starving the poor of Europe, an accusation which may make on the wage-earners of the United States a very different impression from that desired by the free traders.

Besides the commodities of Europe we received last year more than half a million of its people, and in this respect also we hope to do better by not taking so many. On this phase of the subject the wage-earners of the United States have some very decided views, and yet it will be hard to make them believe that they are plotting the murder of innocent babes.

It begins to look as though the free traders are harder pressed than ever for argument.

The Fire Department.

Wheeling should have adequate protection against fire. This it cannot have without an adequate mechanical equipment as well as a sufficient complement of competent and willing men. Our firemen give a good account of themselves in the hour of need, and they do as well with the equipment they have as could be expected.

It appears now that there is but one engine in the department to be depended on. Without engines to be depended on it cannot be said that the fire department is up to the requirements. Wheeling can afford to provide herself with protection and cannot afford to be without it.

EDWARDS PIERREPONT used to be a good deal of a man in New York and in the country. He was big enough to be in President Grant's cabinet and to represent this country at the British court. His death at seventy-eight years of age does not create a ripple. Thousands of his countrymen know nothing about him. Are we then so soon forgot?

When Chief Justice Fuller was delivering his handsome eulogy on the late Justice Bradley he must have forgotten that the Democratic slangwaggers used to denounce Justice Bradley as anything but a just judge. The chief justice will have to keep an eye on himself or his party friends will strike him off their list.

All the West Virginia congressmen voted with the free silver men. If you keep your eye on them you will notice that in the next house some of them will be conspicuous by their absence. West Virginia is not a free silver state.

It is to be hoped that Mr. Blaine's condition is not so bad as it is represented to be. The country has need of him and most of his countrymen hope to see him in public life for many years to come.

When the Democrats in the house are left to themselves they divide into two factions, one representing the monkey and the other the parrot and they have a time of it.

A TUNNEL through Wheeling hill would be a great thing for the country and the town. Some day it will come. The sooner the better. Some day some of us won't be here.

THE fashionable dressmakers who try the smuggling dodge are not so successful as they used to be. The Republican party continues to grind the poor smugglers.

FREE silver goes through the house smoothly enough, but if it runs up against the President it will hit something hard. It has yet to captivate the country.

AFTER all the seal controversy will not be sealed in blood. There will be more sparring, but in the end there will be a peaceful conclusion.

MR. BLAND may be pictured in your mind's eye as looking that way after the preliminary success of his pet measure in the house.

THE prize-fight is having its period of renaissance, but it doesn't seem so to a defeated knocker.

WHEELING is in it. We are to have a little prize-fighting of our own.

STRANGE how Mr. Blaine continues to worry the opposition.

THE smoke nuisance—The cigarette.

BREAKFAST BUDGET.

The members of the Pendle Forest Hunt have had what may be described as the best run of the season. The hounds put up in the neighborhood of Gisburn what was supposed to be a splendid fox. Away the party galloped at the heels of the hounds, who took them at a rattling pace round by Hellfield, Halton, West and Pothorne. Scant was ultimately lost, but the members of the hunt mutually congratulated each other on the excellent sport they had had. It transpired at the close of the day that they were indebted to the sheep dog of Mr. Joseph Bullock, of Moorehouse farm, near Gisburn, for the exciting incidents of the chase. The dog much resembled a fox, and, being alarmed at the sight of the hounds, took to its heels.—Northern Daily Telegraph.

I wakened to the singing of a bird:
I heard the bird of spring.
And lo!
At his sweet note
The flowers began to grow,
Grass, leaves and everything.
As if the green world heard
The trumpet of his tiny throat
From end to end, and winter and despair
Fled at his melody, and passed in air.

I heard at dawn the music of a voice,
O may be loved, then I said, the spring
Can visit only once the waiting year;
The bird can bring
Only the season's song, nor his the choice
To waken smiles or the remembering tear!
But thou dost bring
Springtime to every day, and with thy call
The flowers of life unfold, though leaves of autumn fall.

—Mrs. James T. Fields, in Century.
Some expressions that may be new to Americans are given as the slang language of American tramps in the Contemporary Review. The tramp's name for himself and his fellows is Hobo, plural Hoboes. Bread is called "punk," and policemen and other officers of the law are known as "screws." Boggling is called "battering for chewing," railway brakemen, "brakies," poorhouses, "pogies," prisons, "pens," and liquor drinking, "flushing the growler."

raised such a dust that the burglar sneezed. Whereupon the girl, instead of screaming, finished her work, walked quietly away and informed her mistress. The latter, plucking descended to the cellar, grabbed the burglar, and, despite his resistance, held him until policemen came and arrested him.

The success which has attended the use of the electric search light on war vessels has resulted in its adoption on a number of passenger and freight ships engaged in the coastwise trade. This light is new used on the Providence river, and the navigation of the Savannah river has only been possible at night by use of search lights. Now the steamers on the eastern shore route, running out of Baltimore, are using these lights with marked success.

The natural gas supply of Pittsburgh is likely to be increased in the near future, as the Philadelphia company has entered the new McDonald field, and will pipe gas to that city. There are a number of fine gas wells there which can be reached by a fourteen-mile line, so that the gas can be delivered with good pressure.

At the present time lampblack is made largely from natural gas, but a plant is now being erected at Renfrow, Pa., which will obtain this material from crude oil. A patent process is being employed for the purpose, which will yield an average of thirty-seven pounds of lampblack from each barrel of oil.

STATE POLITICS.

We have been advocating the nomination of Elkins for governor, not because we preferred him, personally, to all others, but for the reason that we believed he would make a strong candidate, and further that we thought him better able to stand the strain of a campaign. We believe these things yet, but do not believe he is the only man in our party that can carry the full Republican vote. Personally we prefer G. W. Atkinson, and we think him fully as strong before the people as Mr. Elkins, and he would have the advantage of the most extensive personal acquaintance, not only with the leaders of the party in the state, but with the rank and file as well, of any man in West Virginia. He is a mixer, pre-eminently, the best organizer and campaigner in the state.—Tyler County Star.

The INTELLIGENCER of Wednesday says that Sheriff Hardman, of this county, is mentioned as a good man for delegate to the national convention. If Tyler's delegation should solidly support Mr. Hardman and insist on his being made a delegate it would probably be done. Mr. Hardman is Republican to the backbone, has done much for the party and deserves this honor. A better selection could not be made.—Tyler County Star.

The Wheeling Register says that the bonded debt of West Virginia is but $135,011 and the floating debt $49,000, and adds that this most excellent condition of things was brought about under Democratic administration. It is indeed in violation of the constitution. It is not as excellent a thing from a Democratic standpoint, as the gubernatorial steal, however.—Richie Gazette.

Hon. G. W. Atkinson, ex-member of Congress, has many warm friends in this county who would like to see him take charge of the executive mansion at Charleston for four years, after the 1st of March, 1893.—Weston World.

MORNING SMILES.

The Wrong Class—"Do I have to stick this stamp on myself?" asked a dude of the clerk at the postoffice. "Oh, no," replied the clerk. "You couldn't go in the mailbags, and besides that is a letter stamp, and you are not first-class male mail."

Plenty in It—Bullfinch: "How is that little mining scheme of yours getting along? Any money in it?" Woodcock: "Any money in it! Well, I should say so! All of mine, all of my wife's, and about fifty thousand that I got from my friends."—Boston Courier.

Gilhooley: "I can't possibly make out what's going to become of our boarding-house. I wanted ham and poached eggs the other day and couldn't get 'em." Gus DeSmith: "Ah! and I wanted credit there the other day and couldn't get that!"—Texas Siftings.

She Didn't Understand—Mrs. Hicks: "I read every day about the peace of Europe" which all the rulers seem to want; but there is one thing about it I don't understand." Hicks: "What is that?" Mrs. Hicks: "Which piece is it?"—New York Herald.

The doctor—"Have you called on the Butlers since the failure?" Miss Newgold—"No. I think I shall have to scratch them off. Poor Mrs. Butler is so sensitive that I hesitate to intrude upon her in her trials."—Brooklyn Life.

Miss Shoddy (introducing caller)—"You know Mr. Sweet, don't you, pa?" He wrote those verses, you know, in the book with the cover that harmonizes so beautifully with the crimson rocker."—Philadelphia Updelteter.

Brown—"I understand that you have quite a country farm. What do you call it?" Jones—"Teal it the Dolmoneco farm. It costs me about $16 a day for vegetables for the table."—King's Jester.

Swiss authorities are arranging for experiments with carrier-pigeons in connection with the postal service, it is stated. Only mail birds should be selected.—Philadelphia Ledger.

There is a superstition among many people that if you quietly rub with the palm of your hand the protuberance of a hunchback on a Monday morning luck will follow all the week.

THE RED, RED WEST.

Eugene Field, in Chicago News.
I've traveled in heaps of countries and studied all kinds of art.
Till there isn't a critic or connoisseur who's properly deemed so smart.
And I'm free to say that the grand results of my "art" are shown in short.
That somehow paint gets redder the farther out West I go.

I've slipped the voluptuous sherbet that the Orientals serve.
And I've felt the glow of red Bordeaux tingling each separate nerve.
I've sampled your classic Mistle under an arbor green.
And I've reeked with song a whole night long over a brown potteen.

The stalwart brew of the land o' cakes, the schnapps of the frugal Dutch.
The much-praised wine of the distant Rhine and the beer praised overmuch.
The ale of dear old London and the port of southern climes.
All, ad infinitum, have I taken in a hundred thousand times.

Yet, as I afore-mentioned, these other charms are naught.
Compared with the paramount gorgeousness with which the West is fraught.
For art and nature are just the same in the land where the porker grows.
And the paint keeps getting redder the farther you go out West.

Our savants have never discovered the reason why this is so.
And nine per cent of the laymen care less than the savants know.
Transfers every purple that this is manifest:
The paint keeps getting redder the farther you go out West.

Give me no home 'neath the pale pink dome of No cot for the salmon sea that far to the southwest lies;
But away out West I would build my nest on top of a crimson hill;
Where, can you paint, without restraint, creation redder still!

REASON? Beecham's Pills act like magic.

HAVE YOU THE GRIPPE?

Many People Have It and Do Not Know It. How to Recognize the Symptoms and How to Treat Them.

Hundreds of people have the Grippe who do not know it. Not necessarily the final stages, but the first stages. They feel pains in the head, and a bad taste in the mouth, get tired and despondent, have chilly sensations, limbs and muscles ache. In some cases these things are overlooked. In most cases perhaps they are considered simply a slight cold. In nearly every case they indicate the coming of Grippe.

There is but one thing to do when these symptoms appear, and that is to take prompt and vigorous measures to fortify nature to repel the enemy. A little well directed effort at just the right time will accomplish very much more than labored efforts afterwards. There is but one thing to be done, and that is to use a pure stimulant, something that will promptly arrest, and in no way injure, something endorsed by scientists, recommended by physicians, and popular because so efficient—Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey.

Two years ago, and last year when the Grippe was raging, this was the standard remedy used, and recommended by the profession. It did more to prevent the Grippe than all other known or recommended remedies. It preserved many people in health who would otherwise have been grievously sick, perhaps even worse. It is as efficient today as ever. It should be borne in mind that other so-called whiskeys may not be so efficient, and if any dealer asserts that such whiskeys are the same, distrust him at once. There is but one medicinal whiskey, and that is Duffy's Pure Malt.

BARONESS DE STEURS.

Gets Her Divorce and Immediately Gets a License to Marry Again.

STOUT FALLS, March 7.—Baroness De Steurs is a free woman, so far as the wearing of the yoke of matrimony is concerned. The decree of divorce was filed to-day by Judge Aikens. The interesting portion of the decision was as follows: That since their marriage the baron has been guilty of acts of extreme cruelty towards the baroness, which have inflicted grievous mental sufferings upon her, the acts consisting of frequent violent exhibitions of ill temper and unmerited censure in the presence of others, and finally culminating on the 13th of June, 1890, in the baron spiriting away from society, custody and control of his wife her two minor children upon the pretext that she was in an unbalanced state of mind, that her children were in danger of being affected by her malady to their great detriment were they allowed to be with her.

The daughter was placed in a convent by a scheme which it would not be doing violence to reasonable inference to find its inception was intended to end in the incarceration of the mother, and was sufficient to warrant the plaintiff in ceasing to live and cohabit with the baron. The conclusion of law is to the effect that the marriage is dissolved and both are freed from the obligation thereof. The custody of the minor child, Margaret Eugenie Victoria De Steurs, is given to the mother, as she requested in her original complaint.

Immediately after the filing of the decree a marriage license was issued by the clerk of the court, permitting the marriage of Elliott Zeborowski and Margaret De Steurs. Zeborowski is a New Yorker of immense wealth, being the owner of the Broadway theatre. He has been the constant companion of the baroness through all her troubles, and it is a fitting ending to the sufferings of an American woman in the hands of a foreign diplomat.

New Southern Industries.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., March 7.—The Tradesman in its review of new industries and establishments in the southern states for the week ending March 5, reports 55 new industries as established or incorporated. Among them are a $190,000 brewery at Houston, Texas; brick works at Atlanta; cotton mills at Haw River, N. C. and Galveston. Flouring mills are to be built at Cork, Ga., and Williamstown, Ky.; machine shops at Elliston, Va., and foundry at Alexandria, Va., and a brass and bronze working plant at Wheeling, W. Va.

Dr. E. T. MILLER, of Cross Plains, Wis., has expressed the opinion that for obstinate cases of syphilis and scrofula, Ayer's Sarsaparilla is unquestionably the most effective remedy known to pharmacy. Wonderful cures have resulted from its use.

A Suggestion.

We wish to make a suggestion to persons troubled with rheumatism. Try a few applications of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. If that does not bring relief, dampen a piece of flannel with the Pain Balm and bind it on over the seat of pain. The first application is almost sure to relieve the pain, and by its continued use many severe cases have been permanently cured. 50 cent bottles for sale by druggists.

A GOOD SHOW.

We are always advising you to advertise, and to keep on advertising, but that does not cover the ground entirely. Of course, you should make your advertising effective—if an electric light be available, you should not use a "tallow dip" to light the path to your store.

What do we mean by that? Simply that the more conspicuous, the more artistic, the more attractive, the more original you make your advertisements, the more people will see and read them, and the more customers you will have to contribute to your cash-drawer.

Study effects in bold pretty type—good matter may be spoiled by ugly dressing. Seek to catch the eye by a display of good taste in the style and arrangement of your announcement.

Above all, let it be bold enough to be easily read. Don't vex a reader by vexing his or her eyes!
