REPUBLICAN TICKET.

FOR CONGRESS: First District—R. H. DOVENOR, of Ohio County. Second District—A. G. DAYTON, of Barbour Co.

FOR HOUSE OF DELEGATES: JOSEPH C. BLADY, ABRAHAM STAMM, ALEX. R. CAMPBELL, S. G. SMITH.

FOR JUDGE OF THE CRIMINAL COURT: T. J. HUGHS. FOR COUNTY SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS: JAMES C. LEWIS.

THE Campaign and the Issues. All over West Virginia Republican meetings are being largely attended.

With the free traders the case is quiet otherwise. They are having great difficulty to get people out to their meetings, although the politicians are exerting themselves to the utmost to make a show.

Since there are two distinctly marked schools of Democrats in West Virginia—one favoring free trade and the other protection—if the free trade Democrats will challenge the protectionist Democrats to joint discussion, the spectacle would be more edifying.

Democrat may settle this question among themselves to their own satisfaction, if they can. As for Republicans, let them go straight on in the course marked out, talking to the people who desire to hear them, leaving the Democratic speakers to make such headway as they can against the stiff opposing current.

The people understand the campaign and the issues. For the most part they know how they will vote in November or whether they will vote at all.

LOUISVILLE is much pleased by the G. A. R.'s acceptance of her invitation to camp there next year. The boys will be pleased when they go there.

A Flourishing Business. It seems that nothing of value has occupied the financial genius of the police department of New York. It has been established beyond question that the "green goods" men had to pay liberally for the privilege of luring their victims to New York and fleeing them after they got there.

It always did seem queer that so vast a business so frequently exposed in the newspapers could go on in New York with no show of interference by the police. The testimony before the Lexow committee explains it all on the only reasonable ground.

whose intelligence, courage and tireless energy have caused the lid to be taken off and the mass of corruption to be exposed to view.

Profound Democratic Disaffection. Democratic as the New York World is, it has too much good sense to try to belittle the unprecedented Republican triumph in Maine. It says: The Maine Democrats refrained from voting in great numbers because they are profoundly dissatisfied with the course of their party at Washington.

An unpromising situation is not made better by shutting the eyes to it. The Democratic party of New York will need to display rare circumspection, true courage and honesty and high devotion to principle if it would avoid a disaster which Maine gives timely warning.

Since Maine is not the only state in which Democrats are "profoundly dissatisfied with the course of their party at Washington," it is a reasonable supposition that we shall see more of this profound Democratic dissatisfaction when the returns come in from the states which are to vote later.

If profound dissatisfaction with the course of the Democratic party in Washington induced Democrats in Maine to vote the Republican ticket or refuse to go to the polls, Democrats in other states will be likely to go after their party in the same way.

No amount of "rare circumspection, true courage and honesty and high devotion to principle" on the part of the leaders can change the masses or turn them from their determined purpose.

In Maine Democrats voted against the proved imbecility of their party, and Democrats will do it in other states.

Edison says that although he sold the phonograph for $500,000 all he ever got out of it was $47,000. The able inventor must have stored away some experience while he was going through it all.

The World's Gold. The probability of a gold famine becomes less and less remote, and at the present rate of increase it is beyond the power of any clique to corner the world's production of gold, if anybody were desirous of doing that.

The output reached more than $155,000,000, in round numbers $60,000,000 greater than it was ten years back. Of the gold producing countries only Colombia, not a large producer, fails to show an increase.

The whole field is surveyed by Mr. W. R. Ingalls, a mining engineer, whose valuable paper is printed in the New York Evening Post, to which the INTELLIGENCER is indebted for part of Mr. Ingalls' article, printed in another column.

Mr. Ingalls makes two points of great interest, that the world's production of gold will continue to increase, and that the increase will be steady and considerable in the United States. This opinion is supported by all the information at hand.

Those who heard General Gordon last night on "The Last Days of the Confederacy" are indebted to him for something more than the charm of his eloquence. His treatment of his theme was a new inspiration to a closer brotherhood of Americans, a broader nationality and a higher patriotism.

The country would be better and stronger if all the people might hear such teaching oftener.

SENATOR MURPHY says that in the seven years he has been chairman of Democratic state committee of New York his party has won six victories, and with those laurels he thinks he can retire with credit. He realizes, but does not say for publication, that there are no Democratic laurels to be won in New York this year. There could not be a better year for retiring.

ELWOOD, Ind., Sept. 12.—[Special]—The American Tin Plate Company has served notice on employees of the hot sales department that wages will be cut from 25 to 30 per cent October 1. When the scale was signed in July it was for a year with the provision that if the new tariff bill changed or abolished the duties there was to be a reconsideration of the wage scale.

It is a condition, not a theory, which confronts these workmen. They will not trouble any politician to explain the situation to them.

CAPTAIN FRIESEN'S successful attempt to cross the Atlantic in the little Nina proves that the thing can be done at great hazard. It does not establish anything of use in commerce or anything else in which mankind is interested. It is about on a par with shooting the whirlpool rapids of Niagara in a cask.

Good reports of the progress of Mr. Huling's campaign come from the Third district. The Republican nominee for Congress is not letting the grass grow under his feet. The chances in that district are decidedly against Mr. Alderson's re-election.

RANDOM POLITICAL NOTES.

Added to the many embarrassments and afflictions the West Virginia Democracy is suffering under at present, are the numerous peculiar indiscretions committed by the state organ of the party, and it is no secret that the Democratic campaign managers are no little concerned on account of them.

The "breaks" the organ has made were not so embarrassing in their nature they would seem as funny to Democrats as to Republicans. Some of them have been of minor importance, however, and have been thoroughly enjoyed by the Register's Democratic readers, as, for instance, the organ's editorial assertion the morning after the tariff bill passed that coal, iron ore and lumber had been placed on the free list, and the editor's subsequent attempt to convince his readers that the mistake was a typographical error and not due to ignorance.

There have been other and more vital "breaks" that have caused the campaign managers to make use of some very emphatic language when discussing them. The organ's started out in its customary bombastic style to belittle the strength of Republican candidates and to inspire voters with over-confidence by asserting that the Democracy was going to take everything in sight without half trying.

For this remarkable exhibit of a lack of political sagacity the editor had to be "called down," and he then made himself ridiculous by taking it all back and telling the Democrats that nothing but hard work would win. But the funniest part in which the organ has been placed is the attitude it now finds itself in before the public on the wool question.

It is slyly innocent contentment (in the face of the Democratic purpose for abolishing the tariff on wool) that free wool is bound to raise the price of the wool growers' product and make that industry prosperous in consequence, is two much even for Democrats and they have to laugh. In apparent unconsciousness of the damage its declaration is doing the Democratic position regarding cheaper raw materials, the Register goes right along setting itself and its party deeper and deeper into the hole on the wool question, while the campaign managers are wondering what sort of a mind is governing their organ.

In view of the Register's ridiculous position in the matter of the price of wool, I can imagine Col. John T. McGraw, who is running Hon. William L. Wilson's campaign over in the Second district, completely losing control of his patience, and dictating to his typewriter a letter which would read something like the following—those who know the colonel will recognize his picturesque style:

To the Editor of the Register: As the Democratic manager charged with the hurelcan task of pulling our distinguished national tariff reform leader through, and in view of the fact that I am obliged to make an especial defense of his course in giving us free wool, I beg leave to enter my solemn protest against the idiotic—excuse me, I should say indelicate—manner in which you are conducting the party organ with reference to that question.

If you expect us to do anything for Wilson, you must let up on your assinine—or, to be more polite, your indelicate—attempts to make it appear that the application of our pet Democratic theory regarding free raw materials is working the wrong way. Your apparent ignorance, which has led you to make some remarkably idiotic breaks, is seriously embarrassing our campaign. It is inconvenient, not to say exasperating, for me to be approached by Democrats, who point out the idiotic—I mean indelicate—wool editorials, and demand that I reconcile your statements that the price of wool is bound to advance under the new law with Mr. Wilson's promise that they were to have cheaper clothing. I try to explain to them that the object of free wool is to give the manufacturers cheaper raw material, for that is the theory of the Democratic doctrine, and I further tell them that your assinine—I mean indelicate—statements are merely campaign buncombe for effect on the wool growers of the state; but it does no good. They say you are a Democratic editor and know all about it, while I'm only a Wilson-Cleveland theorist. They further want to know what, in the name of our patron saints, Wilson and Cleveland, we meant by taking the "tax" off of wool if it was going to result in increasing its cost to the consumer, and how, if your contention that the raw material is cheaper is true, they are going to get cheaper clothing, unless the wages of operatives in the woolen mills (which are still protected) are cut down.

"What do you mean by handicapping Mr. Wilson's campaign in this way? Don't you know you are knocking from under our free raw material theory the only prop it has to rest on, and that your idiotic—I mean indelicate—statements about wool prices, are not only no bome out by the market quotations, but are at variance with our promises to the people? I suppose you think you can thus save the votes of a few Democratic wool growers of the First district to your man Howard. Well, don't you know that the wool growers read the market reports and are not going to believe your statements? Besides, Wilson is more of a factor in this campaign than Howard is, and he must be pulled through if we have to sacrifice every other candidate in the state. It is no use to Wilson's interest to have his free wool theory (that it will give the manufacturers cheaper raw materials) vindicated than it is to Howard's interest for you to tell the farmer's a lot of bosh concerning prices of their products, when they know ten times more about it than you do, for they do the marketing, you base your assertions on fake dispatches from Monroe county, Ohio. Let the farmers go. Wilson wasn't legislating for them; and, besides, all the wool-growing farmers are going to vote the Republican ticket. What Wilson wants is for the woolen manufacturers to think they are going to get cheaper raw wool, and the people to think they are going to get cheaper clothing. It is not our look-out if the thing doesn't pan out, and the people, along with the cheaper clothing, get lower wages and pay higher for sugar and other necessities of life. What we are after now is votes, but we can't get them if you keep up your pace. You ought to resign and let a woolen Indian run your paper. It would be less harmful to the cause. It was only a week ago I had to call you down for that assinine—I mean indelicate—break about Gordon Dayton being a weak candidate against Wilson, and now I've got to light into you on the wool question. Will you never learn any sense? But what can be expected of a newspaper that doesn't know the difference between fleece washed and tub washed wool? Yours indignantly,

"JOHN T. MCGRAW."

If Col. McGraw didn't write the above letter, I'll wager anything he heartily endorses much of its sentiment in behalf of Mr. Wilson. In the First district, also, will be found Democrats who feel like subscribing to something in a similar strain, and who knows that

Royal Baking Powder ABSOLUTELY PURE

Chairman Louis Delaplaine, of the Democratic committee, hasn't already done so? Nobody knows better than the campaign managers that the wool growers of West Virginia, and of every other state, for that matter, are not going to vote for the party that dealt their industry its death blow, in spite of their united petitions and protests. The Register ought to realize the situation by this time. It cannot make the wool growers believe a thing which is not true. They know the condition of the wool market, and they know what caused it. They know that American wool will only go up in price when the American industry is ruined and the supply is reduced to little or nothing, and that prices will, in any event, be regulated by the competing prices of foreign wools that are admitted free.

The Register's attempt to play for the votes of those intelligent farmers is ludicrous in the light of the fact that it is at the same time telling the workmen that they are to buy their clothing cheaper. The Democratic cause is desperate, but the degree of its desperation will scarcely warrant the Democratic orators and papers in attempting the somewhat dangerous feat of making antipodal theories dove-tail together. It is a physical, moral and intellectual impossibility.

Speaking of Chairman Delaplaine, I see he has begun Mr. Howard's campaign with a bluff in the shape of a challenge to Capt. Dovenor for a series of joint debates, and it may be fairly assumed that the conduct of the Howard canvass from now on will be a series of bluffs. It is a way the Democratic managers have when they find themselves in a desperate strait. In this case it is nothing more nor less than a scheme to awaken apathetic Democrats. Mr. Howard is comparatively unacquainted in many of the counties of the district, and his nomination has not created a very great amount of enthusiasm. The Democratic managers have witnessed, with alarm, the remarkable enthusiasm among Republicans everywhere, and the manner in which they turn out in unprecedented numbers to political meetings, while, on the other hand, the disgusted Democracy are in many sections showing great indifference. The scheme for joint discussions has been hit upon to overcome the effect of this state of affairs. It is the only way left to get out crowds to hear Mr. Howard and get acquainted with him. I do not know Capt. Dovenor's intentions, but I do not believe he will fall into the Democratic plan to introduce their candidate, and will leave the latter to make his campaign in his own way. Captain Dovenor and Mr. Howard can "discuss the issues of the campaign in every county," which Mr. Delaplaine pretends to be so anxious they shall do, quite as well from separate platforms. Of course the Democratic organs are to take their cue from this and howl from one end of the district to the other that Captain Dovenor is afraid to meet Mr. Howard, but the people of the district know, from past experience, that the captain hasn't got a cowardly bone in his body, and has always been ready to lock horns with the champions of Democracy, and so the Democratic plan of campaign will fall flat. Mr. Delaplaine is young as a political manager, and, like his candidate, has yet to learn the temperament of the voters of the district.

The Democratic United States marshal, Mr. Vinson, and his deputies have not shot at any of their Democratic brethren for more than a week, principally for the reason that most of them have been sojourning in Kentucky. They returned, however, two or three days ago, and are now under bonds to answer before the grand jury for the part they took in the riot at the Wayne county Democratic meeting, in which one man was killed and many were wounded. It now seems clear that the shot which killed Fezzell was not fired by Vinson himself. This, however, will not relieve him of a share of the responsibility, for it is known that he emptied two revolvers during the fight and was the leader in the assault on the Wilson forces. Murder was committed and somebody will have to answer for it. Various other bodies will have to answer for complicity in the crime. Judging from the indignation expressed by the opposing Democratic faction, it will become a necessity to remove Marshal Vinson from office. If President Cleveland fails to act promptly he will place himself in the attitude of condoning the offense of a Federal officer, holding a commission direct from him, forcibly interfering with political meetings and engaging in a murderous riot, not as a conservator of the peace, but as a violator of the law. So certain does it seem that Vinson will lose his official head, that already speculations are indulged in regarding his successor. The man who is most likely to receive the appointment is Lafo Garden, of this city, at present Vinson's chief deputy. Mr. Garden has not been a participant in any of the disgraceful performances of Vinson and the other deputies, and is in every way worthy of the honor. He doesn't live close enough to the Kentucky line to be imbued with the Kentucky idea, and will prove a faithful officer.

The Wilson faction of the Democracy has not been blameless for the riots that have occurred. The ex-governor, in his campaign against Camden, has been aggressive to an extreme degree, and his speeches have been violently abusive of the senator and his supporters, especially Marshal Vinson, and it was after one of these bitter tirades, during which he applied many offensive epithets to the marshal, that the Wayne county riot occurred. However, no matter who is to blame, the feeling is growing that the contest between the two Democratic aspirants for the senatorship is waxing so warm that neither has a ghost of a show even if the legislature is Democratic. The possibilities in that event are various. The chances for William L. Wilson might be interfered with by the Faulkner influence, and the same objection might cause the ex-governor Fleming to fall. Some time since I referred to the fact that the Kanawha Democratic bosses, having knocked out Camden with Ex-Governor Wilson, have no notion of letting that gentleman enjoy the fruits of victory, but will retire him, and see to it that a First district man gets the senatorship if the legislature is Democratic. Their program is to thus make good their claim to the Faulkner succession. The northern part of the state having one senator, they would demand the other. It is understood that on this arrangement Col. W. W. Arnold bases his hopes for the senatorship, and the following from the Charleston Evening Mail is evidence that that paper is posted about the "goings on": Since it has become apparent that Senator Camden cannot be elected by any possibility, he is re-elected to the United States senate in the event this legislature is Democratic, new candidates are making their appearance, hoping to receive Democratic honors. Hon. W. W. Arnold, of Wheeling, is one of these new aspirants, and he will not be a suzerain in the race. He has long been recognized as one of the most effective stump speakers in the Democratic party in the state, and has many admirers in the Democratic fold. In the meantime, however, the Republicans will capture the legislature and hag the game themselves. That is the present programme. G. A. D.
