Congressman Amos J. Cummings in the Chicago News: The edds and ends of the visit of the congressional delegation to Cuba in March last were instructive, pathetic, amusing and intereiting. None of the party could speak the Spanish language, and very few Spaniards can speak English. Every day incidents occurred, grave and gay. some gave rise to horror, others excited indignation and many threw those interested into loud laughter. Interpreterested into loud laughter. Interpre-ters were not always at hand, and when en service they did not always interpret correctly. The days were hot, with no files, and the nights cool, with few mos-quitos. Meals were served with near-ners and dispatch, but nearly all the dishes were tainted with garde. You smelt garlic in the wine shops, in churches, in hotel corridors and on the street corners. In Havann and Matancorners. In Havana and Matan as the water was as pure and as clear as crystal. Havana rets her supply from river springs hearly twenty miles away. In a queduct was built by a Cuban at an expense of $17,000,000. Spanish wines of excellent quality were cheap and abundant. Not a drunken man was seen in the entire trip. No issuits were offered, and profered courtesles were invariably reciprocated. The starving reconcentrado, however, was omnipresent. The wan face and desnating eye were ever before you. the water was as pure and as clear

Of the hundreds seen by the visiting grangers, noe one, however pressed by hunger, made any effort to appropriate what did not belong to him. Between the squalld huts in the trochas a few tomato vines had been planted and the fruit was ripening beneath the blazing sun; yet no starving creature evinced a disposition to rob his fellow sufferer of the product of his labor. There were very few negroes among the reconcentrados. Indeed, but one black in the throes of death from starvation was seen. This was at Matanzas. The party was returning to the city from a visit to a hospital in its outskirts. While crossing a stone bridge over the river something like an overturned iron statue lay below on the sward of the bank. It was the skin and bone of a gigantic negro, entirely nude. He was in the last agonles of starvation. He lay partly upon his side in the bot sun, with knees crooked and head There were very few negroes among the lay party upon his side in the hot sun, with knees crooked and head upon his left arm. When we leaned over the parapet and addressed him he made no reply and showed no sign of life. A moment afterward a buzzard swooped over him, fanning his shrunken shank with its wings. And still no sign of life was shown. Again we shouted from the parapet, but the figure remained motionless. Suddenly the head was raised and the long, bony right arm moved in a feeble effort to scratch the haked thigh.Gazing steadily at the water in which young mullet were swarming and jumping, he faintly moaned and again assumed a recumbent position. Possibly he was deaf, for he seemed to be utterly unaware of our presence. Nor did he evince any interest when a peseta was thrown within his reach. Not far away an immense, net, with thousands of meshes and hundreds of corks, was stretched upon the grass to dry. It had evidently been recently used, for silvery scales were still gilstening in its meshes. When the civil guard who piloted the party was asked thy the reconocentrados did not sustain life by catching fish he shrugged his shoulders and repiled:
"They are not allowed to do so."
"Why not?" was the next query.
"Because they have no license. It takes money to get a license and they have no money."
It was afterward learned that the gisante negro died as the sun went downdied or strength of the content of the sun went downdied or strength of the sun went downdied or strength of the strength of the sun went downdied or strength. A moment afterward a buzzard ed over him, fanning his shrunken

It was afterward learned that the glantle negro died as the sun went downdled of starvation while the jumping mullet within ten feet of him were sprinkling his wasted frame with water. a statue was being built in one of the naves of the church under which the remains are to be buried anew. A starving woman with an emaciated infant came through the doorway used by workmen and followed the congressional party, mournfully appealing for aims. A verger drove her into the street. Within three minutes she entered the cathedral by another door and again besought assistance. The verger was showing the party the magnificent vestments of the archbishop of Havana worn on fete days. They were stiff with gold embroidery and were sprinkled with diamonds, rubies, sapphires and other precious stones, valued at hundreds of thousands of dollars. A second verger rushed from behind a statue of the Madonna, selzed the poor creature, turned her around and she was again driven from the church before any of the party-could contribute to relieve her distress.

Another characteristic scene occurred on the Punta, opposite Morro castle. When the heat became insufferable two of the congressmen were in the habit of driving to this spot to enjoy the coof sea breeze. It was flanked by an old fortification and a lumber yard, with a bulkhead and a small pier near by. A negro, naked to the waist and burefooted, frequented the place. The excitement spread to others in the vicinity. Three or four wretched sufferers were sitting beneath the pier in the shade of the bulkhead. The tide was low. And the Startling News was not Known Until Afterward.

Cycling Gazette: A cyclist whom we will call Baxter was strolling along the avenue when he noticed a pretty girl in a neat cycling costume standing by a tandem. She had her back turned to him, but he saw that she wore a trim costume, had a neat ankle and a nicely arranged lot of hair. Baxter is very particular about a girl's hair. This girl looked so attractive that he paused. girl looked so attratcive that he paused. There was something pathetic in her attitude, he thought. Was she waiting for a cavaller to join her on the tandem. A wild idea entered Baxter's head. He would do a daring thing. He walked up to the girl. She turned a frank, merry face on him as he approached. "Pardon me." he laughingly said, "but are you looking for an accompanist?" and he pointed to the tandem. "Well," she smilingly answered, "now that you mention it, I guess I am."

A moment later they were whirling up the street. When it began to grow dark they turned back.

"Why, said the girl, "I thought it was yours."

"Heavens, no!" groaned Baxter.
"But you acted as though it was yours," said the girl.
"What shall we do?" moaned the girl.
"Take it back," said Baxter.
So they rode back in silence, and when they were about a block away the cirl said: girl said:

'I guess I'll stop here." Leaving the tandem as near to the place where he saw it as he could, he scuttled away in the darkness.

The tendency in the stock market today were much mixed and at times so conflicting as to make any general view confusing and difficult. It is fair to state, however, that in spite of the reactionary course of some stocks, the undertone of the market was very firm and even strong. In a general way it may be stated that the high priced leaders of the market with the single exception of sugar, came to a halt and even receded while the lower priced stocks, both in the railroad and industrial lists were lifted to a level more commensurate with the high level attained by the leaders. The grangers, except Burlington, all closed lower than last night. Burlington was sustained by rumors of approaching action towards refunding some of its high interest hearing hoads.

CHICAGO-After a sensational break of 4 cents at the start to-day wheat closed firm, due to free buying by shorts on soft spots. July closed unchanged, September %@4c higher. Corn was %c better and oats unchanged. Pork was 30c and ribs 5c lower; lard unchanged. 30c and ribs 5c lower; lard unchanged. Everything in the way of news in wheat seemed bearish to-day at the start and the sentiment in full accord with the news. Liverpool cables showed 9½d decline for July and 2½d in September. In addition there was a report from New York that foreigners were selling at the seaboard, continued promise of a big wheat yield and indications of an early harvest in south and southwest. All this created a weak sentiwest. All this created a weak senti-ment, resulting in active figuidation short selling sales on stop loss orders which led to partial demoralization. July, which closed at 9134@92c yesterday, sold down to 87c and September 2cclined 14c. However, there were shorts galore and everyone had profit in their previous sales and saw fit to take it. Buying of that sort and against we-kly puts turned the market firm. Leiter brokers gave occasional support to July when it needed it. The shorts in September gave that the support it stood in need of every time it got under 7sc. Chicago received, 55 cars against 3 a year ago. Minnedpolis and Duluth received 210 cars against 383 last year. The export clearances from the Atlantic and seaboard ports were equal in wheat and flour to 455,000 bushels; July opened 364% lower at 87@89c, sold up to 90c, day, sold down to 87c and September 1e-

Weakness in corn, which existed at the start, was due to the heaviness of wheat. There was quite general buying later and the market eventually became strong. The weather was clear and warm throughout the corn belt. July opened %6% lower at 32%63%c, then up to 33%c and closed at 33%c.

After a weak opening oats gathered

After a weak opening oats gathered strength as the session advanced. The buying of July and selling of the Sep-tember option was the feature. July opened 40%c lower at 24c, sold down to 23%@24c, then up to 24%c, the closing to 23%@24c, then up to 24%c, the closing figure.

It looked at the start as if every broker in the provision pit had orders to sell pork. Prices suffered a severe de-cline. Much of the weakness was owing to the increase in Chicago of 13,000,000 pounds in stocks of ribs since May 1. Lard stocks were smaller and in con-squence prices were firm. July pork sequence prices were firm. July pork opened at 27½@42½c lower at $10 75@ 10 90, fell off to $10 72½, firmed up to $10 92½ and declined to $10 87½ at the $10 92½ and declined to $10 87½ at the close. July ribs opened 7½@10e off at $5 72½@5 75, advanced to $5 80, then weakened to $5 77½ at the close.
