PLAN SAVANNAH BRIDGE

Definite Site Selected Near Charleston With Funds Available

Charleston, July 25.—It appears that the Savannah river bridge, a most important link in the chain of vehicular bridges in the coastal region, will be under construction before long as a definite site has been fixed on and the necessary funds are reported to be in hand.

The proposed bridge across the Savannah will link in with the bridge nearing completion across the Edisto and the bridge to be built across the Santee. The Edisto and Savannah bridges will mean the opening of a motor highway between Charleston the two rivers have been crossed with old-fashioned ferries.

The Savannah Morning News of Saturday published the following:

A definite location for the Georgia Carolina bridge was chosen yesterday at a joint conference of the Chatham County commissioners and the Savannah river bridge commission of South Carolina, held in the county commissioners' rooms.

The site is that near a crossing of the Bampton road, the exact location of which will be determined by the Chatham County commissioners.

Hoover Raps Trade Slacker

Washington, July 20.—Any business man who deliberately depresses business and cuts down his working forces is a "criminal unfit to live in the world."

This declaration was made by Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce in the course of a discussion of business conditions.

"But I believe there are very few such men," he added. "I personally know a number of employers who are facing losses daily rather than turn out their workers."

Mr. Hoover said one of the most hopeful signs in the international trade situation is our fast reviving commerce with Great Britain.

BERGDOLL BRIBERY CHARGE IS DENIED

Washington, July 22.—"My answer to Mrs. Bergdoll's charges that I demanded $100,000 from her and that I obtained $5,000 to obtain her son's release, is that it is false in every particular," Maj. Bruce Campbell stated before the house Bergdoll committee today.

"There is not a word of truth in that," Major Campbell added.

Major Campbell admitted that he deposited $4,500 in bills with Wasserman Brothers, New York brokers, on February 20, 1920. Mrs. Bergdoll charged she paid $5,000 to her son Campbell the latter part of January, 1920. The major claimed that he had deposited more than $5,000 in the Seaboard National bank, of New York, in 1917.

"The public would not accuse me of accepting a bribe from the Bergdolls in 1917," he said. "I deposited that $5,000 in November or December, 1917. I can show that I was in position to have $5,000 without resorting to the Bergdoll bank account. It seems to me fair to presume that if I had $5,000 in 1917 I might have it in 1920."

Pressed by the committee, Major Campbell said that he would later trace the exact source of the $4,500 deposited with Wasserman Brothers.

"I desire to present evidence to corroborate my case," he said, "but it will require a little time."

He said papers bearing on the case are in a box car with his furniture somewhere between Long Island and Camp Pike, Arkansas.

Governor Cooper's Successor

Yorkville Enquirer.

"It is of great moment to South Carolina to know who will succeed Governor Cooper" said a prominent "down-State" citizen, who was talking it over with views and interviews the other day. "Conservation of resources and utilization of more assets are necessities for South Carolina. Some man big enough to tackle it and with brains and information sufficient to make it plain to the people might sweep things in the next gubernatorial campaign, things will probably go on in the old way, I suppose, but, Lord! what an opportunity for service! The people have made the game so that a poor man no matter what his ability, cannot play it; and they suffer the consequences. A destructive fight means nothing and gets nowhere. South Carolina has vast resources, were they utilized; and they can be utilized. Outside capital can be brought into develop them and people with the capital. As it is, our people cannot lift their eyes above graft, and the small loaves and fishes of political maneuvering. Why have not the lumber mills and timber owners paid taxes on their stumpage (standing timber) They have cut over a billion feet for twenty-three years annually. Why are we getting nothing out of our marine resources. Why are ten to twelve million acres of good land left idle. What are we doing to save our forests? a former acreage of 8,000,000 being reduced to 800,000, only one-tenth left us? Ought not these questions to be answered?"

Eventually, Why Not Now.

"Joe," snorted an ambitious father, "you're a spendthrift and a lazy good for nothing. Why don't you go out in the world and make something of yourself?"

"I would," whined the lazy man, "honest I would—I've been meaning to for a long time, but I haven't any money to start out."

"Well, that's better. That's more like it. If that's all that's troubling you I'll advance the money."

"I know it, but after I've spent it how'll I get back?"

Ignorant Bunch.

The prosecuting attorney had encountered a rather difficult witness. At length, exasperated, he asked the man if he was acquainted with any of the jury.

"Yes sir," announced the witness "more than half of them."

"Are you willing to swear that you know more than half of them?" demanded the lawyer.

"Why, if it comes to that," replied the witness, easily. "I'm willing to swear that I know more than all of them put together."

LINCOLN'S COMPROMISE

A story of Lincoln's early political life is told in John Wesley Hill's new book, "Abraham Lincoln, Man of God." It seems that in 1846, during a canvass for congress, Lincoln attended a preaching service of Peter Cartwright's. Cartwright called on all desiring to go to heaven to stand up. All arose but Lincoln. Then he asked all to rise who did not want to go to hell. Lincoln remained still seated. "I am surprised," said Cartwright, "to see Abe Lincoln sitting back there unmoved by these appeal. If Mr. Lincoln does not want to go to heaven and does not want to escape hell, perhaps he will tell us where he does want to go?" Lincoln slowly arose, "I am going to congress."—The Christian Register (Boston.)

Break in Sight?

Paris, July 23.—The Upper S. lesian crisis came to a head Saturday night when Great Britain formally warned France not to send troops into the plebiscite area because the "question is an international one and France can not act without permission of the Supreme Council."

France's reply was to order Marshal Foch to speed up the departure of the First Division, of which several contingents, including machine gun units and air squadrons, are en route.

That the breach in the Entente has become an abyss further was proven by the militant speech of King Feysal, who was crowned ruler of Mesopotamia Friday, before an imposing formation of British troops lined up for review.

Feysal told the swarthy hordes gathered before the Mesopotamian palace: "I am going to drive the French from Syria and return the country, which the French stole, to the Arabs."

Reports of the new monarch's speech, reaching Quai D'Orsay, acted as further fuel to the burning resentment of the French against the British methods by which Feysal was placed on the throne of Mesopotamia in return for huge oil and other concessions to England. The crown was placed upon Feysal's head over the bitter and vigorous opposition of the French government, of which the Arab leader is a sworn enemy.
