THE COW PEA.

Among the crops that should receive more attention from Southern farmers is the cow pea. It thrives on all soils, and succeeds under greater neglect and less cultivation than any crop grown in the South. There is a large number of varieties, and though some others are considered better for table use, the black is the most popular for a field crop, having the property of keeping sound and good on the ground all winter. May be sown broadcast and plowed in, or in drills two and a half feet apart, admitting of cultivation after wheat and oats, to be plowed in again, when in bloom, for green manuring, or allowed to ripen a crop, which is usually gathered by hand-picking. And, again they make most excellent food for horses and cows, if cut just as the first pods are formed, and fed green or cured. The roots will then immediately send up another growth that can be turned under for the benefit of the next crop. Probably, however, the most profitable use to which they can be turned is to be fed down to hogs, causing them to lay on flesh rapidly, though this will not be so firm and solid as corn-fed pork; but a week or two on corn before slaughtering remedies that defect. Cow peas are also valuable as a catch crop among corn, often producing a fine return when dropped in at the time the corn is laid by. In fact, they are a very important item on every Southern farm, and should be planted wherever there is vacant land, even as late as August, and utilized in some manner. If it is not desirable to make use of them in any of the above ways, they are always in good demand in market at fair prices.

SALT.—To every person whose diet consists largely of bread or its equivalent common salt is a positive necessity. It is a universal constituent of animal bodies, so universal, that, unless an animal can acquire it in one way another that animal cannot live. Widely diffused all over the world, it is taken up, too, by the roots of vegetables, and may also be found in their ashes. Dietetically regarded, salt is by no means in the same category with mustard, pepper, vinegar and other condiments. These are to be found in blood or muscle. Salt is. In one way or another, it is, in fact, the very essence of existence.

FACTS FOR THE FARMER.—It is worth while for all farmers, everywhere, to remember that thorough culture is better than three mortgages on the farm; that an offensive war against the weeds is five times less expensive than a defensive one; that good fences always pay better than a lawsuit with neighbors; that hay is a great deal cheaper made in summer than purchased in winter; that more stock perish from famine than founder; that a horse who lays ears back and looks lightning when any one approaches, is vicious; that scrimping the feed of fattening hogs is a waste of grain; that educating children properly is money lent at ten per cent.; that one evening spent at home in study is more profitable than ten spent in lounging around saloons and taverns.

Working horses twenty-five years old are very rare, and yet at this age a horse may be vigorous and useful. The duration of a horse's life is thirty years, if he is well cared for, and in his old age moderate work may be expected of him. A large proportion of horses are ruined before they are five years old by over-work, improper feeding, neglect and abuse. Neglect and improper feeding find more victims than overwork, for if a horse in his prime is properly fed and cared for, he can scarcely be hurt by steady work.

TO THE PUBLIC.

My customers know that I have heretofore led the "FURNITURE" trade of the South, in style, quality and price.

The time has come when these goods can be purchased as cheap from me as in the North and West. I do not get backwashed, but continually raise the standard of my goods, and add new styles. I have made reductions in prices wherever possible, and spared no expense to place in your hands a Price List that will help you to purchase goods.

I respectfully invite you to call and examine my stock and prices before purchasing elsewhere. Orders by mail will receive as much attention as if given in person.

I especially invite the list too long to describe and copy all the different prices of Bed-rooms, Parlor Suites, Dining Room, Office, Standing, Parlor and Ladies' Desks, Secretaries, Dwarf Libraries, and Book Cases, manufactured by me, and therefore, this list contains only a few of the prices of goods kept by me.

No charge for drays or packing.

Thanking you for past favors, I remain, yours respectfully,

HOPE FOR ALL!

Consumption is generally supposed to be an incurable disease. Why? Because medical men, who of old times should have been the last to encourage such an unphilosophical and dangerous assumption, have insisted upon and propagated it with a persistence and pertinacity that is incredible in the light of science and of truth. We used the term "dangerous" advisedly, for what can be more depressing and injurious to the consumptive than brooding over the idea—founded solely upon the fact of his physicians' inability to cure him—that he is mortal, and that the utmost that can be done for him is to render his exit from this world as easy as possible. Such melancholy and hopeless reflections as this belief engenders among consumptive patients, does as much, if not more, to hasten their departure for the land of shadows, as the tubercles in their lungs. Away with such a hopeless theory. Happily the Great Heavenly Father has provided a remedy for this terrible and distressing disease. It is the most positive testimony the monstrous fallacy. Dangerous as pulmonary phthisis is, its terrible ravages may be stayed and the lungs restored to a sound condition even after suppuration has taken place. Every experienced surgeon knows that post mortem examinations of aged persons who have died in the ordinary course of nature, and who have been afflicted with pulmonary phthisis, have repeatedly disclosed the traces of pulmonary ulcers entirely cicatrized. The argument, therefore, against the possibility of a cure for pulmonary phthisis because the immediate seat of the disease cannot be reached, has not a leg to stand upon. Over 400 specimens of the discovery of cicatrized ulcers in the lungs have been recorded by the medical faculty of Paris and other cities. Over 400 specimens of the discovery of cicatrized ulcers in the lungs have been recorded by the medical faculty of Paris and other cities. Over 400 specimens of the discovery of cicatrized ulcers in the lungs have been recorded by the medical faculty of Paris and other cities.

To treat any malady rationally its character and morbid influence must be known. The dissection of lungs has disclosed all the internal characteristics of consumption. We know that tubercles in the lungs vary in size from granules smaller than a pin's head to that of a large bean. These develop into open ulcers technically called cavities, which are surrounded by a membrane, a surface several inches in diameter. Their sacs are filled with a yellow, greenish, gray matter, and are covered with a membrane. These are highly inflamed, and the ends of the pulmonary artery and vein connecting with the diseased parts are closed with organized matter, forming a mass. Death must ensue either from suffocation or hemorrhage if speedily relief is not obtained. The lungs are so inflamed that the patient coughs which will enable the sufferer to raise and expectorate the poison making in the lungs. Over 400 specimens of the discovery of cicatrized ulcers in the lungs have been recorded by the medical faculty of Paris and other cities.
