AN ALLEGORY.

True leve, still born of beaven is blest with wings; And tired of earth, it plumes them back again -- And so we lose it.

In the bosom of a southern forest grew a leastiful flower; sweetest flower of that lonely region, Leaves of the purest white, unfolding for the ferms, &c., address A. R. EASTMAN, Pri ci first time to the world around, and revealing, as they did so, the fine and delicate droppings of violet and purple, which, like so much hidden wealth, had lain in its bosom. It; order was most exquisite; and no flower in all that forest could equal it for sweetness or for beauty. In excellence as in position it was equally

But its destiny was not to be thus always cast alone There came to it one merning early in May, a golden butterfly-a rover among the flowers -an aucient robber of their sweets. Gaily did he ply his flight through. out the forest, now here and there, sporting about in a sort of weary, errant unconsciousness. It was not long before he inhaled the odor; it was long before he saw the pure, levely leaves, and looked down, with an amorous eye upon its rich droppings of purple and violet, which nestled in the pure white and spotless bosom of the lone flower. Flying around in mazy, contracting circles, Le gazed long upon the leveliness of the flower and each moment he grew more and more enamored. "Surely," thought he, "this must be a flower by itselflove's own flower-bloom g and budding for my eyes only and denied to all besides. It was my good for-tune to have found it-I will drink -I'll nestle in its bosom-Ull enjoy Me its charms, as often have I enjoyed the charms of a thousand others, as lovely as this."

Even then with the thought came upon the bosom of the flower. There's but a slight effort to escape from the embrace of this intruder. The flower murmus a weak dis-ent, but the murmur dies to a soft sight, and is inhaled as so much nectar by the close press-ing lips of the Putterfly. He sings and draw a Wate's, Sewing Machine Pi ano, or some article of value. embraces, every day becoming more and more found, the lone flower ever looking forth to receive him. She surrendered her very soul to his care, and her pure leaves, greentinged with his golden ringlets, while his kisses stained with yellow the pure, delicate lovetiness of her lips. But she heeded not this, so long as the embrace were fervent-the kiss still warm-

At length she murmured, her represents and the grievance must be great when love will venture so far. "Why," said she, "Oh Why hast thou lingered away so long?" Why dost thou not now, as before, vie with the sun in thy advances. I have looked for thee in vain. The yellow beetle has been all the morning busying alout me, but I frowned upon his alout me, but I frowned upon his approaches, the green grasshopper had a song underneath my bush, and told me a dull story of love he had for me in his bosom; and more than case, the glittering humming-bird has sought my embrance but I shut leaves ngainst him—thou has been slow to be me. Thou whom I have longed so much to see. Gaily then the butterfly replied to these reproaches, nor as he spoke did he heed the last, fast increasing paleness of the flower.

"O'er a thousand forest I have been plying, each us beautiful as these: and a thousand flowers I have been tending, none less lovely to the sight than thou. How could thou dream that with golden ringlets, board, free and beautiful, like, mine, in a single lone spot I should linger, of the wide world unknowing aught? No, no, mine is an excursive spirit, for a thousand affections made; would thou have me like a spider working still to girdle in myself.

The isolated flower made a murlong after it had made it. "Ah now GEORGE A. BOW MAN, A gent, I know my error-having no wings myself to mate with a lover who had, -Alas! that I should have loved so fondly and so foolisly; for while thou has gone over a thousand forests seeing a thousand flowers, I have known -only looked only lived for a single butterfly."

The false one was far away after this to another forest; for his ear loved not reproaches, and he had sense if not feeling enough to see that they were most justly uttered. The flower noted its departure, and its last sigh was an audible warning to the young bud which it left behind it. The wood piris heard the sign and the warning-and when the Bud began to expand in the warm sunshine, he pursualed the black-browed spider to spin his web, and frame his snare in the thick bushes that hung around it, many were the wanton butterflies, after this who coming to pray upon innocent affection, became entargled, Just received and for sale low for and most justly perished in the guardian net-work thus raised up to protect | Cash at

CONSUMPTION. ITS CURE AND ITS PREVENTIVE.

By J. H. BCHENCK, M. D. By J. R. SCHENCE, M. D.
Many a human belief has passed away for whose leath there was no other resent timb the next ct of them and Indisputably proven finants of cure, those near and dear to family and friends are deeping the decanless slumber into which, had been calmly adouted. Those near and dear to family and friends are steeping the dreamless slamber into which, had they calmly adopted ***DR. JONEPH II, SUMENUE SIMPLE TREATMENT,** and availed themselves of his wolkderfully efficacious medicines, they would not have failed.
Dr. Schenck hay he his own case proved that wherever sufficient virally remains, that vitally, by his medicines and his directions for their use, is quickened into healthful vigor.

In this statement there is nothing presumptious. To the faith of the invalid is made no representation that is not a thousand times substantiated by living and visible works. The theory of the cure building the substantiated by living the properties of the cure of th

A SUPPLY OF GOOD RECOD.

The Sea-weed Tonie, in conjunction with the Pills, permeates and assimilates with the food. Chyllication is now progressing without its previous tortures. Digestion becomes painless, and the cure is seen to be at hand. There is no more statilence, no bancerbitton of the stonach. An appetite sets in. Now boulks the greatest Blood Parifier ever yet given by an indigent father to suffering man. Schenek's Pulmenté Syring comes in to perferri its functions and to basien and complete the cure. It enters at once upon its work. Natiue can not be cheated. It collects and ripeus the impaired and discaved portions of the lungs. In the form of gatherings, it prepares them for expectoration, and list in a very short time the mainty la vanquished, the foltrell throne that it occupied is requested in and new, and the patient, in all the againty of regained vigor, steps forth to enjoy the manhood or womanhood that was:

The second thing is, the patients must stay in a warm room until new food when the lungs are discaved, but it in make provented or a cure can not be effected. Fresh air and riding out, especially in this section of the country, in the fall and white season, are all wrong. Physicians who recommend that course loss their patients, if they must walk about the room as much and as fast as the strength will bear, to jet up a good circulation of blood. The philicints must level in a good spirits—be determined to get w

"I was welched shortly after my recovery," added the Doctor, "then looking like a mere skeleton; my weight it is two hundred and twenty-live (225) pounds, and for years I have enjeyed uninterrupted health."

Dr. Schenck has discontinued his professional visits to New York and Roston. He or his son, Dr. J. H.
