BLACKSBURG BUDGET.

Mintz. orrespondence of the Yorkville Enquirer. BLACKSBURG, May 10 .- Our town has been almost deserted by the farmers for the past two weeks. The weather has been so favorable that they could not afford to lose the opportunity for finishing their cotton planting and working over their early corn and potatoes. A good many of our people tion of their gardens and the care of their sioner. cows than formerly, as they derive a considerable part of their income from the sale of milk, butter and vegetables, since the The People Hard at Work-Too Busy establishment of good hotels has brought more people to our town, and thereby created a demand for such things. There is another industry which would pay well, and should be engaged in by those who are pre-pared for it, and that is the raising of sheep. Formerly they were quite abundant in this section and throve well; but since the 'stock" law was put in force, the difficulty of keeping up pasture fences, etc., has caused our farmers to almost abandon sheep raising. Let some of them revive it again. Good mutton will always sell, and at a bet-year there is an especial demand for fat lambs. Let those of our farmers who can, many sources of income.

DOBSON'S RACKET.

BUIL I Worked up; promotons never seemed to fall in anybody's way faster than they did in mine.

Everybody said when I married: "Bright's a lucky dog." My wife was the belle of the city; it would have gladdened the hearts of fifty fellows whom I might name to have won her if they could, but her love was reserved for me.

Then the children—well, well, a father's praises are usually accepted with grains of allowance; I won't say anything that might seem to be mere parental rapture.

Now, I've mentioned the reason why the world thinks me a happy man. Perhaps you think the world is right? My God! I wish it was.

The other day an old friend, a school chum, called on me at the store; we got to talking about life insurance. I don't know how many life insurance—men have tried to induce me to insure my life; I always put them off. Frankly, I never thought seriously about needing life insurance—never thought seriously about needing life insurance—life insurance—life insurance—life insurance—life insurance—life insurance—never thought seriously about needing life insurance—life insurance—life surance—never thought I needed it Now. I remember that I said to myself, "After awhile." I knew I hadn't saved any money, but then I would. Once an agent tried to tell me it was my duty towards my wife and children to insure; I thought him impertinent. He made me angry; I told him I knew my own business.

My friend urged me to take a policy, as he had lately engaged in the life insurance business. Finally, I said I would, thinking it a favor to him; it was easier to say yes than no. I went to be examined by the medical examiner. Two or three days later I was asked to call again. I was examined a second time. I thought the proceedings a bore, and began to wish I had not signed the application.

A week after my friend came into the store; I asked him about my insurance, and he said the company had rejected the application. He didn't say it quite as direct as this, but in a roundabout hesitating way. He tried to be gentle in imparting the information.

At last I came to understand that I was uninsurable. "Kidney disease—incurable," the examiner said. I consulted an eminent physician; he confirmed it—quietly told me I might live two years.

Two years!—two years in which to prepare to two years.

Two years!—two years in which to prepare to die! I dare not tell my wife; it would be well enough by-and-by. Like a condemned felon, I count the days and hours—days and hours in the days and hours—days and hours in the days and hours—days and hours in the days. enough by-and-by. This a commentary in the days and hours—days and hours—which to breathe silent farewell to those I love. What can I do in two years—such years? What provision can I make for them? I said I never thought seriously about life insurance. I never did until now, when it is too late.

"Uninsurable!" rings in my ears. Never did a leper shudder more at those words descriptive of his fearful doom, "Unclean! unclean!" than I do as the voice in my ear says, "Uninsurable!" It says more than that. It tells me of the cruelty of my procrastination; it tells me that I am dead, that my dear wife and children are destitute. My God! it is hard to bear. Everything that made me happy before makes me wretched now. The agony of the thought of parting from my family, terrible as it is, is as nothing to the certain knowledge that I shall leave them comparatively poor. I have figured it all out; after any in my funeral expenses there will be barely paratively poor. I have figured it all out; after paying my funeral expenses there will be barely enough left to supply them with the necessaries of life forsix months. * * * My friends have begun to notice that "Bright has acted queer lately." * * * I saw a young woman today begging on the street, and with her were two little children, who tugged at her skirt and cried: "Mamma, please take us home; we are so cold and hungry." The Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association of SILVER BELL FRECKLE New York, has been in existence eleven years. It is incorporated under the laws of that State. It has a Reserve Fund of $3,230,404, and every dollar of this amount is for the protection of policy holders. It has over $218,000,000 of insurance n force. It has paid death claims to the amount of $12,556,218, and has never swindled or attemptd to swindle a beneficiary out of a single cent. It furnishes life insurance at about half the rate charged by the "old line" companies. It has saved its policy holders over $30,000,000 as com-

THERE are hundreds, yes, thousands of men all over this country who thoroughly realize that no plan has yet been devised by which they can more easily and surely provide for those dependent upon them in case they are taken away by death, than a life insurance policy in a first class company. They all expect to attend to the matter some day—next fall, next year, when their financial condition is such that they

following extract from The Insurance Post, of London, England, and learn what one who speaks from bitter experience has to say on the subject:

I am looked upon as a happy man. The world says: "There is Bright; he's a lucky dog. What a lovely wife he has and what fine children! If you want to see a charming home, look in at Bright's."

I was a happy man; I used to fancy myself one of the most fortunate fellows alive. I felt proud of the way I had got along; sometimes I used to think I surely must have been born under a lucky star; I seemed to prosper in everything. When I began in the store I was the junior clerk, but I worked up; promotions never seemed to fall in anybody's way faster than they did in mine.
