News Summary.

Dr. WILLIAM GILMORE SIMMS is in New York at present.

It is said that Rev. J. T. HEADLEY has found a congenial work in the biography of General L. O. (Detective) BAKER.

Dr. J. B. IRVING, late of Charleston, S. C., has been elected Secretary of the American Jockey Club, of New York, of which AUGUST BELMONT, Esq., is the President.

Gen. CHARLES DEVENS, after more than five years spent in the military service of his country, has returned to Worcester, Mass., and will resume the practice of his profession.

Governor BROWNLOW, of Tennessee, has issued a proclamation calling the Legislature of the State to meet at Nashville the 4th of July, for the purpose of ratifying the amendment to the Constitution of the United States, just proposed by Congress.

A meeting of negroes was lately held in Cherokee county, Alabama, where they bound themselves together not to work for less than $2 per day during the present harvest, under penalty of receiving fifty lashes. Consequently the white men are gathering the harvest at $1.50 per day.

Mme. JULIE DE MARGUERITE, well known as a dramatic critic and authoress of various works, died suddenly of heart disease, in Philadelphia, on the morning of the 21st. She was for many years a writer for various journals in New York city and elsewhere. Her daughter recently made her debut on the stage in Baltimore.

The Chapel Hill, N. C., University celebrated its sixtieth commencement a few days since. Ex-Gov. YANKEE was present, and addressed the literary societies. The degree of D. D. was conferred on Rev. N. F. REID, of the North Carolina Conference of the Methodist Church. The degree of LL. D. was conferred on Judge READE, of the Supreme Court of North Carolina, and on ANDREW JOHNSON, President of the United States.

The Leavenworth papers announce a thriving trade with Mexico. Scarcely a day passes without witnessing the departure of one or more long trains, each consisting of six to a dozen or fifteen wagons, and each wagon carrying nearly 5000 pounds freight, hauled by six or eight yoke of cattle. The goods embrace every article known in trade, but principally dry goods, groceries, hardware, clothing, boots and shoes.

In Great Britain the post office money-order system is very extensively used by the people. During the year 1865, the British post office issued money-orders for $69,146,450, and paid orders for $90,732,760. Upon these sums the commissions retained by the post office amounted to $785,565. The British post office sells money orders upon post offices in the British colonies, Turkey and Egypt, and is now considering the extension of the system to France, Prussia and the South American States.

The San Francisco (Cal.) Bulletin remarks: "Our readers will scarcely need to be told that recent attempts at silk culture in California have been uniformly successful. The climate is all that could be desired for the purpose; the soil is admirably adapted to the growth of the mulberry tree; Chinese labor, which is exactly adapted to that business, is abundant and cheap, and it is by no means improbable that our State may become the Italy or France of the United States in point of silk culture."

The Washington correspondent of the Commercial Advertiser says: "Dr. CRAVEN's statement of the ironing of JEFF. DAVIS at Fortress Monroe, is published here to-day, and has excited much comment. It is well known that it was not done by order of the President, or of the Cabinet, or of Gen. GRANT; but that the responsibility rests on EDWIN M. STANTON, who sent his right hand man, General LAFAYETTE C. BAKER, down the Potomac on a special steamer, with written authority to have the manacles applied."

The Boston Journal says that the statue of Hon. EDWARD EVERETT has been completed in clay by Mr. BROWN, and that it will be ready for dedication in May. It is to be cast in bronze at Munich, but should the impending war prove of long continuance the arrangements now made may possibly be interfered with. The Committee having sufficient funds have also given to THOS. BALZ, Esq., now in Italy, an order for a bust in marble of Mr. EVERETT, which will be placed in the Public Library. The statue by Brown is highly spoken of by those abroad who have seen it, and flattering letters of its faithfulness to the original have been received.

A correspondent of the Memphis Argus, writing from Egg's Point, Mississippi, says: "Ten or twelve miles below here, at Lake Washington, lives Lieutenant-General WADSWORTH, the second greatest cavalry chieftain of the late Confederacy. He owns extensive plantations, upon which he divides his time, devoting himself chiefly to the congenial pursuits of a Southern gentleman—books, planting, and the chase. His former slaves remain with the General, and are represented as contented and industrious."

The General's residence is at "Wild Woods," a few hundred yards from the lake. Called by its sylvan title from the fact of the house having been built by the present proprietor some twenty years ago, on the very edge of a dense cane brake.

At the commencement, last Thursday, of the New York University, the following degrees were conferred: LL.D.—ELIAH LOR, of New York; Rev. SAMUEL W. FISHER, D.D., President of Hamilton College; CHAS. DEXTER CLEVELAND, Philadelphia; CHAS. E. ANTHONY, A. M., Professor in College of New York. D.D.—Rev. ALEX. R. THOMPSON, A. M., New York; E. O. FLAGG, A. M., New York; THOMAS PHILLIPS, England; Rev. JAMES DICK, A. M., Ireland; Rev. PETER STRYKER, A. M., New York. A new degree of Doctor of Physical Science was conferred on ERNEST W. SMITH. The Chancellor announced that the lectures of the University Medical College will commence September 3, in the building of the New York City Hospital. The Medical College, it will be remembered, was adjoining to the Academy of Music, and shared its fate in the recent conflagration.

Some gentlemen favorable to the MAXIMILIAN Government in Mexico recently invited Senator NICHOLAS COLfax, Representative GARFIELD, and a few other Congressmen, to a dinner at Willard's Hotel, in Washington; and when the time came for speech-making, NICHOLAS COLfax and GARFIELD arose, and in succession denounced the Empire with great bitterness. A correspondent, giving a report of what transpired, says: "They vehemently protested against any movement having the recognition of MAXIMILIAN for its object, stating at the same time, in the most peremptory manner, that the United States would never allow the establishment of a monarchical form of government upon this continent, and declared emphatically the policy of the Government to be adverse to MAXIMILIAN and favorable to the maintenance of the Monroe doctrine." Among gentlemen it is not considered good breeding to abuse hospitality by insulting the host, but of course it is different with radical Congressmen.

CHARLESTON

TUESDAY MORNING, JUNE 26, 1866.

SOUTH CAROLINA RAILROADS AND SECURITIES.

"An Observer," in our issue of this morning, quotes the present market value of certain Railroad and Corporation Securities in Georgia, and considers them evidence of the able management of such enterprises in our sister State, while at the same time he desires to learn if our own improvements and securities of the same kind will be able to show as flattering a condition.

At present there are many causes to prevent the bonds and stocks issued in this State from ranking as high as those of Georgia; and, among others, we would mention that, having a greater extent of fertile land, and a more rapid increase of population, her railroads have met with a larger amount of business and have been better supported. With the exception of the Hamburg Branch of the South Carolina Road, most of our roads have no profitable connecting roads, or are in such an incomplete condition as to work to great disadvantage. The City of Augusta was in the most flourishing condition during the entire war, and has been doing a very profitable business since. Savannah also suffered but little, and since the war, in consequence of the advantages enjoyed by the navigation of the Savannah River, her commerce has been most flourishing.

Charleston was largely destroyed by fire, thousands of her buildings were damaged by shells, and her communications with the interior having been destroyed, her business passed almost entirely into the hands of her neighbors. It will take time and energy to rectify these evils, but we hope our public men and those occupying positions of responsibility will be found equal to the emergency.

We do not wish to be understood, however, as attributing all our present shortcomings in the management of business affairs to circumstance which were beyond our control. A little additional energy and determination would, no doubt, much assist our onward progress; and if we do not speedily exert such qualities, there are business communities near us which will profit at our expense. Our railroads should be managed quickly as much for the public benefit as for private profit, and a more enlarged spirit will have to characterize their future policy if they wish to attain success.

M. DE LAMARTINE.

There is no sight more pitiful or more humiliating than genius outliving itself, and recording its own imbecility. This occurs every now and then,—furnishing a wholesome check to our tendency to hero worship. The world, generally, is very indulgent to these enfants gâtes, and listens, with well-bred amiability, to their querulous complaints. Their past virtues and merits entitle them to this consideration, and it is liberally accorded to them. But endurance has its limits, and human nature is capable only of a certain degree of forbearance. This past, the continuous grumbler, growler or beggar becomes an object of common contempt. To this pass has long since come the once illustrious author, poet, orator, historian and statesman (?) whose name heads this article.

LAMARTINE has been a spoiled child for a great many years. He was worshipped so much and so long, till it became quite natural to him to think himself the national idol. And being an idol, he, of course, laid claim to the quantum of offerings, golden and silver, usually made at such shrines. The sacrifices were cheerfully brought. Sr. PAUL says, "an idol is nothing,"—it, therefore, has no wants, and a golden trinket or a silver censor is a lasting gift. Not so with M. DE LAMARTINE. On the contrary, his wants are very many, and his debts have become proverbial, both for their number and magnitude, and more especially for the regularity of their periodical recurrence. Those debts have been paid again and again; princely sums have been subscribed for worthless romances, or romancing "Memoires," with a view to relieve Monsieur of his embarrassments. It was all in vain. The disease is incurable—a cancer gnawing the old man's vitals, growing by what it feeds on. We read, in the last Paris papers, articles headed "Les embarras de M. de Lamartine."

The old gentleman, our readers will please recollect, has recently been converted to the Bonaparte faith. After having been a Democrat and a Republican all his life, he now, in his dotage, has gone over, soul and body, to the "Manifest Destiny" creed. Accordingly he is to be rewarded. There is now a project before the French ministry to award M. DE LAMARTINE a pension, to enable him to pay his debts. The post is to assign to the State all his lands, revenues, credits, and personal property of every description; in consideration of which the Corps Legislatif is to vote him an annual pension of 40,000 francs,—about $8000.

But we are told M. DE LAMARTINE is unwilling to receive the pension on the terms proposed, and threatens his beloved France that he will leave her, never again to return; that he has already turned his eyes to Sicily. He will leave behind him 800,000 francs of debts.

But why does he propose to leave France? Because he is weary of the innumerable annoyances put upon him by some of his extremely inconsiderate creditors. The greater part of them never trouble him. Bailiffs, constables, huissiers, etc., are not the congenial companions a retired poet would choose, and M. DE LAMARTINE very properly leaves an ungrateful country that will not protect him from such desagréments. These unappeasable creditors just referred to are the vintners of Maconnaise, who have furnished the poet's cellar. These, he says, he will pay as he can. He makes one last, generous proposition, however, viz.: If all his creditors will pledge themselves not to molest him, he will remain.

M. DE LAMARTINE refuses to receive the 40,000 per annum offered him by M. ROUHER, on the part of the Emperor, because, it is said, his niece is dependent upon him. He has, besides, other family debts, and "debts of the heart," and debts of honor; and he cannot bring himself to think that all these sacred claims, unsatisfied, are to be entombed with him.

It is estimated that LAMARTINE, since the coup d'état, has expended from five to six millions of francs. M. MINES, when editor of the Civilisateur, assisted him often, when in difficulty; and the total amount paid him, or for him, by M. MINES is nearly 700,000 francs. The Entretiens, for the last ten years, have annually brought LAMARTINE 150,000 francs. The forty volumes of the complete edition of his works, have netted him something over a million; so with his later works, "La Vie de lord Byron," and his "Fior d'Aliza," these all have brought him large returns.

Yet it is said the poet is very simple and frugal in his habits, and that his debts are more due to his want of "management" than to wasteful extravagance or habits of luxury. He became early acquainted with the fatal art of borrowing; and finding this an easy method of discommodating himself of an importunate dun, he resorted to it on the least provocation—borrowed from Peter to pay Paul, and paying the apostolic rates usual on such occasions. What would old SAM. JOHNSON say to LAMARTINE's balance sheet, when he was surprised, almost past recovery, at the amount of GOLDSMITH's debts, and at the extent to which poor NOLLY had been trusted?

The present age can hardly be deemed unmindful of the merits and claims of literary men. The considerations, both of honor and emolument, awarded them by a grateful and admiring public, give abundant proof of this. And no country, we believe, has been more liberal to her men of letters, science or art, than France. And we can need no higher evidence of this fact than the brief narrative just given, where it is shown that, after all the favors already heaped upon the poor old poet, the nation is unwilling to see him suffer in his old age, and offers to bestow upon him an annual sum of $8000, and to continue to pay him handsomely for his writings besides. We have here, in vivid contrast, a very pleasing and a very mournful spectacle: Liberal and grateful France, and hard-up, begging LAMARTINE.
