The case of BRECKINEIDGE's administrators against Lze's executors and others has been perplexing the mind of Kentucky ever since 1811. John Breckin-RIDGE and GEORGE NICHOLAS, two of Kentucky's ablest men, made a contract with John Lee for the purchase of 16,000 acres in Bath County, and hence arose an involved series of legal distractions without end. From, 1795 to 1867 is bridged by this tedious law suit, to which JARNDYCE versus JARNDYCE prejudicially upon immigration, and very much looks feeble and uncomplicated. The Court of Appeals has decided substantially in favor of BRECKINGDOE'S heirs, the amount sued for being about $30,000. The Commissioners of the Kentucky Institution for the education and training of feeble-minded children have just made a report to the Legislature, in which they call attention to a practice which is quite common in Kentucky—the marriage of blood relations. They add their testimony to the abundant evidence already collected by physicians and philanthropists, that a large per centage of deaf mutes and of the blind, a limited per centage of limatics, and no doubt a much larger one than either of feeble-minded or idiotic children, are the time filled with children whose parents are so related-sometimes as many as four from one family-and in the case of idiots, of a still larger number in a family. It is a fearful penalty to which persons so related render themselves liable by forming the matrimonial relation, and which they, in nearly every instance, incur. The Commissioners urge that, as the State is compelled to support the issue of these unwise unions, they should be prohibited by law.

"THE LATE RIOT IN CHARLESTON."

We regret very much to see the Associated Press lending itself to sensational telegrams which can only do mischief. The telegram in reference to a disturbance n the streets of this city, after the adjournment of the mass meeting of colored people, is an instance. It concludes thus:

"Considerable excitement prevails throughout the city and grave apprehensions of further trou-

Now this disturbance was one of those incidents which might have happened in the skirts of any large crowd. It was not known a hundred yards from the spot where it occurred, and was quieted without difficulty and without violence or resistance. No good can come of this sort of sensation manufacture. The country is watching with anxiety everything happening here which can be made to support party theories either way, and no wise purpose is served by exaggerating every little disturbance into a riot, and inducing people to suppose that this city is not quietly attending to its own business. All our citizens are showing good sense and good temper, and we prefer to have the credit of it.

We hope all our exchanges who have pubisked the telegram in question, will also publish this correction.

THE EDITORIAL PROPESSION.

Dr. LEHMANN, the editor of the Magazine for Foreign Literature, published in Berlin, at a recent festive gathering, in honor of the completion of the 70th volume of that magazine, delivered an interesting speech cn the vocation and the duties of journalism, from which we translate the following extract:

SCHILLER'S celebrated line "Dem Mimen no lasting wreaths upon the mimic brow,) is more applicable to the journalists than to the artists who nightly tread the scenic stage. For while every history of the drama delights in singing the praises of TALMA, MARS, GAR-RICE, SIDDONS, ECKHOF, IFFLAND, FREDERIKA BETHMANN, and others,-not a single one of our many histories of literature even names those journalists of the golden period of our literature, who came up to the full measure of the requirements of their time, and thus, by the poet's dictum, have lived for all time. The rocation of the journalist, in the service of literature, science, or politics, not unfrequently equires more mental labor, and a greater sacrifice of time and strength,—a mere total abnegation of all the pleasures of life, than the pursuit of many other writers, who are rewarded with more than cotemporary fame This is easily explained. The journalist, whose mental power is necessarily divided, whose atention is directed upon widely diversified objects, is rarely permitted to concentrate his industry, his entire energies, upon one point, and produce a perfect work, which would merit a place in a history of the literature of

is time.

The journalist's work is never completed. It his time. is finished with every evening, only to recommence with the following morning. It may the mother of twelve children, the grandmother of be likened to a river, running from ninety-one, the great-grandmother of two hundre1 its source in the rock to the great sea, shedding freshness and beauty as it passes along, to gladden the heart of man,-carries his ships on its bosom, increases his wealth, and bestows blessings and benefits innumerable, but which, in return for all these services, receives neither thanks nor praise. plodding task, taking as little heed of the neglect and ingratitude of man as does the grand and placid river. If he can but contribute his mite toward the great end of journalism,-the amelioration, mental, physical, and political, of his race,-he feels that he has not lived in vain, but has left his footprints

GERMAN IMMIGRANTS.

In view of the steps taken by our Legislature o induce an influx of foreign labor, the following article, translated from the N. Y. Staats Zeitung, the leading German organ in the country, may not be uninteresting to our readers; as it will show the great counteracting agency the corresponding difficulties our agents will have to cope with.

After giving its reasons for anticipating great increase of emigrants from Germany to the United States, the Staats Zeitung says: "It is clearly our duty to assist these immi grants with honest and unbiassed counsel, in the choice of their future home, and this the more because of the number of States and Territories, to whose interest it is,-nay, which find it necessary, to attract immigrants or settlers. Not only the new States, and developing territories of the West and Southwest; not only the ten unreconstructed Southern States, but also the so-called Border States-Missouri, Tennessee, Kentucky, West Virginia aud Maryland-all stand in need of the means and muscle of these expected immigrants, and are desirous of obtaining them. Many of these small parties of emigrants have, under such circumstances, been enticed to se 'one of this country not suitable for them from political, social or climatic considerations, and that way or another, deceived, must be considered as matter of course, amid such a want of, and chase after, immigrants and settlers. And no less certain is it that, unless repetitions of such occurrences are prevented, it must act cially draw the attention of the public towards the redu lessen the stream of this greatly desired addition to our population."

It then quotes a paragraph from the New York Times, in which it is stated that in Louisiana, and other parts of the South where Ger mans had been employed on plantations, they had complained of neglect and bad treatment.

The Staats Zeitung then proceeds: "It is unnecessary to stop and consider these charges, which we do not now meet for the first time. For our present purpose it matters onot whether they are true wholly, or only in part. Laborers coming fresh from Euoffering of the marriage of first cousins. The rope should not be sent to the South, but to the charitable institutions of the State are all the Middle and Western States. The acclimated Northern laborer, farmer, planter and business man, and not the raw European, should be looked to, to furnish the labor and the capital needed in the South. The European should fill up the gaps caused by this migration in the North and West. The disordered political and ocial condition of the South, also, falls much more lightly upon citizens from the Northern States than upon the entire stranger, who, ignorant of the language, cannot even make himself understood.

"We therefore advise Germans, more es ecially for the present, not to settle in any of the Southern States, that have recently suffered by the war, nor indeed in any of the slave States, Maryland and West Virginia alone excepted, unless the emigrants intend to settle in any of

"There is always a risk in contracts for labor, on the other side of the Atlantic, and we strenuously advise against it. The emigrant hould carefully husband his cash, so that, in case judicious and reliable friends have not preceded him, he may remain a few days in the port where he lands, and, if he have no acquaintances there, worthy of confidence, he may seek advice of the Germon Society, or of ome reliable agency, in reference to some point of destiny, suited to his circumstances and his means, where he may either remain for a while, or take up his permanent abode."

CHASTELLAR'S WHITE LIQUID

For Improving and Beautifying the Complexion,
The most valuable and perfect preparation in use, for giving the skin a beautiful pearl-like tint, that is only found in youth. It quickly removes Tan, Freches, Pinples, Bictches, Moth Putches, Saliowness. Exugitous, and all impurities of the skin, hindly healing the same leaving the skin white and clear as alshaster. Its use cannot be detected by the closest scrutiny, and being a vegetable creparation is perfectly harmless. It is the only article or the kind used by the French, and is considered by the Parisian as indispensable to a perfect toilet. Upwards of 30,000 bottles were sold during the past year, a sufficient guarantee of its efficacy. Price only 75 cents. Sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of an
