man a rugged at last. Now, to make a raid upon the commonwealth is what confederation proposes. In the first place, too, while the freeman is cultivating this very land, on equal terms with the owner—he lives in it and enjoys the fruits of his labor, protected by equal laws, with none to make him afraid. In many instances, they reap what they cultivate, and the crop is all their own. A bright future is before them, wherein they can see that their gradual earning, will soon enable them to buy land, so large freshets occurred in May and late June. The freshets were of great destruction to the crops on their banks. This week we have been deluged by heavy showers, and appearances this morning indicate several days rain. All the early wheat and corn and that above freshets is safe, but a continuance of rain will be disastrous to that planting. The cotton, which was promising before, suffered from too much wet, and we hear some complaint of rust.—Camden Journal,
