The Charleston News.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 13, 1869.

To Our Friends in the Country—Instructions to New Subscribers.

We desire, if possible, to make THE NEWS, which is already without exception the cheapest newspaper in the South, a regular visitor in every well regulated household in all the adjoining States. As an inducement to the planters to subscribe to THE NEWS before the expiration of the present year, we have arranged with Messrs. Walker, Evans & Cogswell, the publishers of the RURAL CAROLINIAN, to supply that new and superlative agricultural magazine, together with THE NEWS, to all new subscribers, at the following very low rates:

THE DAILY NEWS and the RURAL CAROLINIAN, one year, for $12 dollars and fifty cents.

THE TRI-WEEKLY NEWS and the RURAL CAROLINIAN, one year, for four dollars.

Subscriptions to the two publications may be sent either to the proprietors of THE NEWS, or to the proprietors of the RURAL CAROLINIAN. But persons desiring to avail themselves of this offer must do so before the first of January next, as the arrangement will not be extended beyond that period.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

—Gold closed steady at 126½.

—In New York cotton closed steady and active at 25 cents.

—In Liverpool cotton closed steady; uplands 11½d.

—A pneumatic tube has been laid in Chicago for the transmission of dispatches from the Board of Trade to the telegraph office.

—Senator Sprague, who had opened negotiations to purchase the National Intelligencer, has declined to buy that establishment.

—The Erie Railway Company announce that at the expiration of thirty days they will issue $5,000,000 of convertible bonds for the purpose of laying a third line of rails on the entire route.

—Communism has found a home in Iowa. Near Marengo there is a colony of 100 inhabitants, owning over 20,000 acres of land, and having all things in common. They are religious, strict and Germans.

—The Yerges case remains in statu quo, and it is believed that the Supreme Court will wait Congressional action, in accordance with the desire of President Grant, expressed through Attorney-General Hoar.

—One of the religious papers, commenting on the practice of having glowing epitaphs, says that "if some men could come out of their graves and read the inscriptions of their tombstones they would think they had got into the wrong grave."

—Travelers may now visit the Mosque of St. Sophia at Constantinople, and the Mosque of St. Omar, built on the site of the Temple at Jerusalem, without fear of molestation, the Sultan having revoked the law prohibiting Christians from entering the mosques.

—Ex-Governor Thomas G. Pratt, formerly United States senator from Maryland during a period of eight years, died at his residence in Baltimore on Tuesday, after a severe illness and much suffering, from disease of the heart. Governor Pratt was in the sixty-sixth year of his age.

—The holy vessels and relics of the temple at Jerusalem, some of which were said to have been descended from the time of Moses, are safe at the bottom of the Mediterranean Sea. They were lost when being transferred from Rome to Carthage, 400 years after they had been ostentatiously displayed at the triumphs of Titus.

—Work, at last, has been begun on the East River suspension bridge. The engineers, as a first step, are constructing an immense cone, which is to be lowered on the sand at the bottom of the river. The water on the inside is to be pumped out, and workmen will then descend to construct the foundation for the pier. Two sets of air pumps will be supplied, to prevent accident and to keep the workmen plenty supplied with fresh air.

—The North German Correspondent, of the 30th ult., prints a statement that "the negotiations respecting the establishment of a direct telegraphic communication between Germany and the United States have almost reached a successful termination. Count Reichenbach, who has been authorized by the North German Confederation to undertake the enterprise, proposes to carry out the scheme by leasing one of the wires of the Atlantic Cable for the exclusive use of Germany."

—The following failures have been announced in New York City: White, Heath & Co., cloth jobbers, liabilities about $100,000. Randolph Brothers, in the same line of business, liabilities not ascertained. To these must be added an old firm having connections in Boston; a dry goods jobbing house; one or two small ready-made clothing firms; and the brokers firm of Condit, Jennings & Co., Broad street. The last mentioned house were embarrassed during the late gold panic. They are now reported as permanently failed.

—The Rev. Mark Trafton, in his lecture on "The Coming Woman," claims that woman should find room to her all those avenues, and only those avenues for securing a living, into which it was safe and proper for her to enter alone. The coming woman, he said, will inquire, not so much "what I can do," as "what a modest respect for the fitness of things permits me to do." The coming woman, he added, will receive equal pay with man for any work which she does equally as well. To the question, "Will the coming woman vote?" he replied: "The Lord only knows. But ought she to vote?" Law is simply the basis of social order. It creates nothing, but only secures safety and peace. The tax woman is required to pay is simply an equivalent for the protection she receives from the law. No injustice is done her, therefore, by withholding the ballot. Mr. Trafton does not believe that if women engaged actively in politics, they could purify it.

—A great deal of attention is attracted to the case of Dr. Paul Scheppe, now under sentence of death for the murder of Miss Maria A. Stennecke, at Carlisle, Pa. Dr. Scheppe is a well-educated and intelligent physician of twenty-eight, has been in this country but a year, and is son of a Lutheran minister at Carlisle. He formed the acquaintance of Miss Stennecke while in the discharge of his professional duties. Courtship and engagement of marriage followed the acquaintance. Miss Stennecke died under suspicious circumstances, and while under treatment of Scheppe, who had become involved in some matters of money and real estate speculation in the interest of deceased, who was reported to be possessed of $40,000. A post mortem examination and analysis of the contents of the stomach reveals the presence of prussic acid and morphia; but whether it was given as a medicine, or with intent to murder, such medical experts as Professors Aiken, Wornley, Gross and Pancoast and others, have been unable to decide. The whole affair very much resembles the celebrated Parkman-Webster case, which happened years ago. Scheppe protests his innocence, and defies any medical man to prove the case one of murder. The German societies of Pennsylvania, New York and New Jersey believe his story, and are using all their efforts to save his life.

The Sex.

The advocates of what are called women's rights have been considerably nettled by an ingenious and novel argument upon the subject, from the pen of Professor Riehl, of Stuttgart. This distinguished writer has constructed an elaborate rejoinder to the plea by which female equality is sought to be established. His fundamental idea is that sex is differentiated by culture, and that the attempt to equalize the sexes is simply a return to barbarism. He holds that social inequality is a law of Nature which becomes more and more distinct and exacting with the progress of civilization. To the support of his position Riehl summons revelation, history, art, ethnology and pathology. We are indebted to THE NATION for a sketch of that part of his "Natural History of the Family" which embraces the discussion.

Our author holds (in common with many disciples of Hegel), that the fall humanized man, that it was his slumbering self-consciousness and developed his domestic and social instincts. He calls attention to the fact that this event—a calamity which involved a blessing—produced the subordination of the female. The first stage of civilization was the distinguishing of the qualities and the relations of sex—the assignment of the woman to the direction and the loving guardianship of the man. Among semi-civilized people, like the poorer peasants, this relation is obscured. Both sexes dress alike, in hats and boots and bloomers. They engage, as in the Tyrol, the Landes, the Alps, in the same employments, where it is a matter of indifference whether it is the master or mistress of the farm who knits or ploughs. They resemble each other in size, strength, coarseness of feature, and to some extent in the tone of voice. They live together rather as friends than as lovers. But among barbarous people the distinction is well-nigh obliterated, as in Dahomey, where the women are esteemed as having more courage than the men, and are selected as the royal body guard because they make better soldiers. An American eye-witness informed us that in the disastrous charge upon Abbeokuta, the women warriors of Dahomey approved themselves as the bravest of the assailants. The classical student will remember similar accounts of the gallantry of German, Spanish and British women, given by the Roman historians.

Professor Riehl also notices the testimony given by the arts to the continuous differentiation of the sexes. Portraits show that the women, a few centuries ago, were what we would now call masculine. Now-day's Mary, Queen of Scots, would lose her celebrity. The old Madonnas are no longer what they were intended to be—the types of virgin loveliness. Another striking proof appears in the change that has taken place in music. The simple melodies of antiquity have been displaced, not because the fashion of singing has changed, but because the tones of human speech have altered—the male tenor sinking more and more into the bass, and the female alto rising into the soprano. It is a divergence in the tones of the sexes that has revolutionized music, "developed the chant into the oratorio, the recitative of the ballad into the fugue of the serenata, the solo into the symphony, and rendered the grand opera with its "wealth of vocal and orchestral combining," "naïves possible." The continental managers are now obliged to repair to Hungary, and other outlying semi-civilized sections, in order to obtain clear high altos. And finally, attention is called to the fact that, what are called "female diseases" do not exist below a certain grade of social development. The barbarian amazon has no morbid idiosyncrasies.

There is a good deal in Riehl's arguments which may be urged successfully against those who would make woman man's rival and competitor. When these people say that woman is delicate, domestic and dependent simply through the force of adverse circumstances, and not by a necessity of Nature, they forget that these circumstances are precisely what make up our modern civilization. It is the woman of antiquity—it is Brunehild and Boadicea, and not the cultivated, accomplished and beautiful woman of the nineteenth century, whose cause Miss Anthony and her colleagues are advocating, and whom they, often in person, represent.

The sagacious advocate of woman's enfranchisement will recognize what is distinctive in her character and powers. Instead of undoing the work of centuries of Christian civilization, and endeavoring to make her mannish, he will seek to secure for her protection, liberty and a just support, in the sphere to which she actually belongs.

THE Chester Reporter says that Wimbush, the negro senator from Chester County, has induced the removal of office of Magistrates Eli Cornwell, H. C. Brawley, T. M. Boulware and Daniel G. Stinson. These magistrates were appointed by Governor Scott, and only two months ago the Grand Jury of the county advised that they be retained in office. Two of them, at least, were invited to join the Loyal League, and were told that if they would do the deed they should keep their offices, and even "come up higher." They declined the invitation, and Wimbush at once demanded that they be ousted from their official seat. Governor Scott bore it in mind that Wimbush whipped Leslie, a brother carpet-bagger, a short time ago, and listened to grant his request. The necessary order was issued on Friday last.

A concern styling itself "The New York Advertising Agency," having had the assurance to include THE CHARLESTON NEWS in a list of papers to which it refers as endorers of its standing and solvency, we feel it a duty we owe to our contemporaries of the press to state that the use of the name of this newspaper was entirely unauthorized, and that the little we know of the concern in question constrains us to advise against any dealings with it on any other basis than cash in advance.

Periodicals.

Evening by Evening; or Readings at Evening for the Family or for the Close of the Day. Spurgeon. New York: Sheldon & Co. 1869. The readers of "Morning by Morning" will welcome this companion volume. It is drawn from the resources of an affluent experience, which gives more freely at every successive draught upon it. The condensed brevity of its thoughts, the aptness, and often the brilliancy, of its figures, and the directness and fervor of its appeals, will make this volume a popular aid to private devotion. The minister, also, will find hints for many a discourse in its suggestive expostulations and analyses. Like the former series, the present contains an appendix of appropriate hymns for use in family worship.

The population of Greenville County, according to the census just completed, is whites, 14,864; colored, 8,232; total, 23,096.

The census returns of Chester County show that the total number of whites in the county is 6,710, and of colored persons, 12,883; total population, 19,593.
