Thursday, March 6, 1873. MEMORIES.

BY M. A. D. Oft, memory shows the past so plain Tis pleasant on its scenes to dwell;

I seem to live them o'er again And love their happiness to tell.

When youth, with health and vigor glows, And generous impulse move the frame, Love fills the heart, and stronger grows, Though foes its object should defame.

First comes the love of parents dear, That love which true ones ne'er forget How brightly shines that passion clear, Though age may bring much to regret.

Next comes the love of youthful friends Those who our sports have often shared. Their presence, pleasure always lends, And makes 'hem to our hearts endeared. The next, my muse, help me to tell:

'I is love for those we wish to choose, To help us all life's ills to quell, And with us, all to win or lose. And who can tell their feelings, when

Their eyes that face did first behold; Such beauty and such grace till then, Did never to our gaze unfold. What rapture, 'twas to us to meet

The one we thought almost divine-We longed to hear the promise sweet. 'I will be thine as thou art mine.' And when the trusting promise given

We longed, impatient for the day When yows exchanged in sight of heaven. We join d to fight in life's affray.

How mic'i we found to cheer life's way By that one action of a life-And who would stop to think, ere they Worli take unto themselves-a wife. Oskaloosa, February, 1878.

A HORRIBLE DISCOVERY.

A Skeleton found suspended in the Alba ny Post Office -- A Ghastly Sight. Albany, New York, is excited over the discovery of a skeleton in the Post Office building of that city. It appears that a day or two since, Mr W. B. Mellus, one of the clerks in the post office, proceeded to the top of the Exchange Building to see if there was anything there that belonged to the office, as it was the intention to give up that building shortly. Taking the keys to the unused room on the top floor, he ascended the stairs case, which is very much out of repair, and covered with dirt and broken plaster, and arriving at the top proceeded to unlock the door of the rooms which had been closed for seventeen years. While passing through one of these rooms, he was startled by the discovery of a ghastly skeleton of a human being, the the skull of which was suspended from the ceiling by a string. On the floor was seen the withered arm, hand and shoulder, while close by was one halt the ribs. Standing near the door was a box which on examina tion was found to contain a large quantity of cinders, small coal and charred bones, giving evidence of a deliberate attempt to burn the bones. On the floor were portions of old cameras, parts of a sewing machine, and innumerable other articles, among which were picked up two parchment deeds, one of which bore the date of the seventeenth century. How these articles got into the room or who has a key besides the officials may possibly be discovered after the medical men have given their opinioh as to whether the remains were those of a male or female, but a present the whole thing is shrouded n mystery.

POWERFUL ARGUMENT.

A few days ago a tall, rough look ing mountaineer entered the office of the Union Pacific railroad ticket of fice at Denver, and through mistake purchased a ticket for New York via the Kansas Pacific line, when he wanted to go over the Union Pacific He did not discover this fact until after the ticket had been paid for, and on asking the agent to change it the latter refused to do so.

"You won't change this ticket then, won't you?"
"No, sir," replied the agent, "you have your ticket, and I have the money for it, and if you have a ticket over the other route, you will have to buy it."

Very quietly the stranger twisted his ticket into a small roil; very quietly he drew from under his right coat tail a six shooter about the dimensions of a mountain howitzer; coolly and deliberately he stuck the six shooter, and sticking the ugly looking thing through the little win. twisted ticket into the muzzle of that looking thing through the little window of the ticket office, and almost in the agent's face, and speaking in a tone that left no doubt of his determination, said:

"Stranger, thar's that ticket; take 3 yourself and change it, or by G-, I'll blow it clean through you.' The ticket was changed immediately, and without any more words from the agent, the mountaineer walked away saying:

Occasional errors and defects in wspaper are overlooked by those who have become attached to it through its persual for years. They sometimes become disgusted with it on account of something that has slipped into its columns, and may hasten to it again, and possibly apol ogize for having it stopped. No friendship on earth is more constant than that contracted by the reader of a journal which makes an honest and earnest effort to merit his continued support. Hence the newspa-per which is conscientiously conducted becomes a favorite in the fam-

A SAILOR'S DESCRIPTION OF A RIDE ON HORSEBACK .- "I hired a very fine horse, and, mounting him bravely, laid his head east by south, as near as might be according to our binnacle. But, though the wind was abaft the beam, and tide and all in his favor, and brave commander upon his peop, what did he do but bouse his stem, and run out his spanker-driver, and up with his taffrail, as if I was wearing him in a thundering heavy sea. I resolved to get the upper hand of this mutiny. I slipped my foot out of the chains for fear of any sudden capsize, and then I rapped him over the catshead, where his anchor ought to hang. He, however, instead of doing at all what I expected, up with his bow-sprit and down with his quarter, as if struck by a whale under his fore foot. This was so far from true seamanship, and proved him to be so unbuilt for sailing, that I was compelled to disembark over his stern, and with slight collisions."
