

THE INDIANAPOLIS LEADER.

BAGBY & CO., PUBLISHERS.

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

(Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Indianapolis, Ind.)

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:
Single Copy, 1 year, $2.00
" 3 months, " 1.00
" 1 month, " .50
Clubs of 12, 1 year, each copy, 1.75
" 10, 1 year, each copy, 1.50

RESUME OF THE WEEK'S NEWS.

CONGRESSIONAL AND WASHINGTON NEWS.

Congress reassembled on the 6th, and both Houses adjourned early as a mark of respect to the memory of the late Senator Houston. The full report of the Hot Springs commission was presented to the Senate. Mr. Scales' resolution to investigate the origin of the U. S. outbreak was adopted by the House. A leading Democratic senator in Washington says that Senator Cameron is managing General Grant's nomination and that Secretary Sherman's acquiescence thereto has been secured.

A letter before the secretary of the interior charging the Hot Springs commission with attempted bribery. Much fault is being found with the report. The citizens claim that it is a part of the established land law that every town on public lands shall be entitled to a town site at the minimum rate of $1.25 per acre. The commission fixed a higher valuation, which must be paid, or the land forfeited.

In the Senate on Wednesday, Mr. Bayard presented a petition from citizens of Delaware praying for the passage of his legislation bill, and Mr. Pendleton gave notice that he would propose an amendment to Mr. Bayard's bill to provide the United States notes, if deprived of their legal tender quality, shall not be available as a National bank reserve. Mr. Wilson introduced a resolution to consider the expediency of establishing a department of agriculture and commerce, and Mr. Davis, of West Virginia, introduced a bill for the establishment of such a department. In the House a large number of miscellaneous bills were introduced. Mr. Cox reported in the House his bill to regulate immigration, and it was referred to the committee of the whole. The correspondence concerning the U. S. Indians was laid before the Senate. It is said that Secretary Evans is considering the removal of Consul Mosby for allowing one of the latter's letters on the Hong Kong frauds to be published. The case of McCabe vs. Oth was argued before House committee on elections on Wednesday. The Senate committee on privileges and elections on Thursday resumed consideration of the Ingalls case, and obtained the desired telegrams from the Western Union Telegraph company's agent at Topeka.

In the House on Friday Mr. Ryan, of Kansas, introduced a bill to provide for admitting, duty free, clothing intended for the relief of the colored people who have emigrated. Mr. Fernando Wood has completed the revision of the bill for the relief of the colored people who have emigrated. The bill was discussed in the cabinet meeting on Friday. The only two ordinance foundries in the United States have given notice that they must permanently close unless the Government gives them more work. The board of Indian commissioners recommended to the president that the religious societies be allowed to select the Indian agents. The National Greenback conference in Washington adjourned sine die on Friday after adopting a call for a National Greenback convention to be held in Chicago June 9.

On Saturday the Senate committee declined to report favorably upon all the pending army nominations, and the promotion of lieutenants, which were laid aside. On Monday various bills were introduced and referred to proper committees.

MISCELLANEOUS NEWS.

Prince Bismarck is reported dangerously ill.

There are rumors of approaching revolution in Mexico.

GARIBOLDI hopes to get away from his wife about the 1st of February.

LONGFELLOW, the poet, is 73 years old, one year older than Jeff Davis.

The steamship City of New York, which arrived at New York City Saturday, brought $155,000 in gold bars.

Stephen Longfellow, nephew of the poet, has been arrested for forging the latter's name to a $1,000 check.

A certain eleven-footed anteorator is hauling in Prince Bismarck with an alcohol attachment.

ASTOR has 3,400 houses in the city of New York, at an average rent of $1,000 each, but he is not happy.

BISMARCK is full of remorse. It is killing him. His "iron and blood" chickens are coming home to roost.

R. R. Bishop was on Wednesday elected president of the Massachusetts Senate, and C. T. Noyes speaker of the House.

James Stewart & Co. doing an annual lumber business of $6,000,000 at Detroit, Mich., failed on Wednesday last.

Governor Long was inaugurated as governor of Massachusetts on Thursday. Public debt of the State $53,020,464.

General Garfield has been nominated for the United States Senate by the Republican members of the Ohio Legislature.

Benjamin C. Bogert, for 18 years treasurer of the New York Produce Exchange, defaulted and suicided in New York last week.

Frank Leslie, the well-known publisher, died, on Saturday afternoon, at his residence in New York, after a protracted illness.

Deadwood escaped a second burning down on Thursday. A fire was well under way, but stopped by the almost superhuman exertions of the people.

The Wabash, White and other rivers of the State have been on a "boom" all week, doing considerable damage in washing away bridges and milldams.

The czar employs Yankee detectives. They are properly instructed to inform his majesty what the politics of the schoolmasters are, in a dudley.

The governor of Alabama, has appointed Luke Prior United States senator from that State, to fill out the unexpired term of Senator Houston, recently deceased.

There is a grain blockade at Chicago. The elevators are filled to their capacity of 15,000,000 bushels, and about 12,500,000 bushels are stored in the various warehouses.

Krupp, the gun manufacturer at Essen, Germany, has orders that will test the capacity of his establishment until 1881. Russia and Chili are giving large orders.

William Kuffle, a young German of Fort Wayne, was drowned in the St. Joe river on Wednesday. He was looking into the water rolling over Reedsville dam, lost his balance, fell over, with above result.

Forgeries on the Grocers' bank of New York to the amount of $100,000 have been discovered, and J. L. Haigh, a prominent merchant of New York, arrested, charged with uttering them. The bank is used up.

George Bell, a music teacher, was arrested in St. Paul, Ind., last Wednesday night, for attempting to drive a chair into Charles Arnold's head. He is charged with intent to rob and murder.

Trouble is threatened in the mining regions of the Kanawha Valley. The miners have been on strike for six weeks, and now threaten vengeance against the "black sheep" who are taking their places. The State militia has been ordered to be prepared to march to Hawk's Nest at a moment's notice.

The sub-treasurer at New York received proposals to sell bonds of the Government, in response to the secretary of the treasury's circular of December 31, 1879, stating that he would purchase $5,000,000 worth. The total

THE EXODUS.

An Explanation that Hits the Bull's Eye at Every Shot.

A Letter from Col. A. D. Streight that Does Honor to its Author, and Strikes Home for the Oppressed.

Hon. Chas. Kahlo, My Esteemed Friend:

You have my thanks for sending the Pharos of the 18th inst. It is surprising to see how a very ordinary transaction in our private business affairs can be construed by blind political partisans into a matter of great public concern. The truth is that I am not a colored man, and my family, consisting of some twelve women and children, from this city to my farm in Newton county, where I am needing some farm laborers. These people had just arrived here from North Carolina. These are the people referred to by the editor of the Pharos, when he says "Tell it to the laboring white men of Indianapolis" that Col. Streight is stocking his farm in Newton county with North Carolina Negroes.

Carlyle, tell it to men of Indiana, both white and black, that I sent these people to work on my farm. Why not tell them? I have repeatedly advertised for farm laborers to go to my Newton county farm, and have sent them there, gave them remunerative employment, and I still want more, and so far as I know, there are no idle farm hands in Newton county. Yes, tell it to the people that I sent two colored men, with their families, to my Newton county farm; and I will add that they are poor and destitute, but I believe honest and industrious. Now, friend Kahlo, while I am writing I will add that I have a very kindly feeling for these poor, destitute, persecuted people, who are endeavoring to escape from a condition worse than slavery. It will soon be six years (in February next) since I was making my way from the same country. That class of people that are now persecuting the colored people was then called rebels; and those rebels had orders from the commander of the prison from which I had escaped to capture me, but to not bring me back. My life was at stake, but human endurance has a limit even when life is at stake, and this limit was reached when I was on the south bank of the Rappahannock river, near Tappanhook, after a terrible day of crossing difficult streams, marching and hiding from the enemy. My feet were sore, I was worn out for loss of sleep and starving for want of food. Escape seemed impossible. On the north bank was the Rappahannock river (near three miles wide); on the east was a deep, impassable creek; on the west was another stream of water too wide and deep to cross without a boat, and on the south side the rebels had established a strong picket line. It was known by the rebels that I was somewhere within a space of country about the size of the State of more than two miles wide and three or four miles long. A cavalry regiment, together with the people, both black and white, with their dogs, had turned out to hunt all for my place of concealment. It seems almost providential that I was able to elude their vigilance through that terrible day. But darkness put an end to the search, and I was left to consider the situation. Up to this time I had been in a state of trusting to anybody, and to endeavor to get through the country undisturbed. This must now be changed, for I was in great need of immediate, friendly assistance, and as I had no confidence in the white men of that section of the country, I turned to my only choice. I started in the dark, through a drenching rain, and soon found the negro quarters of a plantation, and on entering one of the cabins I was welcomed by a good, honest, and true man, and a friend though a slave, who had been out all day with his master hunting for me. This man, at the risk of his life, took me into his cabin, procured and cooked a bountiful supply of food, and permitted me to rest. He then led me to the next day in a vigorous hunt for my place of concealment. Night came again, and the negroes returned to tell of what had been done, and of the fact that a certain boat, by chance, might be captured, which would enable me to cross the Rappahannock, and thus escape from my pursuers. The negroes of this plantation, at the risk of their lives, joined me in capturing the boat, and piloted me through a difficult stream to the river, and returned to their homes to join in the search for my whereabouts on the morrow. By their assistance I made my way out of the reach of the enemy, and my life was spared. The colored people, fleeing from Southern persecution, trying to escape from the same evil spirit that plunged our country into war; that starved and tortured to death over 30,000 Union soldiers; that hunted and captured thousands of our colored people; that since the close of the war has murdered tens of thousands of men and women for entertaining political opinions favorable to the Union; that has organized free clubs and Ku Klux bands to whip, scourge and murder Union people. I say that it is from this evil spirit that these poor people are trying to escape; and it was from the same demon that I made my escape. And now, remembering the fact, if any man should be so unkind as to sympathize with the refugees, he is not acquainted with my disposition, for I do not intend to be guilty of ingratitude. Hoping that the time will soon come when our National government will protect the constitutional rights of our citizens throughout the length and breadth of the land, I remain most truly yours,

A. D. STREIGHT.

UNCLAIMED BOUNTY OF COLORED SOLDIERS.

An Open Letter to Hon. John A. Logan.

LYNCHBURG, Va., Dec. 13, 1879.

My Dear General—I learn from the public press, that the Hon. John A. Logan, of this State, has introduced a bill into the House of Representatives, having for its object the getting from the United States Treasury the money there now, and known as the "unclaimed bounty" of colored soldiers, and to turn it over to certain institutions for the education of the colored people, etc., etc.

I respectfully ask you that when this bill shall reach the Senate, you and other friends, especially General Burnside, will ask that it be overruled, in order that the money may learn what are the views of the colored soldiers in regard to what disposition, if any, should be made of this money.

The National soldiers' and sailors' convention, at Philadelphia, January 1, 1880, adopted and presented to the 39th Congress an address protesting against the injustice of a law that a preceding Congress had ratified, allowing loyal slaveholders, or former owners, a ransom or bounty for their slaves enlisted in the army and navy. Congress listened to our prayer; and the lamented Hon. Edwin M. Stanton, Secretary of War, refused to pay a dollar more out of the fund under the terms of the bill. We contended that if there was a bounty to be paid it should go to the soldier or sailor, if living; dead, to his heirs. I understand from the Secretary of the Treasury that the residue of that fund is in the treasury; and I respectfully beg a hearing for the survivors of the "Black Regiments" in regard to the

THE EXODUS.

An Explanation that Hits the Bull's Eye at Every Shot.

A Letter from Col. A. D. Streight that Does Honor to its Author, and Strikes Home for the Oppressed.

Hon. Chas. Kahlo, My Esteemed Friend:

You have my thanks for sending the Pharos of the 18th inst. It is surprising to see how a very ordinary transaction in our private business affairs can be construed by blind political partisans into a matter of great public concern. The truth is that I am not a colored man, and my family, consisting of some twelve women and children, from this city to my farm in Newton county, where I am needing some farm laborers. These people had just arrived here from North Carolina. These are the people referred to by the editor of the Pharos, when he says "Tell it to the laboring white men of Indianapolis" that Col. Streight is stocking his farm in Newton county with North Carolina Negroes.

Carlyle, tell it to men of Indiana, both white and black, that I sent these people to work on my farm. Why not tell them? I have repeatedly advertised for farm laborers to go to my Newton county farm, and have sent them there, gave them remunerative employment, and I still want more, and so far as I know, there are no idle farm hands in Newton county. Yes, tell it to the people that I sent two colored men, with their families, to my Newton county farm; and I will add that they are poor and destitute, but I believe honest and industrious. Now, friend Kahlo, while I am writing I will add that I have a very kindly feeling for these poor, destitute, persecuted people, who are endeavoring to escape from a condition worse than slavery. It will soon be six years (in February next) since I was making my way from the same country. That class of people that are now persecuting the colored people was then called rebels; and those rebels had orders from the commander of the prison from which I had escaped to capture me, but to not bring me back. My life was at stake, but human endurance has a limit even when life is at stake, and this limit was reached when I was on the south bank of the Rappahannock river, near Tappanhook, after a terrible day of crossing difficult streams, marching and hiding from the enemy. My feet were sore, I was worn out for loss of sleep and starving for want of food. Escape seemed impossible. On the north bank was the Rappahannock river (near three miles wide); on the east was a deep, impassable creek; on the west was another stream of water too wide and deep to cross without a boat, and on the south side the rebels had established a strong picket line. It was known by the rebels that I was somewhere within a space of country about the size of the State of more than two miles wide and three or four miles long. A cavalry regiment, together with the people, both black and white, with their dogs, had turned out to hunt all for my place of concealment. It seems almost providential that I was able to elude their vigilance through that terrible day. But darkness put an end to the search, and I was left to consider the situation. Up to this time I had been in a state of trusting to anybody, and to endeavor to get through the country undisturbed. This must now be changed, for I was in great need of immediate, friendly assistance, and as I had no confidence in the white men of that section of the country, I turned to my only choice. I started in the dark, through a drenching rain, and soon found the negro quarters of a plantation, and on entering one of the cabins I was welcomed by a good, honest, and true man, and a friend though a slave, who had been out all day with his master hunting for me. This man, at the risk of his life, took me into his cabin, procured and cooked a bountiful supply of food, and permitted me to rest. He then led me to the next day in a vigorous hunt for my place of concealment. Night came again, and the negroes returned to tell of what had been done, and of the fact that a certain boat, by chance, might be captured, which would enable me to cross the Rappahannock, and thus escape from my pursuers. The negroes of this plantation, at the risk of their lives, joined me in capturing the boat, and piloted me through a difficult stream to the river, and returned to their homes to join in the search for my whereabouts on the morrow. By their assistance I made my way out of the reach of the enemy, and my life was spared. The colored people, fleeing from Southern persecution, trying to escape from the same evil spirit that plunged our country into war; that starved and tortured to death over 30,000 Union soldiers; that hunted and captured thousands of our colored people; that since the close of the war has murdered tens of thousands of men and women for entertaining political opinions favorable to the Union; that has organized free clubs and Ku Klux bands to whip, scourge and murder Union people. I say that it is from this evil spirit that these poor people are trying to escape; and it was from the same demon that I made my escape. And now, remembering the fact, if any man should be so unkind as to sympathize with the refugees, he is not acquainted with my disposition, for I do not intend to be guilty of ingratitude. Hoping that the time will soon come when our National government will protect the constitutional rights of our citizens throughout the length and breadth of the land, I remain most truly yours,

A. D. STREIGHT.

UNCLAIMED BOUNTY OF COLORED SOLDIERS.

An Open Letter to Hon. John A. Logan.

LYNCHBURG, Va., Dec. 13, 1879.

My Dear General—I learn from the public press, that the Hon. John A. Logan, of this State, has introduced a bill into the House of Representatives, having for its object the getting from the United States Treasury the money there now, and known as the "unclaimed bounty" of colored soldiers, and to turn it over to certain institutions for the education of the colored people, etc., etc.

I respectfully ask you that when this bill shall reach the Senate, you and other friends, especially General Burnside, will ask that it be overruled, in order that the money may learn what are the views of the colored soldiers in regard to what disposition, if any, should be made of this money.

The National soldiers' and sailors' convention, at Philadelphia, January 1, 1880, adopted and presented to the 39th Congress an address protesting against the injustice of a law that a preceding Congress had ratified, allowing loyal slaveholders, or former owners, a ransom or bounty for their slaves enlisted in the army and navy. Congress listened to our prayer; and the lamented Hon. Edwin M. Stanton, Secretary of War, refused to pay a dollar more out of the fund under the terms of the bill. We contended that if there was a bounty to be paid it should go to the soldier or sailor, if living; dead, to his heirs. I understand from the Secretary of the Treasury that the residue of that fund is in the treasury; and I respectfully beg a hearing for the survivors of the "Black Regiments" in regard to the

THE EXODUS.

An Explanation that Hits the Bull's Eye at Every Shot.

A Letter from Col. A. D. Streight that Does Honor to its Author, and Strikes Home for the Oppressed.

Hon. Chas. Kahlo, My Esteemed Friend:

You have my thanks for sending the Pharos of the 18th inst. It is surprising to see how a very ordinary transaction in our private business affairs can be construed by blind political partisans into a matter of great public concern. The truth is that I am not a colored man, and my family, consisting of some twelve women and children, from this city to my farm in Newton county, where I am needing some farm laborers. These people had just arrived here from North Carolina. These are the people referred to by the editor of the Pharos, when he says "Tell it to the laboring white men of Indianapolis" that Col. Streight is stocking his farm in Newton county with North Carolina Negroes.

Carlyle, tell it to men of Indiana, both white and black, that I sent these people to work on my farm. Why not tell them? I have repeatedly advertised for farm laborers to go to my Newton county farm, and have sent them there, gave them remunerative employment, and I still want more, and so far as I know, there are no idle farm hands in Newton county. Yes, tell it to the people that I sent two colored men, with their families, to my Newton county farm; and I will add that they are poor and destitute, but I believe honest and industrious. Now, friend Kahlo, while I am writing I will add that I have a very kindly feeling for these poor, destitute, persecuted people, who are endeavoring to escape from a condition worse than slavery. It will soon be six years (in February next) since I was making my way from the same country. That class of people that are now persecuting the colored people was then called rebels; and those rebels had orders from the commander of the prison from which I had escaped to capture me, but to not bring me back. My life was at stake, but human endurance has a limit even when life is at stake, and this limit was reached when I was on the south bank of the Rappahannock river, near Tappanhook, after a terrible day of crossing difficult streams, marching and hiding from the enemy. My feet were sore, I was worn out for loss of sleep and starving for want of food. Escape seemed impossible. On the north bank was the Rappahannock river (near three miles wide); on the east was a deep, impassable creek; on the west was another stream of water too wide and deep to cross without a boat, and on the south side the rebels had established a strong picket line. It was known by the rebels that I was somewhere within a space of country about the size of the State of more than two miles wide and three or four miles long. A cavalry regiment, together with the people, both black and white, with their dogs, had turned out to hunt all for my place of concealment. It seems almost providential that I was able to elude their vigilance through that terrible day. But darkness put an end to the search, and I was left to consider the situation. Up to this time I had been in a state of trusting to anybody, and to endeavor to get through the country undisturbed. This must now be changed, for I was in great need of immediate, friendly assistance, and as I had no confidence in the white men of that section of the country, I turned to my only choice. I started in the dark, through a drenching rain, and soon found the negro quarters of a plantation, and on entering one of the cabins I was welcomed by a good, honest, and true man, and a friend though a slave, who had been out all day with his master hunting for me. This man, at the risk of his life, took me into his cabin, procured and cooked a bountiful supply of food, and permitted me to rest. He then led me to the next day in a vigorous hunt for my place of concealment. Night came again, and the negroes returned to tell of what had been done, and of the fact that a certain boat, by chance, might be captured, which would enable me to cross the Rappahannock, and thus escape from my pursuers. The negroes of this plantation, at the risk of their lives, joined me in capturing the boat, and piloted me through a difficult stream to the river, and returned to their homes to join in the search for my whereabouts on the morrow. By their assistance I made my way out of the reach of the enemy, and my life was spared. The colored people, fleeing from Southern persecution, trying to escape from the same evil spirit that plunged our country into war; that starved and tortured to death over 30,000 Union soldiers; that hunted and captured thousands of our colored people; that since the close of the war has murdered tens of thousands of men and women for entertaining political opinions favorable to the Union; that has organized free clubs and Ku Klux bands to whip, scourge and murder Union people. I say that it is from this evil spirit that these poor people are trying to escape; and it was from the same demon that I made my escape. And now, remembering the fact, if any man should be so unkind as to sympathize with the refugees, he is not acquainted with my disposition, for I do not intend to be guilty of ingratitude. Hoping that the time will soon come when our National government will protect the constitutional rights of our citizens throughout the length and breadth of the land, I remain most truly yours,

A. D. STREIGHT.

UNCLAIMED BOUNTY OF COLORED SOLDIERS.

An Open Letter to Hon. John A. Logan.

LYNCHBURG, Va., Dec. 13, 1879.

My Dear General—I learn from the public press, that the Hon. John A. Logan, of this State, has introduced a bill into the House of Representatives, having for its object the getting from the United States Treasury the money there now, and known as the "unclaimed bounty" of colored soldiers, and to turn it over to certain institutions for the education of the colored people, etc., etc.

I respectfully ask you that when this bill shall reach the Senate, you and other friends, especially General Burnside, will ask that it be overruled, in order that the money may learn what are the views of the colored soldiers in regard to what disposition, if any, should be made of this money.

The National soldiers' and sailors' convention, at Philadelphia, January 1, 1880, adopted and presented to the 39th Congress an address protesting against the injustice of a law that a preceding Congress had ratified, allowing loyal slaveholders, or former owners, a ransom or bounty for their slaves enlisted in the army and navy. Congress listened to our prayer; and the lamented Hon. Edwin M. Stanton, Secretary of War, refused to pay a dollar more out of the fund under the terms of the bill. We contended that if there was a bounty to be paid it should go to the soldier or sailor, if living; dead, to his heirs. I understand from the Secretary of the Treasury that the residue of that fund is in the treasury; and I respectfully beg a hearing for the survivors of the "Black Regiments" in regard to the

THE EXODUS.

An Explanation that Hits the Bull's Eye at Every Shot.

A Letter from Col. A. D. Streight that Does Honor to its Author, and Strikes Home for the Oppressed.

Hon. Chas. Kahlo, My Esteemed Friend:

You have my thanks for sending the Pharos of the 18th inst. It is surprising to see how a very ordinary transaction in our private business affairs can be construed by blind political partisans into a matter of great public concern. The truth is that I am not a colored man, and my family, consisting of some twelve women and children, from this city to my farm in Newton county, where I am needing some farm laborers. These people had just arrived here from North Carolina. These are the people referred to by the editor of the Pharos, when he says "Tell it to the laboring white men of Indianapolis" that Col. Streight is stocking his farm in Newton county with North Carolina Negroes.

Carlyle, tell it to men of Indiana, both white and black, that I sent these people to work on my farm. Why not tell them? I have repeatedly advertised for farm laborers to go to my Newton county farm, and have sent them there, gave them remunerative employment, and I still want more, and so far as I know, there are no idle farm hands in Newton county. Yes, tell it to the people that I sent two colored men, with their families, to my Newton county farm; and I will add that they are poor and destitute, but I believe honest and industrious. Now, friend Kahlo, while I am writing I will add that I have a very kindly feeling for these poor, destitute, persecuted people, who are endeavoring to escape from a condition worse than slavery. It will soon be six years (in February next) since I was making my way from the same country. That class of people that are now persecuting the colored people was then called rebels; and those rebels had orders from the commander of the prison from which I had escaped to capture me, but to not bring me back. My life was at stake, but human endurance has a limit even when life is at stake, and this limit was reached when I was on the south bank of the Rappahannock river, near Tappanhook, after a terrible day of crossing difficult streams, marching and hiding from the enemy. My feet were sore, I was worn out for loss of sleep and starving for want of food. Escape seemed impossible. On the north bank was the Rappahannock river (near three miles wide); on the east was a deep, impassable creek; on the west was another stream of water too wide and deep to cross without a boat, and on the south side the rebels had established a strong picket line. It was known by the rebels that I was somewhere within a space of country about the size of the State of more than two miles wide and three or four miles long. A cavalry regiment, together with the people, both black and white, with their dogs, had turned out to hunt all for my place of concealment. It seems almost providential that I was able to elude their vigilance through that terrible day. But darkness put an end to the search, and I was left to consider the situation. Up to this time I had been in a state of trusting to anybody, and to endeavor to get through the country undisturbed. This must now be changed, for I was in great need of immediate, friendly assistance, and as I had no confidence in the white men of that section of the country, I turned to my only choice. I started in the dark, through a drenching rain, and soon found the negro quarters of a plantation, and on entering one of the cabins I was welcomed by a good, honest, and true man, and a friend though a slave, who had been out all day with his master hunting for me. This man, at the risk of his life, took me into his cabin, procured and cooked a bountiful supply of food, and permitted me to rest. He then led me to the next day in a vigorous hunt for my place of concealment. Night came again, and the negroes returned to tell of what had been done, and of the fact that a certain boat, by chance, might be captured, which would enable me to cross the Rappahannock, and thus escape from my pursuers. The negroes of this plantation, at the risk of their lives, joined me in capturing the boat, and piloted me through a difficult stream to the river, and returned to their homes to join in the search for my whereabouts on the morrow. By their assistance I made my way out of the reach of the enemy, and my life was spared. The colored people, fleeing from Southern persecution, trying to escape from the same evil spirit that plunged our country into war; that starved and tortured to death over 30,000 Union soldiers; that hunted and captured thousands of our colored people; that since the close of the war has murdered tens of thousands of men and women for entertaining political opinions favorable to the Union; that has organized free clubs and Ku Klux bands to whip, scourge and murder Union people. I say that it is from this evil spirit that these poor people are trying to escape; and it was from the same demon that I made my escape. And now, remembering the fact, if any man should be so unkind as to sympathize with the refugees, he is not acquainted with my disposition, for I do not intend to be guilty of ingratitude. Hoping that the time will soon come when our National government will protect the constitutional rights of our citizens throughout the length and breadth of the land, I remain most truly yours,

A. D. STREIGHT.

UNCLAIMED BOUNTY OF COLORED SOLDIERS.

An Open Letter to Hon. John A. Logan.

LYNCHBURG, Va., Dec. 13, 1879.

My Dear General—I learn from the public press, that the Hon. John A. Logan, of this State, has introduced a bill into the House of Representatives, having for its object the getting from the United States Treasury the money there now, and known as the "unclaimed bounty" of colored soldiers, and to turn it over to certain institutions for the education of the colored people, etc., etc.

I respectfully ask you that when this bill shall reach the Senate, you and other friends, especially General Burnside, will ask that it be overruled, in order that the money may learn what are the views of the colored soldiers in regard to what disposition, if any, should be made of this money.

The National soldiers' and sailors' convention, at Philadelphia, January 1, 1880, adopted and presented to the 39th Congress an address protesting against the injustice of a law that a preceding Congress had ratified, allowing loyal slaveholders, or former owners, a ransom or bounty for their slaves enlisted in the army and navy. Congress listened to our prayer; and the lamented Hon. Edwin M. Stanton, Secretary of War, refused to pay a dollar more out of the fund under the terms of the bill. We contended that if there was a bounty to be paid it should go to the soldier or sailor, if living; dead, to his heirs. I understand from the Secretary of the Treasury that the residue of that fund is in the treasury; and I respectfully beg a hearing for the survivors of the "Black Regiments" in regard to the

THE LEADER FOR 1880.

ON TO THE BREACH!

HIP, HIP, HURRAH!

TEN THOUSAND SUBSCRIBERS

WANTED FOR THE INDIANAPOLIS LEADER.

IT IS THE ORGAN OF THE COLORED PEOPLE

OF INDIANA AND THE UNITED STATES.

LEADING COLORED MEN SAY

IT IS THE SPICEST!

IT IS THE NEWSIEST!

IT IS THE MOST ABLY EDITED!

IT IS THE BEST!

PAPER EVER PUBLISHED BY COLORED MEN IN THE UNITED STATES.

IT CIRCULATES IN EVERY STATE IN THE UNION.

It contains more news, and a greater variety, than any other paper published by colored men. It contains choice selections from the best Literary Journals of the World. It contains, every week, AN EXCELLENT STORY.

IN POLITICS, THE LEADER IS

"STALWART" REPUBLICAN,

OF THE STRICTEST SECT.

Its editorialists deal fearlessly with the living issues of the day. Every colored man in the land should read and support it.

THE LEADER.

OFFERS RARE AND MOST EXCELLENT ADVANTAGES AS AN ADVERTISING MEDIUM.

Our white friends will find it interesting and should encourage the enterprise.

SUBSCRIBE