A MEMORIAL OF LOVE

Resolutions adopted by the Ocala Woman's Christian Temperance Union on the death of Mrs. W. C. Bull:

Whereas, God, in his infinite wisdom, has called our dear sister and co-worker, Mrs. W. C. Bull, to her Heavenly home, be it

Resolved, That in her death the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Ocala has sustained a great loss, and that we shall greatly miss our sister's wise counsel and hearty co-operation; but while we mourn her loss we rejoice that her example will ever be an inspiration to her former companions in the work that she so much loved. And be it further

Resolved, That we tender to her bereaved husband and daughters in this, their hour of sore affliction, our Christian sympathy, and assure them that her sudden death has cast a gloom over the hearts of her fellow workers in the temperance cause which finds its only solace in the blessed assurance that for her to die is gain; and we pray that the God of all grace will comfort their hearts with His own presence, and bring all together at last where there is no more death, and where sorrow and sighing flee away.

Ed. Ketchum, chief of police of Galveston, Texas, is an uncle of Mrs. R. R. Carroll, of this city. During the night of the frightful storm he sheltered and cared for 400 people as they were brought into the city hall. The building was almost wrecked, but held together and was a veritable ark of safety to the rescued. Two of the chief's most faithful officers, after laboring most of the night in the work of rescue, asked their chief to be allowed to go and look after their own families, in a distant part of the city. They returned later and reported their homes swept away and wives and children drowned.
