Hawthorne in Boyhood.

He was the handsomest young man of his day in that part of the world. Such is the report of those who knew him; and there is a miniature of him taken some years later, which bears out the report. He was five feet ten and one half inches in height, broad shouldered, but of light, athletic build, not weighing more than one hundred and fifty pounds. His limbs were beautifully formed, and the molding of his neck and throat was as fine as anything in antique sculpture. His hair which had a long curving wave in it, approached blackness in color; his head was large and grandly developed; his eyebrows were dark and heavy, with a superb arch and space beneath. His nose was straight, but the contour of his chin was Roman. He never wore a beard, and was without a moustache until his fifty-fifth year.

His eyes were large, dark blue, brilliant and full of varied expression. Bayard Taylor used to say that they were the only eyes he ever knew to flash fire. Charles Reade, in a letter written in 1876, declared that he had never before seen such eyes as Hawthorne's in a human head. When he went to London persons whose recollections reached back through a generation or so used to compare his glance to that of Robert Burns. While he was yet in college an old gypsy woman, meeting him suddenly in a woodland path, gazed at him and asked, "Are you a man or an angel?" His complexion was delicate and transparent, rather dark than light, with a ruddy tinge in the cheeks. The skin of his face was always very sensitive, and a cold, raw wind caused him actual pain.

His hands were large and muscular, the palm broad, with a full curve of the outer margin; the fingers smooth, but neither square nor pointed; the thumb long and powerful. His feet were slender and sinewy, and he had a long, elastic gait, accompanied by a certain sidewise swinging of the shoulders. He was a tireless walker, and of great bodily activity; up to the time he was forty years of age he could clear a height of five feet at a standing jump. His voice which was low and deep in ordinary conversation, had astounding volume when he chose to give full vent to it; with such a voice, and such eyes and presence, he might have quelled a crew of mutinous privateersmen at least as effectively as Bold Daniel, his grandfather; it was not a bellow, but had the searching and electrifying quality of the blast of a trumpet.—[Julian Hawthorne, in "Nathaniel Hawthorne and His Wife."

Field of the Telephone.

Professor Bell is sanguine that the usefulness of the telephone has by no means as yet attained its natural limit. Since the recent decision sustaining the patents of the American Bell Telephone Co., he has been devoting himself with assiduity to experiments intended to improve the telephone, with the idea to make it feasible to speak over longer distances than is now possible. In a recent interview with a newspaper reporter, he predicted that it would in time be as easy "for a subscriber in New York to call up a friend in San Francisco, and engage him in conversation, as it would be to call another subscriber to the telephone in the city of New York." The service between New York and Boston, by means of a circuit of double copper wire, is now said to be working very satisfactorily; but Professor Bell thinks that all wires in cities should be placed underground, that the efficiency of the telephone cannot be fairly judged and tested in a large city, where the wires are supported on poles and buildings.

Professor Bell does not believe in the relay system for strengthening the current along the line, but believes that the sound can be so intensified at the receiver as to be heard in the remote corners of a large room. As to this point he says: "We find this difficulty—when the sound is intensified, it is at the expense of distinctness and articulation. This fault can probably be corrected in a measure, so that if persons desire it they will be able to sit at some distance from the telephone and hear all that comes through the receiver. The transmitter can also be made to convey sounds brought to it from a distance."—[Scientific American.

Give water to Infants.

A physician of the New York Nursery and Child's Hospital believes from his practice, that infants generally, whether brought up at the breast or artificially, are not supplied with sufficient water, the fluid portion of their food being quickly taken up, leaving the solid too thick to be easily digested. In warm, dry weather, healthy babies will take water every hour with advantage, and their frequent fretfulness and rise of temperature is often directly due to their not having it. A free supply of water and restricting the frequency of nursing, has been found at the nursery to be a most effectual check in cases of incipient fever, a diminished rate of mortality and marked reduction in the number of gastric and intestinal complaints being attributed to this cause. In teeth cutting water soothes the gums, and frequently stops the fretting and restlessness universal at this period.

Here is Sermon Enough for Sunday.

A little shoeblack called at the residence of a clergyman of this city and solicited a piece of bread and some water. The servant was directed to give the child bread from the crumb basket, and as the little fellow was walking slowly away sifting the gift between his fingers for a piece large enough to chew, the minister called him back and asked him if he had ever learned how to pray. On receiving a negative answer he directed him to say, "Our Father," but he could not understand the familiarity.

"Is it our father—your father—my father?"

"Why, certainly."

The boy looked at him awhile and commenced crying, at the same time holding up his crust of bread, and exclaiming between his sobs:

"You say that your father is my father; aren't you ashamed to give your little brother such stuff to eat when you have got so many good things for yourself?"—[New Orleans Democrat.

LIVE for something. Thousands of men breathe, move, and live, pass off the stage of life, and are heard of no more. Why? None are blessed by them; none can point to them as the means of their redemption; not a line they wrote, not a word they spoke could be recalled, and so they perished; their light went out in darkness, and they were not remembered more than the insects of yesterday. Will you thus live and die? O man, live for something. Do good, and leave behind you a monument of virtue that storms of time can never destroy. Write your name by kindness, love, and mercy on thousands you come in contact with year by year, and you will never be forgotten.—[Dr. Chalmers.

"VERY cold night, Mr. Townsend," observed the reporter. "Cold! I should say so. Went home; lit a candle; jumped into bed; tried to blow candle out; but couldn't do it; blaze frozen; had to break it off," replied Mr. Townsend.

Touching extract from a sensational novel: "Casting herself between her brother and his intended victim, the fair Inez exclaimed in a voice that vibrated with agony: 'Rodolpho, do not kill him, for if you did, he would surely die.'"

In consequence of having enlarged our facilities and conveniences for advantageously displaying

Holiday Goods

We have made larger purchases than heretofore, consequently the sight of our wares will pay you liberally for calling whether you buy or not. We handle only such such goods as are kept in a correctly regulated hence, by giving all our time and attention to legitimate details of such specialties, our stock will be better selected and adapted to the wants of the people. We shall continue, as heretofore, to exert our strength and energies in furnishing the best goods in the market—such as the people want—at honest rates, rather than vainly attempting to make advertisement readers believe that we are martyring and suiciding on prices wholly for the benefit of the dear people.

Earthenware and Grocery Store,

We will not attempt to enumerate the different articles in Earthenware that we have in stock. We simply invite you to come and see. Please keep in mind that at the same place you can get the

H. & M. OYSTERS.
Always the best; choice crackers, the best roasted coffee in town, a choice selection of candies, fruits, vegetables and everything in the line of groceries and provisions. Also the best lime, cement, calcined plaster and plastering hair, at

ACHES! PAINS!

"I ache all over!" What a common expression; and how much it means to many a poor sufferer! These aches have a cause, and more frequently than is generally suspected, the cause is the Liver or Kidneys. No disease is more painful or serious than these, and no remedy is so prompt and effective as

MISHLER'S HERB BITTERS.

No remedy has yet been discovered that is so effective in all KIDNEY and LIVER COMPLAINTS, MALARIA, DYSPEPSIA, etc., and yet it is simple and harmless. Science and medical skill have combined with wonderful success those herbs which nature has provided for the cure of disease. It strengthens and invigorates the whole system.

Hon. Thaddeus Stevens, the distinguished Congressman, once wrote to a fellow member who was suffering from indigestion and kidney disease: "Try Mischler's Herb Bitters. I believe it will cure you. I have used it for both indigestion and affection of the kidneys, and it is the most wonderful combination of medicinal herbs I ever saw."
