The SANDMAN STORY

PUSSCAT AND THE BOOK

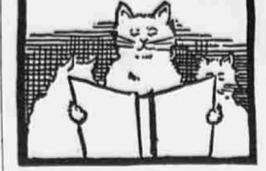

MRS. PUSSCAT was roaming over the house one day with her two kittens, when all the family were out, when she happened to find a picture book.

"Now, why should I not teach my children from a book just as people do?" she thought. "Here are A, B, C's and plenty of pictures of cats, too."

So she called her children to her and began their first lesson, but the kittens did not wish to learn their A, B, C's. They wanted to look at the pictures.

First, there was a picture of two kittens drawing another in a basket.

"Oh, oh! mewed BOTH TOM AND TIM."

"Oh, let us play like that!" mewed the kittens Tom and Tim.

"I want to drive," mewed Tom.

"No, I want to drive," mewed Tim, "and use a whip like the kitten in the picture."

Quickly Mrs. Pusscat turned the page and showed another picture to quiet them.

This picture showed five kittens on a fence snowballing a big black cat who was all dressed up and Tom and Tim began to laugh. "We'll do that to old Black Tom the first snow that comes," said Tom.

"No, you must not be bad kittens," said their mother, quickly turning to another picture.

"But why is the picture there if it is bad?" asked Tim.

Poor Mrs. Pusscat did not know, so she showed them the next picture of a little kitten being taken into the water to bathe by its mother.

"Oh, oh," mewed both Tom and Tim, "that isn't true, either, is it mother?"

Now Mrs. Pusscat did not like the water and she could not think any Mother Cat would do such a terrible thing, so she turned over to another picture, but this time the picture was that of five naughty little kittens sitting at a table.

One was crying, another was pulling the cloth to get something it wanted instead of asking for it, as a well-behaved kitten should.

Another spilled the cream, and another was eating too fast and spilling the food from its spoon, while another put its foot on the table.

Tim and Tom began to laugh and their mother told them those little kittens were all very bad and she hoped their mother put them all in bed without their supper.

"But what are books good for if all the pictures are not true?" asked Tim.

In despair Mrs. Pusscat turned to the last picture, hoping that would be one of a well-behaved cat.

It was called the Lazy Puss, and there sat a big kitty with mice running over her back and a bird perched on her head, while two little mice held up her long tail.

Mrs. Pusscat stared and then she closed the book with a bang. "There is nothing true in books," she told the kittens. "You come with me out to the barn and learn to catch mice."

"I should like to know," she said to herself, "who could have made those silly pictures? There were never kittens or cats like those in that book. I know. I would be ashamed to be a cat if there were."

LEONIDAS

LEONIDAS was a Spartan hero who earned a large bronze monument by holding the pass of Thermopylae with 300 men and a shoestring.

Sparta was a small, irritable country about the size of a Florida town site, but it was never stepped on with any success. The inhabitants lived on cayenne pepper and red beefsteak and practiced shooting at a mark eight hours a day. One time Xerxes, king of Persia, decided to annex Sparta, and after rounding up a neat little army of 2,000,000 men he headed for the Grecian archipelago, which was about in the same place it is now.

Xerxes did not get far before he ran into the pass of Thermopylae, which was a short cut between the mountains wide enough to allow two-tho men to pass without being telescoped. Here Xerxes found Leonidas drawn up in battle array, defying the whole Persian army in some of the rudest Greek adjectives ever used.

Xerxes took the affair as a joke and Leonidas had spitted a few thousand Persian husbands on his trusty sword, when he decided to surround Leonidas. When the Spartan hero discovered this, he delivered an eloquent address to his men and charged the entire Persian army, which filled him so full of arrows that he had to be pin-feathered before being removed to the family residence.

Leonidas' name at once became a household word, and autographs and kodak pictures of the deceased were eagerly sought after. His death aroused so much indignation that the Spartans rose up and threw Xerxes across the Hellespont with chagrin written all over his profile. Leonidas did not die in vain, as he had furnished the impassioned high school graduate with some of the most vivid eloquence and weird rhetoric ever uncoiled from an opera house stage.

Be There

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

CARLOS MARTYN in his biography of Wendell Phillips said this: "It is not enough to be ready to go where duty calls; a man should stand around where he can hear the call."

Be There. A few years ago at a great American political convention, one of those mysterious moments arrived, in which a great outburst broke in enthusiasm for one man. But the man was Not There; at that moment he was entertaining friends in one of the city's hotels. Before he could be reached, a comparatively unknown man was called upon and, through the magnetism of the moment, he was inspired into one of the greatest efforts of his life—and it swept him into the United States senate, where he has proved himself one of the great leaders of the country.

Be There. When you make an appointment, Be There. When you agree to do a certain task, Be There. If you are looking toward an Opportunity, Be There when the Opportunity comes your way. The Leaders in the business world, and in every other sphere of activity, are constantly alert for men and women who can measure up to Chances that they hold in the hollow of their hands. You, whoever you are, and wherever you work, if you are conforming constantly to your Ideals of the best, you need have no fear but that at the proper moment you will be the one who is—There.

Just Folks

By EDGAR A. GUEST

AT THE END OF THE WEEK.

When I have paid for what I owe,
The grocer and the coal man, too,
The boy who shoveled off the snow
And given the milkman what is due,
When I have paid the monthly rent,
And squared the plumber for his pains,
I find that all I have is spent,
I can't go wrong on what remains.

Let Polly beckon as she will,
I tread the horizontal line,
When I have paid my tailor's bill,
I am not apt to purchase wine,
When I have paid for hats and shoes,
The tempter has to hike along;
I am no customer for booze,
On what is left I can't go wrong.

I never get my fingers burned
By mixing stocks that quickly fall,
The job with which I'm most concerned
Is buying clothes for children small.
I hear men talk of surplus dough
But none of it I've ever had,
When I have paid up what I owe
If I break even I am glad.

What Saving Means.
Conservation and thrift extended to the little things makes amazing totals in big undertakings. In 1919 the Baltimore & Ohio railroad used one acre of coal less for one and a half billion times, and the result was that the great road's coal bill was $1,176,594 less than for the same work in 1918.

When the train came in back in 1910

TEN years ago you might have seen one or two automobiles waiting outside the station, when the weather was pleasant.

Today the square is crowded with them. And most of the cars you generally see there are moderate-price cars.

There is one tire, at least, that makes no distinction between small cars and large cars so far as quality is concerned—the U. S. Tire.

Every U. S. Tire is just like every other in quality—the best its builders know how to build.

Whatever the size of your car, the service you get out of U. S. Tires is the same. It isn't the car, but the man who owns the car, that sets the standard to which U. S. tires are made.

We come in contact with the small car owner every day and we have found that he is just as much interested as the big car owner.

We feel the same way about it. That's why we represent U. S. Tires in this community.

THE COUNTRY GIRL

As we the Sacred Pages read and turn,
There were good maids in Bible times we learn,
Who served the Lord and those who were in need;
Who saved whole nations—ruled the king, indeed.

The modern country girl's work, O, how sweet!
Yes, for the Master's use it makes her meet;
She reads the Bible, goes to Sunday school;
This helps her to keep her superiors' rule.

And do the work in Christian households found,
And be of service, helpful all around.
The country girl's life isn't monotonous
Or dull, but lively and salubrious;

It's sunny, airy, shady, blest with flowers,
With singing birds, with lucious fruits and bowers.
Unlike city girls, she need not paint her face;
Her varied occupations give her grace;

She milks and cooks, bakes bread and cakes and pies;
She makes peach dumplings while her dough does rise.
To the dance and theatre she would not go,
But where her Christian graces still will grow;

To virtuous social meetings, singings pure;
To church activities—her joys are sure.
The country girl keeps house so nice and clean;
She can have pure happiness like any queen.

Trials, too, she has—God sweetens them and she is blest.
She often thinks of heaven and her eternal rest.
