SPEECH

HON. SAMUEL S. COX,

Johnson Union Club of the 6th

Congressional District of

New York,

ON THE EVENING OF AUG. 9th, 1866.

The Hall of the Johnson Democratic Union Association, at 206 Eighth avenue, was completely filled on the evening of the 9th inst., by a large and respectable audience, to listen to an address upon the work and infamies of the late Rump Congress.

At 8 o'clock Mr. Andrew D. Hoagland, having been elected Chairman, arose and said:

GENTLEMEN AND FELLOW UNIONISTS:

This is but the first of a series of Union meetings to be held in this place during the ensuing campaign, and to be addressed by able and eloquent speakers. I sincerely thank you for the honorable position to which you have assigned me, and esteem it unnecessary to state the object of my coming together. You are all well, and I will not take time to language eloquent, able, and exhaustive upon the deeds and misdeeds of the late infamous Rump, by the gentleman whom I have the pleasure of introducing to you, the Hon. S. S. Cox. (Long applause.)

SPEECH OF HON. S. S. COX.

The first session of the Thirty-ninth Congress has ended. The best thing it did was to die. (Laughter.) Not altogether lovely in its life, its death was its chief merit.

Posterity will remember with gratitude the brave and noble spirits who gave to the tomb. But it is not altogether dead.

Non omnia mori. It survives in the memories of men and in 5,000 pages of Congressional Globes. (Laughter.) Upon five volumes of material piled upon the floor of quarto, sits an asinine pedestal of talk, this American Rump! (Laughter.) It is therefore, monumental! Let me lay my in-mortale on its tomb. Nero had his friend, his shadow, after death, on his infernal frigate. I would lay my infernal frigate on the shrine of this Congress of petty Neros. (Laughter.) My sadness is very similar to that of the minister who was requested to preach the funeral of a young man, who, after giving his characteristics, he ordered the body removed, while the choir sang the hymn:

"With rapture we delight to see, This wicked sect removed!"

(Great laughter.)

True, it was not an assymetric body. It was a Rump. It was misbegotten and misshapen. But it was all ours. The mother loves more dearly her mutilated offspring.

It was not ugly, but it was ugly. It had in its nature more temper than reason.

More wickedness and less love; more gall and less milk. But the charity of our kind infuses it in a rickety organism.

(Laughter.) Composition, motives and acts were incongruous and extraordinary. Before reviewing them, let me tell you what the Thirty-ninth Congress should have been.

It should have been a Congress of restoration, of reconstruction, of reconciliation, of peace, of justice, of honesty, of truth, of courage, of loyalty, of patriotism, of devotion, of self-sacrifice, of heroism, of glory, of honor, of fame, of power, of wealth, of influence, of respect, of admiration, of love, of friendship, of affection, of kindness, of gentleness, of meekness, of mildness, of sweetness, of goodness, of grace, of peace, of love, of joy, of hope, of faith, of charity, of all the virtues and graces of the Christian religion. (Laughter.)

From the 4th of December to the 1st of July, there has been offered to the Constitutional amendments, forty-five; bills and resolutions for keeping up disunion, disunion, disunion, disunion, disunion,

disunion, disunion, disunion, disunion,

disunion, disunion, disunion, disunion,

disunion, disunion, disunion, disunion,

disunion, disunion, disunion, disunion,

disunion, disunion, disunion, disunion,

disunion, disunion, disunion, disunion, and during the war upon the people of the North, in their persons, property and possessions, upon men who strove to sustain the Government and Union and to promote and end the war by civilized rational methods, had made its leaders of a just retribution. They cried:

"Perpetrate our power! It will never do to have North and South united; for then our days are numbered! We are into life by sundering the sections, so will die if their union be perfected." Not so, argued Andrew Johnson. (Applause.)

He had received other teaching. He was not his own resolution in the Senate, copied from the Crittenden resolution, which declared that when the Federal authority was violated in the States, secession was should stop. He showed the States to be "one" again in their old Federal bond

"many"; yet each State to preserve its rights, dignity and equality unimpaired.

He held that no State or number of States could in any manner sever their connection with the Federal Union. This Congress denied. It held the connection to be of the Constitution. He held that, war having in vain, it was necessary to constitute a new government, to be based upon the principles of justice and equity and harmony to the land, where carnage had prevailed. In his proclamations as to North Carolina and other States, in his message to Congress, he represented the President has held aloft the banner of the Nation. (Cheers.) The smoke raised around him by his foes can obscure the stary glory of its folds, or the dignity and sta-tefulness of him who bears that ensign!

(Cheers.)

Mark the difference between the conduct of the Executive and Congress. The President, by open pardon, by public proclamation, by unmistakable action, restored his position for Vice President. In his judgment, secession in every form, whether by policy and force from within or without the Federal Government, should be suppressed that the Union must be maintained.

When the Congress met it was under secret and caucus control, and with hypocritical pretenses. On the 4th of December last the Senate was called to order. Its President, Mr. Gray, gave glory to God that only equalled by the sanctity of the

For it was but a few days after this, that Senator from Mississippi while in debate

(p. 24) declared that "these States were conquered communities, communities in which the right of self-government does not exist." (Cheers.) He demanded that there should be a declaration by the Executive that hostilities had ceased, before</
