The telegraph this afternoon may give us something more definite than is found in the morning news. At any rate, we may within the next few days expect to hear of a most important, and, we think, desperate engagement as our information from Kentucky says that the rebels will fight there like demons-decming it a struggle of life or death to them.

Considerable interest is felt among politicians in the State to know who Governor Gamble will nominate to fill the cacancies in the United States Senate, caused by the expulsion of Polk and Johnson. Francis P. Blair has many friends who would rejoice to see him transferred to the Senate. Sample Orr also has many friends, who claim for him an appointment to the Senate. His selection would probably give as great satisfaction to the Union men of the State as that of any other person in it. Many others have also been spoken of in this connection, among them Judge Breckinridge (cousin of the Kentucky traitor) and S. M. Glover, of St.

A New National Currency. As our readers are already advised, a bill has been introduced into Congress to provide a new national currency, based upon a deposit of United States stocks. Under this bill banks may be organized in any portion of the country, with capitals of not less than $50,000; and upon depositing with the Bureau, to be constituted for the management of the system, bonds of the United States, shall be entitled to receive bills for circulation to a like amount. In addition to such security for the redemption of the bills, it is provided that each bank shall keep on hand, in moneys of the United States (which provision is intended, we presume, to embrace Treasury-notes) twenty-five per cent. of the amount of its circulation outstanding at any one time. The bills of banks organized under this law are to be received in payment of the dues to Government, except customs. The provisions for the management of the banks, and the proceeding to be taken in case of default in redemption of bills, are similar to those of the banking law of the State of New York, and do not require extended notice. The scheme also provides that thirty per cent, of the capital of each bank shall be paid up at the time of the commencing business. When sixty per cent. of the capital is paid up, the bank may apply to the Controller, who may extend such time for paying up the remainder as he may deem compatible with the public interests.

The New York Times thinks that however excellent the scheme may be, it does not seem probable that the public would avail themselves of it to any considerable extent. The banking capital of the country is already largely in excess of the wants of commerce and trade. Capital can now be better employed in other directions than in creating new institutions. As the Treasurynotes are to be received in Government dues, and can be purchased or adopted by any bank as its currency, it is not at all likely that parties will associate themselves together for the purpose of banking, under a law which compels them to keep on hand the amount of their circulation in Government Stocks drawing only six per cent., and in addition, twenty-five per cent., either in specie or Treasury notes drawing no interest whatever-a sum exceeding perhaps their capital-while at the same time they must otherwise have on hand an amount of capital fully equal to that of the banks doing business under the laws of most of the States. The banks of New England, for example, would have to provide double capitals to avail themselves of the schemes proposed. In the competition that would naturally arise, it is not difficult to see that the banks to be organized under the law of Congress would have much the worst of it. The disabilities under which they are placed, would, we fear, deter, at such a time as the present, the public from embarking in them, leaving the law but little better than a silent letter upon the statute book.

Rolls, Missouri
This place has obtained considerable note

since the commencement of the war. It is the present terminus of the south-west branch of the Pacific Railroad, and distant from St. Louis 113 miles. It is the countysent of Phelps County, and is situated on a ridge of the Ozark Mountains. The population of Rolls, previous to its occupation by the Federal army, may possibly have reached 250. The only public buildings here are the jail and court-house. There is neither school-house nor church.

A correspondent, who recently traveled through that State, says that " no one, who has never traveled through Missouri, can have any adequate idea of the degraded condition of the common people, or the wretched manner in which they live. Most of them spend their days in miserable log buts, and are apparently perfectly contented with their mode of life. Of course, the people are supremely ignorant, few of them being able to read or write. In the appearance of every thing around me, but the glorious landscape, is palpable, indubitable evidence of the demoralizing, barbarous influence of slavery."

Contributions to the Great Exhibition The American Commissioners for the London World's Fair have postponed the departure of the Government vessel which is to carry goods for exhibition free, until the last of this month, or two weeks later than the date previously announced. The appre hension of difficulty with England has delayed the receipt of contributions, but the prospect now is that the space in the versel will be fully occupied, and that American industry will be adequately represented at the Great Exhibition. An effort is being made to secure an appropriation from Con in Southern Kentucky and Tennessee. It is | grees, to enable the Commissioners to make the necessary arrangements for transmitting

A British Example

It will be recollected that the Dublin antiwar meeting was presided over and addressed by O'Donohue, M. P. Immediately after that event the Lord Chancellor removed him from the commission of the peace, as a punishment for the past and a warning for the future. This is the way in which Great Britain-whose organs profess to mourn over the extinction of free speech in our Northern States-rewards any difference of opinion from the powers that be.

The English press are bewailing with horror the barbarous modes of conducting the civil war in the United States, but they had no horror for the English mode of dealing with the Hindoo prisoners during the East It dia rebellion, by lashing them to the muzzles of cannon and blowing them to pieces by firing them off in platoons.

Competent United States engineers, however, have frequently ports to have witnessed as many as thirty reported that to complete the defensive works in that neighborhood another fort is indispensable, to be erected on Lime Point a jutting piece of land directly opposite the fort already constructed. Accordingly Congress, several years ago, made an appropria-tion for the purchase of the necessary site and commencement of the work. The owner of the land, on being applied to, demanded a most exorbitant price for it. Nevertheless, after a struggle, a contract was entered into or its purchase at the price of $200,000, for a few acres of desert, absolutely valueless for any other purpose than that of being made the site for a military work. Nevertheless the court of California, which recently decided that the property was not subject to be con-demned. The Court held that the State could order the condemnation of land only in a case where the owner refused to sell, or where the owner and the Government could not agree upon the price—and that inasmuch as the owner did once agree to sell and a contract for the price was then made, the Government has no cause of action will be seen that there is no recourse for the United States except to submit to the proposed extortion or leave a most important perbor exposed to any maritime enemy who may be looking for a convenient spot at which to strike. The difference between the Government and the speculator is $75,000; and with the Executive is left the responsibility of deciding whether our Pacific em pire shall be left longer thus unguarded rather than yield to the attempted extortion. rebel invasion of Eastern Kentucky has ended in a disgraceful rout.

On Monday last, Colonel Garfield's forces (including the Forty-second Obio, Colonel Lahao F. Moore's Teath Kentucky and some eigheen hundred cavalry.) had proceeded as far up the Big Sandy as Paintsville—within seven miles of the rebel camp, when they were met by a flag of truce bearing a message from Humphrey Marshall asking if matters could not be arranged without a fight. Colonel Gaifield immediately replied that he could offer him no arragement except either to fight or surrender unconditionally. Marshall then addressed his men, informing them that they had no alternative ex-ing them that they had no alternative ex-cepting to surrender or disband, and giving them their choice. They decided to disband. They immediately collected and set fire to all their wagons, tents, camp equipage, sup plies, etc., and then each man was permitted to take care of himself, and the whole force scattered in confusion. No attempt was made to save any thing excepting their cannon, which were hauled off.

As soon as Colonel Garfield was apprised of the facts, he dispatched his cavalry in pursuit. They are expected to capture the guns, as well as, perhaps, to pick up many of the flying rebeis.

A sufficient force will doubtless be left in this region to secure to it peace and safety for the future.

Millitary Kers.

In military parlance, certain strategical points, natural or artificial, are designated as the keys of certain positions or sections of country. Cumberland Gap is said to be the key of East Tennessee, Memphis of West Tennessee; Bowling Green is the key of Middle Kentucky, Paduch of Western Kentucky; Springfield is the key of Southern Missouri, and, under present circumstances, of the whole State; Cairo is the key of an immense extent of country; Key West is the key to a great part of Florida, and Fort Pickens to a great part of Alabama; Fortress Monroe is the key of Eastern Virginia, and Cheat Mountain and Romney of the Western part of the State. Our navy carries in its capacious pocket the key of the Gulf and Atlantic coasts; and this has created for us several minor keys to the States there bordering—such as Port Royal, Biloxi, Hatteras, etc. And so we might designate other points on the coast and in-land, that are keys which open the way to large sections of rebel territory. Some few of these keys are yet in the hands of the rebel robbers, but most of them are in possession of their legal owner, the National Government. Those which are not yet in our hands, such as Bowling Green, Memphis, Springdeld and Manassas, we are just about ready to capture from the robbers by means of our military police. When we once get hold of them, our people will make rapid strides across the country toward the original dens of thieves and pirates, in South Caro-lina and on the Gulf, and scourge the bandits into honesty. And after these lost keys are again ours, as we believe they will be before the Winter passes away, we might be sure that the nation will not again let them slip out of its hands .- N. Y. Times.
