THE OLD TIMER.

THE OLD TIMER has a warm place in the hearts of men, and his status is fixed in history. The simpler form of expression is used in designating the individual who has a commonplace history for the part he played in a particular community; and Dodge City was the hub around which noted characters revolved, from the southern coast to the Dakotas, from the Pacific Ocean to the lakes. The history they made in their individual lives was the history of their rendezvous, the Dodge City of early days. It was not creditable as an enduring basis for future glory, but it is fixed in national reputation. If we are to judge from experience of a Dodge City visitor on a late visit to the White House. The President, however, is a cosmopolitan, and the role in which he forms the most distinguishing feature, is not confined or limited to a single class of well known men. That Dodge City should have National fame by reason of the men who were known as desperate characters in the plains times is no discredit to the city of today, for the pages of history are replete with the chronicles of bloody antagonies. All early struggles were sanguinary, and it required heroism to lay the foundation for a better state of society and upon which to build cities and communities in the pursuit of peace and industry. It is not profitable or wise to discredit the means through which Dodge City emerged from the mass of chaos to the staid and prosperous city of the present, sufficient into the day is the evil thereof.

As one page after another is turned in the progress of events we view the past with regrets as time and distance has crossed out the once seemingly cruel events which are only noted as the initiative in hewing off the rough edges of a wild and woolly career. And the past is forgotten in the exercises of the present and in the plan of the future. It is the burden of the present with which we deal, and not the means which the early settlers crossed the Babocon.

There is to-day no place in Dodge City for Ben Daniels, Mysterious Dave, East-em-up Jake, Ben Holliday, Luke Short, or similar characters: Some are dead, some are living, and some are lost. They developed under the endowments of thirty years ago or more, when frontier life was infested with violent men, who held their lives in their hands, and who settled all disputes and avenged all wrongs with a loaded gun. The peaceful and industrious rule of the present is conducted by the citizens who, put first reliance in respect to duty and obedience to law.

They were those who were always obedient to the finer instincts of human race, and upon whose memory there is grateful respect, upon whose characters is the legacy by which the city has thrived and prospered. The early citizen of Dodge City who respected his neighbor and sought the promotion of the better things of life, laid the foundation of the city of today. While those first mentioned gave notoriety the latter have left the fruits of toil, industry and non-esty. It seemed that both classes have a place in the history of the city, but the men who built the city have the affection and esteem of those who survive them. And so fame rests on creditable deeds, and while the out law has a passing reputation, while early events are still fresh in mind, the men who gave solidity and good character as a heritage will endure so long as the marble shafts in the cemetery grounds resist the decay and corroding of time—and then some.

There are yet left but few men who shouldered the responsibility of thirty years ago or more. Each year the decimating hand of time marks the victim by reason of age and disease, and soon the old heavy heads, weak frames and wrinkled visage will be consigned to the earth. The sting of death and the victory of the grave is the tribute at last.

While grateful memory strews flowers on the grave, and sheds tears on the past. We must view the remnant of the early pioneer with a degree of respect and kindness. It is the old timer who is the Gibraltar upon which the city is fortified. It is to him the later settler recognized an enduring faith in the future and stability of city and country. And they are not all old men who are numbered among the survivors of the frontier days. Time has dealt kindly with them all. Some are yet in the prime of life, they have lost little of the vitality of life. Energy, activity and endurance they still possess; but there are those who care little for the world's empty honors; who have passed the meridian of life; who have bent forms and gray heads, who are "crossing the Bar" in the shadows of the twilight, and listening for the toll of the evening bell.

After taking two bottles I felt like a new person, and feel it my duty to tell suffering women what Foley's Kidney Remedy did for me." The Palace Drug store.

THEATRE TALK NO. 5.

ONE OF THE IMPORTANT FIRST CLASS PRODUCTIONS OF THE SEASON, "MY BOY, JACK," WILL BE SEEN HERE IN A FEW DAYS. The play was written by Edwin Milton Royle, author of "The Squaw Man," the most famous Broadway success of recent seasons, "Mollie Moonshine," which Marie Cahill found one of her most popular productions, "Capt. Impudence" and other noted plays. The company will have for its head and star EUGENE MOORE, who will be remembered for his brilliant performance of "Monte Cristo" and his high position among leading men and the cleverest light comedians. MR. MOORE SHINES BRIGHTLY IN THE PART OF JACK, and nothing could be better suited to the taste of American theatregoers than the character of this independent, worthy young son of a typical American business man. THE OPPORTUNITIES IN THE PART TO SHOW THE ACTOR'S ART in delineating a vivacious personality with a keen play of wit and humor, through which is seen true strength and nobility of character, are seldom excelled in any play. MR. MOORE IS ONE OF THE FEW ACTORS IN THE COUNTRY WHOSE WIDE AND COMPLETE EXPERIENCE and high ideal equip them to convey the full excellence of such a role. The other parts in the play are all of unusual interest, including the musician Karje, Margeret the prima donna, her dissipated father, and the landlady of the poet and composer in their poverty. The whole play is full of the best kind of entertainment the stage offers, and presented thoroughly well. There are four acts which carry the story from the poor lodgings of the poet and musician through the handsome apartments of the prima donna and the mansion of her rich admirer to the green room of the opera house. You won't see any thing better in town this season than this production. STAR, PLAY AND COMPANY IS ALL THAT COULD BE DESIRED. Don't wait until the last minute to buy your tickets and then get if you don't get good seats. WE'RE EXPECTING YOU and give you the greatest value you have ever had for your money. NO CHEATING WITH THIS COMPANY. Usual prices will prevail.
