ALBUQUERQUE NEW MEXICO

SAN JUAN'S KICK.

There is a good deal of justifiable indignation in San Juan county, New Mexico just at present on account of the retrenchment policy of the Denver and Rio Grande railway which has reduced the train service into the San Juan country from daily to tri-weekly, thus further isolating one of the richest and most progressive and most prosperous sections of the state. It is hard to understand the wisdom of such a policy. The Denver and Rio Grande makes much of its northern New Mexico territory in its advertising literature but apparently is not going out of its way to foster the development of that district. It is a grave injustice to the San Juan; but it ought to work out for the benefit of Albuquerque. The continuation of such a policy is bound to help the movement for a southern outlet. It is impossible to bottle up one of the greatest irrigated sections of New Mexico. Those people and their business must have an outlet, and the attitude of the Rio Grande is the one for greater activity on the part of the people of central New Mexico.

It has been demonstrated that what was thought to be the worst part of the route between here and Farmington is easily traversable for automobiles. In time there is nothing that can prevent the construction of a railroad from Albuquerque to Farmington. In the meantime—far that will take time—every consideration of business enterprise demands that an automobile freight and passenger service be established between the two cities. Once installed it will at least be superior to the tri-weekly narrow gauge stunt which San Juan now enjoys. Heavy auto trucks can handle at twelve miles an hour nearly everything that a freight train carries. San Juan county could get her supplies in and her products out more quickly by means of a gasoline route to Albuquerque than by the present method; and it would be the first step toward consolidating the northwest with the rest of the state and breaking the links which bind San Juan county to remote southwestern Colorado.

The securing of a mail contract between here and Farmington would make the service pay from the start. A big tourist business could be built up to Jemez Springs. A few thousand dollars, it is estimated, will put the road in good shape to Farmington; rates could be made reasonable; and by cutting down the present rail schedule to Farmington, a day and a half, to a half a day auto trip, it would seem that the consequences would be very few of themselves.

A SHOCKING ENCOUNTER.

"I demand," wrote Colonel Watson to Ben Tillman, "an immediate explanation, delivered to me second by your second, of the gratuitous insult which you have offered me in intimating that there is no possibility of a dam here. Yours, respectfully, etc., etc."

"Dear Colonel," wrote Ben Tillman, "how would you like to go take a long running jump into the lake? As ever, respectfully, etc., etc."

Watson to Tillman: "Dear Ben, Oh, very well. I remain, etc., etc."

No bloodshed. Another awful tragedy has been averted.

In view of the persistence of Messrs. Watson, Bryan, Harman, Harvey, etc., etc., it is natural to suppose that Governor Wilson is reminded of that famous old dictum recently brought into prominence: "Every time I come to town, they start to kick in my dog around."

THE CASE OF PITTSBURGH.

How Pittsburgh has adopted the business form of government and is accomplishing her moral and commercial regeneration through sheer determination and civic spirit, against great obstacles, is graphically told in the leading article in the current number of the Saturday Evening Post. It is an intensely interesting story to those who have been watching the steady progress of the movement to eliminate partisan politics, and resultant graft and mal-administration, in American cities. Pittsburgh, in the face of the opposition of the state right and bosses within and without her corporate limits, has won more than half the battle and there is good reason to believe that her government is getting to the point where it is administered in the interest of the people. Instead of over a hundred aldermen, and an equally unwieldy number of school district officials, Pittsburgh's government is now in the hands of less than a dozen men. They are men in whom the people have confidence, who receive each over six thousand dollars a year salary and who devote their time to the business of running the city and running it as a man would run his private business. The most significant fact about Pittsburgh's commission form of government is that while these men at the head of affairs are the unanimous choice of the city, many of them would be defeated on a ward vote. In other words the ward system, if reverted to today, would immediately put unfit men back into office.

Pittsburgh is a city of over half a million people. By an overwhelming majority the people of Pittsburgh have condemned as worse than useless the old aldermanic form of government. In the face of tremendous opposition one of the leading cities of America has adopted the business form of government and is satisfied and prosperous. Hundreds of smaller towns in scores of states have long ago demonstrated the efficiency of the commission form and the senselessness of injecting national party lines into city management. The invention of Galveston and Des Moines has started a new era in the government of American cities, large and small. The time is rapidly coming when partisan administration, by an unwieldy system of aldermen will be a relic of ancient history in this country.

THE GERM AT ITS BEST.

We hear much of the ravages of the ginger germ in the larger cities of New Mexico but are apt to overlook the enterprise and push which are bringing to the front the smaller towns all over the state. In their work for the New Mexico Resources Edition of the Morning Journal, which will be the largest newspaper ever published in the southwest, giving the world for the first time an adequate idea of the resources of the state as a whole, the representatives of this paper have found the readiest response from the relatively smaller towns. The various towns along the Rio Grande south of here have already been mentioned; the eagerness with which they have accepted a splendid advertising, boasting opportunity, is equaled by towns of similar size all over the state.

It is through the liberality of such towns as Springer, Cimarron, French, Dawson, Vaughn, Tucuman, Clayton, Nara Vaa and Fort Sumner and many others that the Morning Journal will be enabled to make this resource edition what it ought to be. Everyone of the places mentioned has taken up the project with enthusiasm and their citizens have been unanimous in the feeling that the opportunity was one not to be neglected. Each of those places, as in the case of the many others already mentioned, will have an illustrated write-up completely covering the program of the town and the development of the resources of its surrounding country, with something about the men who have taken the leading part in the work of advancement.

The people in all these smaller towns have demonstrated that they are wide awake, that they believe in business advertising that they want the world to know about what they are doing. Each is ambitious and looking for the main chance in town building, and the spirit everywhere is evident, even in the smaller villages. It is most promising for the future of the new state. The people of New Mexico mean business. In its capacity as the only statewide newspaper in New Mexico the Morning Journal intends to continue its policy of giving all sections of the state all the benefit of its power, in season and out of season.

PEACE FIGHT PROMISED.

The thanks of the country, says the Philadelphia Public Ledger, are due the senators who first made the move to bring the debate on the arbitration treaties out of executive session. The senators who opposed, in the first instance, open debate were those who have opposed ratification and their purpose was to get the grounds of their opposition before their own constituents. Their motive does not matter; the important aspect of the situation is that the United States will hear a debate, which will become historical on the whole subject of peace and international arbitration. There is every prospect that the debate will be a long one and there is reason to believe that it will be acrimonious. But the interesting phase of this debate for advocates of peace is that the longer the debate is continued the stronger will become the peace idea, and the greater number of votes in the senate in favor of the treaties. Who can doubt the issue?

The proposed wireless station at San Francisco, with its lofty tower, may link our Pacific coast with Japan, and will certainly be able to communicate with the Canal Zone and the Hawaiian Islands. The distance record thus far is that established by Marconi on the way from Ireland to South America, when he received messages at a point five thousand miles from home. Aspiring physicists are asking whether by this means we shall at some distant day reach across interstellar space to communicate with a neighbor planet.

A prima donna in the Toulouse opera house offended opera-goers by her original version of the final scene of "Tosca." Instead of a flying leap from the prison battlements, being lady of operatic avowal, she elected to be shot. Evidently Mme. Compere believes that while runs are a part of the prima donna's business, jumps are not.

Father Says

Two kids are growing, four a care, six a burden, and eight an affliction, and no man is responsible for his afflictions.

Relatives are an affliction, and I suppose a man has to have afflictions to make a man of him, but if I had any influence with Providence, I should have preferred not to be a man.

There is just one thing in this world more pitiful than a country minister, and that is his wife.

A man who can't lie is a fool, and one who won't, a bigger.

Now I, being a preacher, have to lie in a business way. To tell a man that there is a larger hell than this earth is a lie on the face of it. Because there couldn't be.

Manners don't count any more than the good apples on the top of the box to hide the rotten ones beneath.

If a man reached forty without becoming a cynic, he was a fool and might never have reached forty.

A success can be a cynic, for cynicism is simply a pretty good idea of the meanness of human nature and an unfounded expectation of anything especially decent coming from it.

Nothing is more important than ourselves and what affects us.

Love is divine, hate devilish and meanness just cursed human nature, and a mixture of the three, in more or less degree, makes man.

A man who knows life never wrote about it. It would be too painful. It wouldn't sell. —The Hobbie-Merrill Company, January, 1912.

20 ADDED TO SHOP FORCE AT CLOVIS.

Santa Fe People Working More Men; Raton Man Training for Go With Pappen, Indian Champion.

(Special Correspondence to Morning Journal) Clovis, N. M., Jan. 28.—Twenty new men have been added to the Santa Fe shop force here this week. Most of whom are experienced men, and have been transferred here from points in the east, several coming from Topeka, Kan., and Chicago, Ill. Six men were either laid off or transferred to other places at the system during the week. This shows a healthy increase in the local shop force.

The Humphreys and Glenwood dairies have been bought by Messrs. B. D. Graham, cashier of the First National bank and Gus Herlihy, an experienced dairyman, and they propose to merge the two into the greatest dairy business on the plains.

Fred Winters is here from Raton, south training for the fifteen-round fight with Ben Pappen, the Indian champion. The fight is to be pulled off here the 8th of February, and the sports of the town are showing unusual interest in the coming event. Each man will have a strong backing, as the general impression for some time that they should be treated with respect.

The fine Apple residence, four miles north of town, was purchased by the Barry brothers, moved to town this week and located on a fine lot near the high school building. There has been quite a demand of late for modern houses.

THE LAW, AND NOT SENTIMENT SAYS MR. CLANCY

Says Criticism of County Fee Opinion is Based On Dislike of Effect and Not On Legal Validity.

Albuquerque, N. M., Jan. 27, 1912. To the Editor of the Journal, Albuquerque, New Mexico.

Dear Sir:—As a general rule a person holding such an office as the one which I occupy must expect that his official acts will not please everybody, and ought not to attempt to defend or discuss them through the press, but in view of your condemnation of my recent opinion on the subject of compensation of public officers during the time between their qualification and action by the legislature on that subject, I feel impelled to call to your attention a view which apparently has escaped your notice. I will say distinctly, however, that I have no desire now to defend that opinion, and I am satisfied that it will meet the approval of such lawyers as have time to give it consideration.

Your criticism of the opinion is founded upon your dislike of its effect, and not upon any discussion of its soundness, as a matter of law. You say that it is based upon an assumption that the legislature will not act as required by the constitution, but this is inaccurate. I made no such assumption. I pointed out the possibility of non-action, and the lack of immediate remedy, only to emphasize the view that the old statutes as to compensation of county officers must be considered as in force until the legislature does act. Personally, I believe that the legislature will act in accordance with the constitution, and will do so as early as is practicable. That there are many difficulties in the way of legislation, satisfactorily and properly on this subject, will be admitted by any one who has given careful attention to it, but that is not a matter for discussion at the present time.

I cannot, as you appear to think that I should, permit my personal desire to influence my mind in the construction of a constitutional provision, and in this particular matter, I have endeavored to suppress all mental reference to what I would like. If the constitution had declared that the county officers elected at the first election should receive no compensation until the legislature should act, this would have been better calculated to give effect to the purpose of destroying the present system of compensation, but the constitution does not say anything of the kind, and I am unable to inject into it something which is not expressed in it. My view of what the law ought to be cannot properly influence me.

officially to declare the law to be different from what it really is.

I appreciate that fully your practical suggestion that the present condition may lead some of the county officers to attempt to delay or defeat action by the legislature, and I personally regret that possibility, but that is no sound foundation upon which to base a construction of the constitution. I trust that you, and others who sympathize with your views, may be able to arouse public sentiment to such an extent as to influence the legislature to a prompt and early discharge of the duty imposed upon it by the constitution with regard to this subject, but in saying this I do not intend to express any apprehension that the legislature will not discharge that duty.

What I wish to make clear is that your criticism is based entirely upon your dissatisfaction with the effect of my opinion, and while I sympathize with your feeling, yet it would be highly improper for me to permit such a feeling to influence my mind.
