Another dispatch to the same paper from Constantinople declares that the Ottoman government is closely watching the various moves of the Russian government in Asia Minor. The Turks know, says the despatch, that they cannot bring all of their large army in Asia to European Turkey without grave danger of precipitating Russian aggression in Asia Minor.

Turks, the despatch continues, realize that the discussion of its troops does not depend upon the Balkan affair so much as upon the attitude of Russia in Asia. It is said that herein lies the secret of the retreat along the extended line of war.

A despatch from Sofia to the Express says a big battle has been raging around Kirk-Kilischi for two days. It is reported that the Turkish defenses between that city and Adrianople have been broken by the Bulgarians.

The Express understands that General Sir John French has been recalled to London from Denver, Colo. It is supposed in connection with the Balkan war.

The Larissa correspondent of the Mail, describing the capture of Glassou, says the impetuosity of the Greek frontal attack prevented the completion of a flanking movement behind Tratissena to cut off the Turkish retreat, otherwise 2,000 Turks would have been captured. From Athens is reported the safe arrival at Piraeus of the four destroyers purchased in England.

Former Manager of Big Refinery Tells How Interests Were Absorbed by Havermeyer's Working Argument.

By Morning Journal Special Leased Wire. New York, Oct. 22.—Wars among sugar companies for the control of large interests and the regulation of prices in this country from 1890 to 1901 were described at length today by C. Augustus Spreckels, president of the Federal Sugar company, who was a witness in the hearing of the federal suit to dissolve the so-called "sugar trust."

Mr. Spreckels, a son of Claus Spreckels who founded the California Sugar company, was general manager of that company in 1883 when, he testified today, his refinery and a refinery of the American Sugar company were the only plants west of the Missouri. For three years the two worked under an agreement by which his company sold four-fifths of the sugar in the territory mentioned and the American one-fifth, with prices held two cents a pound above the New York market through a freight arrangement with the railroads.

In 1885, Hawaiian planters, said Mr. Spreckels, obtained control of the American Sugar Refinery company and was followed on the Pacific slope that carried prices below the cost of production.

Two years later, said the witness, John E. Seales proposed to Claus Spreckels that the California company go into new combination to be called the Sugar Refineries Company. He refused to join the new company, but informed Seales that if the Sugar Refineries company would confine its operations to the territory east of Missouri, the California company would agree not to invade that territory.

Mr. Spreckels said that nothing further was heard from Seales, but soon afterward the new combination bought the American Sugar Refinery company, with its plant west of the Missouri, and immediately his father retaliated by building the factory of the Spreckels Sugar Refinery company at Philadelphia. The witness said he was made general manager of this new plant and that another war was declared which kept sugar prices below cost until 1890.

About that time a representative from the Sugar Refineries company called him for "news," the witness continued, and for six weeks prices soared and both companies made money, thus without warning the opposition company suddenly broke the market and later learned that James C. Mathison, the representative who had asked for "news" had been refused to break his agreement through pressure from Seales and the Hawaiian interests which threatened to terminate another sugar company if he went against Spreckels.

As showing the scope of what evidence might be offered, the court ordered decisions which grew out of a railroad employee's dispute. The original purpose of the employees, the court said, was not to obstruct the United States mail, but as an incident of the execution of the conspiracy to the mail, other tracks the mail trains were obstructed and the United States郵政 court held that all the acts constituted a conspiracy to obstruct the mails.

Later came the witness, Charles H. H. Harkness and T. A. Havermeyer bought four per cent of the stock of the Spreckels company and the Western Sugar Refining Company, the so-called trust, was organized. Seales' attorney the witness resigned as general manager of his father's company.

"Why did you do it?" asked Assistant United States Attorney Knapp. "Well, I wouldn't," said Mr. Spreckels. "But I did not phrase it exactly with my contract of the company's business as I said. My father wrote me that the trust was complaining of my refusal to break suggestions as to prices and amount of matings, and I said to myself that the minority never should control the majority and when I did so, it was time for me to act out."

Foremen of Construction Firms Tell of Wrecking Work Done by Agents of Union Executive Committee.

JUDGE ANDERSON MAKES SWEEPING RULING

United States Attorney is Permitted to Introduce Evidence Relating to All Illegal Acts of Defendants.

By Morning Journal Special Leased Wire. Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 22.—A battered, ivory-handled umbrella that had survived an explosion was produced as a government exhibit at the "dynamite conspiracy" trial today. Thomas Berger, of Pittsburgh, foreman of a bridge construction company, identified it as having been found after an explosion on a railroad bridge at Dayton, O., May 2, 1890.

"I notice that you are examining the handle. What attracts your attention to it?" asked United States District Attorney Miller.

"I see on the handle engraved the initials, 'E. C.' " replied the witness. "It was the umbrella, which, the government charges, Edward Clark, of Cincinnati, carried when he attempted to blow up the bridge and when he held over the dynamite to protect the fuse, forgot Clark, after lighting the fuse, forgot the umbrella.

Clark, at the opening of the present trial, pleaded guilty. The indictment alleges that Herbert S. Holden, acting secretary of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, assisted Clark in preparing for the Dayton explosion.

A dozen foremen of construction firms testified about explosions. H. G. Reynolds, of Richmond, Va., told of an attempt to blow up a bridge across the Susquehanna river near Perryville, Md., on June 2, 1908, when four men, one leaving dynamite bags, E. G. Mathisons, of Chicago, described the blowing up of a construction car on an elevated road extension at Buena Park, Chicago, in March, 1908, and the dynamiting of a car of steel at Indiana Harbor Ind., a year later.

H. W. Ashley, of Pittsburgh, told of the dynamiting of a viaduct near Clairton, Pa., October 12, 1906, after which pieces of a salt cart in which the bomb had been enclosed, were found scattered over the country.

Judge Albert B. Anderson, before whom the forty-five men charged with illegal transportation of explosives, are being tried, made several rulings in answer to objections raised by the defense. He ruled that evidence concerning all of the one hundred explosions referred to by the government, including the Los Angeles Times disaster, might be introduced as showing a motive. He said a conspiracy already had been proven by the plea of guilty on the part of Clark and Orte McManam, but the jury was to determine whether the remaining defendants were implicated.

The court stated further that the government had undertaken to show that the object of the conspiracy was much broader than the mere illegal transportation of dynamite and nitroglycerine, that the explosives were being transported to destroy property and to enforce a reign of terror against contractors who maintained the open shop.

As showing the scope of what evidence might be offered, the court ordered decisions which grew out of a railroad employee's dispute. The original purpose of the employees, the court said, was not to obstruct the United States mail, but as an incident of the execution of the conspiracy to the mail, other tracks the mail trains were obstructed and the United States郵政 court held that all the acts constituted a conspiracy to obstruct the mails.

Later came the witness, Charles H. H. Harkness and T. A. Havermeyer bought four per cent of the stock of the Spreckels company and the Western Sugar Refining Company, the so-called trust, was organized. Seales' attorney the witness resigned as general manager of his father's company.

"Why did you do it?" asked Assistant United States Attorney Knapp. "Well, I wouldn't," said Mr. Spreckels. "But I did not phrase it exactly with my contract of the company's business as I said. Resumes Routine of Home Life as Though Nothing Had Ever Happened; Unattended by Physicians.

By Morning Journal Special Leased Wire. Oyster Bay, Oct. 22.—The quiet routine of life at Sagamore Hill was picked up again by Colonel Roosevelt and his family today as though it had not been interrupted by the attempt to assassinate the former president.

For the first time since he was wounded eight days ago, Colonel Roosevelt was unattended tonight by physicians. There was no one in the house except members of the family and servants and the colonel spoke hopefully of being able after one day more of rest, gradually to resume his work.

Except for the fact that Colonel Roosevelt was ill last evening instead of at work in his library, there was nothing to suggest that anything but the ordinary had happened. Four physicians were with the colonel on his arrival at Oyster Bay from Chicago this morning, and after they had dressed his wound they told him that the one essential thing was complete rest. If their directions are observed, it is believed the ex-president's complete recovery is probable, although it cannot yet be said that he is entirely out of danger.

Dr. Alexander Lambert and Dr. Harry L. Terrell, who accompanied Colonel Roosevelt from Chicago were joined in New York by Dr. Joseph A. Black and Dr. George E. Brewer. After examining the patient, they said the wound was still wide open, spoke of the possibility of infection and added they were unable to say whether it would be possible for him to resume campaign work.

Colonel Roosevelt said when his wound had been dressed, that there was no longer the need of constant supervision of physicians because he was "all right." The physicians were doubtful at first whether he should be left alone, and it was suggested that one of them remain at Sagamore Hill, but the colonel insisted that was unnecessary and the doctors concluded it would be best to leave to his wife. They all went to New York this evening and said they would not return until tomorrow afternoon. Their decision was reached by Colonel Roosevelt's friends as an indication of his improved condition.

The primary function of the physicians was that Colonel Roosevelt must have absolute rest, and must see no one today or tomorrow. Mrs. Roosevelt agreed with them and took hold of the situation as she did in Chicago. Her first move was to place men at the gates with strict orders that no one be admitted to the grounds. Then she saw to it that perfect quiet was maintained in the house and other members of the family were permitted to talk with the colonel about a short time. Political workers, newspaper reporters and photographers crowded to the foot of Sagamore Hill during the day but did not succeed in passing the guards.

Tonight after the rush was over, the watch was withdrawn.

Some of Colonel Roosevelt's friends were solicited for his safety at Sagamore Hill and insisted that he be protected against the possibility of another attack, but he would not hear of a personal guard.

Although his physicians would make no promises, Colonel Roosevelt was confident he soon would be back in the campaign, at least to the extent of exercising general direction. He expressed his intention of going to Madison Square Garden, New York, to speak on October 30th, even if he had strength to say only a few sentences and after another day of rest he expects to begin preparation of an address of half an hour's length.

He hopes also to hold a short conference with Senator Dixon, Geo. W. Perkins and a few other progressive leaders Thursday.

An instance of the fidelity with which the physician's orders are being observed, was furnished when William H. Hutchins, chairman of the state progressive party, came to see the colonel. He got by the guards but was halted at the residence.

Colonel Roosevelt sent out his regrets that he was not able to receive the state chairman.

UNDERWOOD SPEAKS
WOODROW WILSON

Athlone City, N. J., Oct. 22.—Congressman Underwood, of Alabama, before a large audience on the steamer late tonight, declared the re-publican platform calling for a tariff to protect manufacturers' profits, sheltered special privileges.

The crowd of millionaires, continued the speaker, has increased from two or three during democratic administrations until half the wealth of the country has come under the control of forty men, while the balance is divided among ninety millions.

Miss Adams spoke to two crowded houses here this evening.
