

Sallie's Temptations

CONCERNING SALLIE

Sallie is a modern, pretty young creature, with all the emotions and desires you yourself had when you were at that glorious age that lies somewhere between sixteen and twenty-five. Sallie is everywhere. The eyes of the world are upon the ultimate outcome of her moral code. Is she going to weaken her creed of right and wrong and stretch her philosophy to that of the girls who have a "good" time?

Your little girl is just where Sallie is. She must decide for herself. They are all Sallies at heart. Sallie's experience, put down truthfully from the pages of her life, may help your Sallie's. Each chapter is complete in itself. Read it this week. You will enjoy it.—Editor.

Sallie Finds Herself in a New Situation

Morning in Miami and a new day of blue and gold brilliance. Ellie and I sat alone on the open terrace. The others had gone down for a swim in the dazzling ocean, while still others had strolled off to one of the secluded nooks of the extensive gardens.

"What's up?" Ellie demanded. "All I've heard is a whisper about you the breezing in at some time in the early, pearly dawning. Mrs. Divine was not about as communicative as a pound of cheese when I asked as breakfast about our fair Sallie."

In spite of all that had happened, I was forced to smile at Ellie's amusing phraseology.

"Oh, the less said, the better, I sup-

MISS H. GILLETTE VISITS THE LOCAL RED CROSS CHAPTER

Miss Helen Gillette Red Cross Field Representative arrived in the city on Monday to visit the local chapter of the Red Cross. She stated that the local chapter was one of the most splendid Red Cross organizations in the state. The Carbon county chapter of the Red Cross meets at least twice a year to make their plans for whatever type of work they will carry on for that year. An outstanding example of the fine work carried on by the Red Cross is the manner in which they put over the drive to raise funds for relief work during the tornado disaster in Illinois this spring.

Some very fine junior work has been done in this county and plans are to promote more extension work in the next year.

There has been some discussion for co-operation work between the local chapter and the American Legion in trying to reach all of the ex-service men in the country who wish to file claims for disability, compensation etc. Mrs. H. P. Cassidy, chairman of the local chapter or Dr. C. L. Kohlen, examining physician for the U. S. veterans can furnish any information to anyone wishing to know more about this.

Mrs. F. S. Putnam of Edgar is vice-chairman of the Red Cross chapter; Mrs. J. J. Gleason, secretary; Mrs. E. M. Adams, treasurer and Mr. R. M. Porter, Junior Chairman.

Champ Hitch-Hiker

Nellie Amter, 17, lives in New York City and studies music at the Cleveland, (O.). Music Institute. She has funds for study but none for travel—so four times now she has "hitch-hiked" home for a visit. She gave two rules for girl "hitch-hikers." They are, "Don't get into a crowded auto;" and "Don't accept rides after dark."

Blonde Bess Opines

"There is only one knocker that our boss pays any attention to—That's Opportunity."

"Damn her narrow, little mind and soul!"

I knew then that the interview had been frightfully unpleasant. I likewise knew that the thing that upset Ellie had to do with my being at the villa. We are all more psychic than we realize and as a rule, we never go wrong on these first telepathic impressions.

"Now, Ellie, you might as well be perfectly frank about it. You can't hurt my feelings. What did Mrs. Divine say to you about me that left you in such a fury—why, Ellie, old girl, look—you're trembling all over."

"I suppose I'll have to tell you. I'd want you to understand similar conditions."

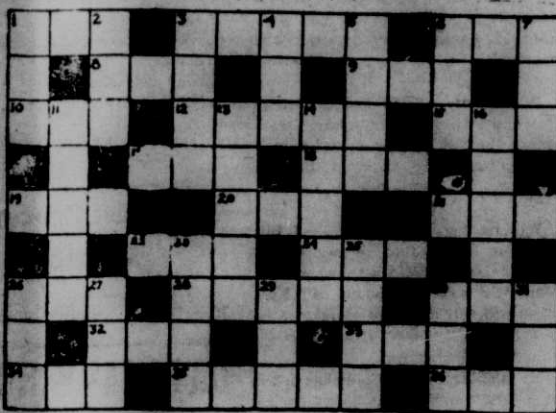

"Of course you would. You're a perfect brick. Come and sit here," and taking her hand, I drew her forward.

"No, siree—not in this house. Not in any swing or chair owned by that heartless piece of alabaster."

"Careful, Ellie, you're talking about our hostess," I warned. After all, we had broken bread with Mrs. Divine and like the Mohammedans, that rite alone should keep us loyal.

JOHN SMITH AND HIS RADIO

A Series of Radio Talks by D. W. Columbus and L. W. Lyons of the Red Lodge Electric Company.

And are willing that radio fans should be amused and profit by their evening experiences. They have a faculty for finding out things so it will pay radio devotees to follow them in this paper each week.

No. 15: Reaching Regeneration

"What's all this talk about regeneration?" Smith asked when we met for our next session on radiology. "The radio world seems to be down on receiving sets that employ this principle, but I believe there's always something to be learned from anything that isn't wanted."

This was encouraging, because the idea of regeneration dates back to 1913 when Edwin H. Armstrong was surprising the electrical world with the idea of the "feed back." Regeneration is found in a variety of sets, if not in pure form then combined with other circuits. It is the basis of the third type of basic receiving set, and one cannot get very far in radio without knowing something about it.

"It would seem to me that all radio receiving is regeneration in a sense," Smith went on. "You regenerate the incoming frequencies until they are useable."

"That's true enough," I admitted. "But the term is somewhat more definite when applied to a circuit. But you'll have to get out a pencil and paper to figure this out in a way that will stick in your memory."

First of all, let's plan a simple one-tube receiving set. Start with the aerial. Connect the lead-in in series with a variometer and a variable condenser."

"Wait a minute," Smith interrupted. "I'm confused about that variometer business."

"No need to be," I retorted. "I've told you before not to try to gather all the details before you get the general picture. Just consider the variometer and condenser as the aerial-ground circuit tuning instruments. Now take the product of your tuning and lead it to the grid of the tube. En route insert a fixed condenser and a grid leak in parallel. Light your tube with the 'A' battery current. Charge the plate of the tube with current from the 'B' battery. And then insert the phones between the plate of the tube and the positive terminal of the 'B' battery."

Smith followed the roughly drawn diagram and got the general picture of the radio frequencies coming in over the aerial, being tuned and led to the grid where they controlled the flow of electrons from the filament to the plate. How the sound values were then led to the phones, of course, was now an old story to him.

"This," I explained, "is a simple one-tube set. Now let's switch it around so as to introduce the idea of regeneration. Here we have to make a few changes because we're introducing a new element. You'll note that in the first drawing I've made the
