MAYSVILLE, SEP. 1 1864

The blockade is comparatively a paper one, as mails, passengers and munition, of war leave British ports with an advertised regularity for Rebel ports, and about pineteen vessels out of every twenty safely pass through the blockade line.

Nearly a thousand American vessels have been sold or transferred to other flags; and not a single American ocean steamer is affeat which, under the stars and stripes earries the mails to a European port, leaving all the mails, passengers and paying freights to go in foreign bottoms.
