THURSDAY,..........MAY 13, 1875.

A Lazy Virginian.

Many years ago I was one of a party in Washington City, when South and North vied with each other in convivial life. Another of the party was Gen. Dawson, member from Western Pennsylvania, whose homestead was Albert Gallatin's old home. He was an admirable story-teller. I recall somewhat sadly, now that he is gone, how well he illustrated the laziness of a class of Virginians. The Story was a part of congressional canvassing.—On one occasion he got across the Pennsylvania line into a little village of Virginia. He was in the midst of a group around the tavern. While treating and talking, a procession approached, like a funeral. He asked who was to be buried?

"Job Dowling," said they.

"Poor Job!" sighed the general. He was a good natured, good-for-nothing, lazy fellow, living on the few fish he caught and the squirrels he killed, but mostly on the donations of his neighbors. "So poor Job is dead, is he?"

"No, he ain't dead zactly," said they.

"Not dead—not d— Yet you are going to bury him?"

"Fact is, General, he has got too infernal, allfired lazy to live. We cant afford him any more. He's got so lazy that the grass began to grow over his shoes—so everlastin' lazy that he put out one of his eyes to save the trouble of winkin' when out a gunnin'."

"But," says the General, "this must not be. It will disgrace my neighborhood. Try him a while longer can't you?"

"Can't; too late—coffin cost $1 25.—Must go on now."

About this time the procession came up and halted, when the General proposed, if they would let Job out, he would send over a bag of corn. On this announcement the lids of the coffin opened, and Job languidly sat up; the cents dropped from his eyes as he asked:

"Is the corn shelled, General?"

"No, not shelled."

"Then" said Job, as he lazily lay down, "go on with the funeral!"

WHY SHE HADN'T WRITTEN.—Within the last few days an old beggar woman, having been admitted into the kitchen of one of the most prominent citizens, was mournfully relating to the lady of the house the misfortunes of her life. She said her husband went to California to dig gold a great many years ago, but had never been able to find more than enough to keep himself alive, so of course, he had never sent her any; that, until within a few years, they had continually written each other letters full of love and sympathy. At this point the flood-gates of her grief burst open; she sputtered and sighed at a terrible rate, and finally after several ineffectual efforts, ejaculated that she had not heard from, or even written to her darling in a long time. The old woman drew a long breath, and was about to continue, when the lady of the house asked her why she had not written to her husband. "Ah, mum!" sighed she, "after I lost my front teeth I couldn't pronounce very good, so I had to give up writing."—Toledo Blade.
