lading and unlading. The summer business has commenced with the most encouraging prospects to our merchants, and the ancient city bids fair to realize all the advantages that were anticipated from the completion of our great work of internal improvement.

We earnestly solicit the reader's attention to an able article, in this day's paper, on the subject of Mr. Calhoun's construction of the Rules of the Senate. It will be found on the opposite page, over the signature of " PATRICK HENRY."

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES-Mr. Scott, from the Committee on Public Lands, to which had been referred a bill from the Senate, entitled "An Act to compensate receivers of public monies, for transmitting and depositing the same," reported the bill with amendments, and it was referred to a Committee of the Whole.

Commerce, which had been instructed to inquire whether the cultivation of the mulberry tree, and the breeding of silk-worms, be a subject of legislative attention, made a report, which was laid on the table.

The bill from the Senate, "to extend the time for locating Virginia military land warrants, and returning surveys thereon to the General Land Office," was read and referred to the Committee on the Public Lands.

The House resumed the consideration of the bill for the relief of the surviving officers of the nia moved that the bill be committed to the Committee on Military Pensions, with instructions to report the number of those who served during the Revolutionary War, who ought to be provided for by law, the amount necessary to make such provision, and the manner in which it should be made. The motion prevailed after some little debate.

The House then resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole, on the Bill to authorise the subscription or purchase of stock in the Louisville and Portland Canal Company; and pening a Canal, to connect the Michigan Lake with the river Illinois. Both bills were reported to the House, the first without, and, the last with amendments. The first was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, and the last was recommitted to the Committee on Roads and Canals. And then the House adjourned.

From the National Intelligencer.

With all our exertions, we make less rapid progress than is desirable in the publication of the two great Debates in the House of Representatives. We shall go on with them nevertheless, to the end. It is somewhat disheartening to be anticipated, in the publication of some of the speeches, by others, who feel themselves under no obligation to observe they have been published elsewhere; though it may be for giving preference to those portions of it which have not yet been published at all. We approach now the close of the Debate on the Constitutional Question, which some of our readers would have been glad to see earlier, had it been proper for the gratification of their curiosity, to overleap the intermediate space in order to arrive more speedily at the conclusion.

Because we did not choose to do this, some prints have taken up the amusing notion that we suppressed this report, and one print has gone so far as to speak of the notice which we took, at the time, of the last day's debate, as having been concerted with the National Journal. To this silly suggestion, the Journal has thought it worth while to publish a denial. Without taking that trouble, for our part, we improve the present opportunity to put in a general denial to all suggestions of concert in our movements, between us and any body. Self-moved and selfsupported, we scorn the imputation of subservience to any thing but what appears to us to be the public good-bowing always with deference to public opinion, when opposed to ours, and always paying respect to the opinions of others, however varient from our own. We may sometimes mistake the public good: but so may those who differ from us. We may be as much excited in pursuit of our object as others are, but we do not know that we should do our duty to the country any better, either by subjecting ourselves to the guidance of a continual gust of passion, or by luffing or filling as the wind flaws South, East, or West. It may suit the purpose of a certain description of politicians, to stigmatise this steadiness of purpose as a purchased neutrality: we call it consistency; a quality of which we should be glad to see a little more in those who think we have too much of it. The price at which it is purchased is a clear conscience-a jewel, however valuable, of which we are so little covetous, that it would give us pleasure to share the possession of it, even with those of our enemies who want it.

We have the pleasure to announce, says the N. Y. Times, the arrival of Commodore Morris, on Friday, in the Corinthian, in thirty-five days from Liverpool, in good health. This is a welcome fact to his country, upon whose best esteem he has so strong a hold, and who were not without their fears concerning him, considering the state of his health when he took his departure for Europe in the Brandywine.

DEATH OF MISSIONARIES.

The Missionary Herald, for October, published at Calcutta, records the ravages of death among the Missionaries of almost every denomination in Bengal during the last few months. "On the 29th of August, Rev. T. Maisch of the Church Missionary Society died; and on the 1st of October, Mrs. Ray, who was returning from England with her husband, Rev. W. Ray, of the London Missionary Society, died also on the Bill to aid the state of Illinois in o. at the Sand Heads. Scarcely had the remains of the latter been committed to the deep, when Mr. Albrecht, Professor in the Scrampore College, was removed; and now (says the Herald,) we have to add to the mournful list the name of Rev. J. Lawson, of the Baptist Missionary Society, who died on the 22d October. To these we add the death of Rev. M. Frost, American Missionary at Bombay."
