From the New Orleans Picayune. A GAMBLING STORY.

Two friends sat over a game of 'brag,' in this city, four years ago. They played long, and at length quit, one five hundred dollars in the other's debt. We have said they were friends, and each knew the other was not so circumstanced as to stand so large a loss, although the excitement from playing, had led them on from larger bets to larger still, until the event came about.

'Tom, you will have to take my note for it, said the loser, 'and it shall be paid in thirty
