HOW TO CATCH A THIEF. A citizen of Clarksville, having lost a quantity of tobacco, applied to Henry Dunkley, a man of wisdom and ingenuity, for a plan to catch the thief. Mr. D. set his wits to work, and the result is thus related by the "Tobacco

Plant:" He first requested the names of all suspicious characters who had access to the tobacco. He then sat down with great deliberation and wrote upon slips of papers the name of each negro. They were then called up, and each furnished with the slip bearing his own name. They were requested to place them in their pockets and preserve them till the evening when they would be called for, and the thief they were told,) would be found teries, will receive the most prompt attention, with the longest slip of paper. Punctual to and an account of each drawing will be sent immediately after it is over to all who order and all the papers were delivered up, when it was discovered that one of them (in possession of Munford,) had been shortened about an inch. Of course the case was a plain one. Mr. Dunkley's device had succeeded perfeetly, and Munford received the merited re-

FRATERNIZATION.

The leaders of the French and English forces in Turkey have strenuously inculcated a spirit of fraternization among the troops of the two nations; and the soldiers, nothing loth, have carried out their instructions with so much vigor and cordiality that the "fraternization" has become rather a nuisance to commanding officers of regiments. On one occasion a huge Highlander, while enjoying the height of convivial good fellowship with some French soldiers, exchanged the greater portion of his dress with an African soldier, a d when the next morning brought recollection, was horrified to find himself in a fez cap, a blue jacket embroidered with red worsted a bright blue sash around his waist, and a pair of enormous Dutch built scarlet pantaloons flapping around his legs. The woe-be-gone, sheepish look of the poor Highlander, as he presented himself, clad in his borrowed wardrobe, before his officers, was inimitable. What became of the African, who must have created quite a sensation in his kilt and coatee, has never been satisfactorily ascertained.

IMPORTANCE OF THE ONION. The onion is worthy of notice as an extensive article of consumption in this country. It is largely cultivated at home, and is imported, to the extent of seven or eight tons will sell to punctual customers, as low as they a year, from Spain and Portugal. But it risee in importance when we consider that in these latter countries it forms one of the common and universal supports of life. It is interesting, therefore, to know, that, in addition to the peculiar flavor which first recommends Juice, Port, Muscat, and Malaga Wines, for added that our Stock of Goods, for general famiit, the onion is remarkably nutritious. Ac- sale by HUME, MARSHALL & WARD, cording to my analysis, the dry onion-root contains from twenty-five to thirty per cent of gluten. It ranks in this respect with the nutritious pea and the gram of the East. It is not merely as a relish, therefore, that the wayfaring Spaniard eats his onion with his humble crust of bread, as he sits by the refreehing spring; it is because experience has long proved that, like the cheese of the English laborer, it helps to sustain his strength also, and adds, beyond what its bulk would suggest, to the amount of nourishment which his simple meal supplies .- The Chemistry of Common Life.

THINGS IN PARIS. A Paris letter writer thus shows up an amiable weakness of the Parisians:

"The mania for suicide is reaching a point that is positively alarming in this city. Day before yesterday, there were no less than five cases. A Prussian officer blew out his brains during the performance of the Prophet, at the sale at Grand Opera. A disappointment in love, deaf-ness and approaching blindness were his reasons. A woman, 81 years old, plunged a knife into her heart because she had waited long enough for a natural death, and she could wait no longer. A servant suffocated herself because she was born to command and not to obey. Two girls threw themselves into the Seine, because their mother had forbidden them to put on their new gowns before Sunday. These young women were both rescued, and were restored to their parents "after a severe reprimand from the commissary
