MISCELLANEOUS READING. AN EVENTFUL CAREER.

C. F. Clarkson, formerly editor of The Indiana American, who is now travelling in Tennessee, narrates the following story in a

Let me recite to you a true history of a $1,000 man whose farm we passed over yesterday.-About fifteen years ago a Presbyterian clergyman of New York had a wayward son. We have his name and location but choose to withhold it at present. Before he was seven-70 00 his father could no longer control him. He do 25 quarter do 35 00 left for the wicked and corrupt city of New York, where he became a clerk in a dripking saloon, but his character was too bad to be retained there. He next was a barkeeper in a theatre, but was dismissed. He went lower and still lower, until he slept in empty cellars and on the wharves of the city, a perfect nuisance and a disgrace to his race. At this stage of his career, an old college mate-for our hero was a graduate of one of the best colleges in the State of New Yorkdetermined to hunt him up and make one more effort to save him. He went to New York, and after a week of diligent search, 50 00 with the aid of the police, he found him. He 25 00 washed and clothed him, took him back to the country, and by every inducement that OTTERY for the benefit of the State of Del- could be held out to him, persuaded him to was successful. The friend who sought him out and who saved him we are well acquainted with. They both determined to come to Tennessee to teach school. They soon reach-600 ed here, and with a high recommendation they brought, soon obtained good places. The reclaimed son of the Presbyterian clergyman, within six months after his arrival. married an orphan girl worth $40,000 in cash. She had a younger sister and a brother, who each had equal amounts. The sister soon after died, leaving one half of her estate to our hero and his wife, the other half to her brother, and thus increasing his estate to $60,000. When the Mexican war $3,000 broke out, the brother enlisted, and made a 2.800 will, leaving all his estate to his brother-in-2,700 | law (our hero) and his wife, in case he never 2,500 returned from the war. He, like many more 2.467 of our noble youths, was killed at Buena 1,500 Vista. Thus our hero came into possession 500 of the entire estate of the family, which at first was $120,000, which was increased by advances of lands and increase of negroes to over $300,000. He is now one of the richest planters of Middle Tennessee, and does not live twenty-five miles from Nashville.
