MONDAY EVENING, DECEMBER 15.

AMERICAN WOMEN IN EUROPE.-I would say to husbands and bridegrooms coming to Europe, "Leave your wives at home." In the matter of keeping down expenses, you'll have your hands full without them. You will at all times have them more than full. Alone, and you may be able to resist temptations, but when you bring her with you, you simply scuttle your financial craft at the bottom, set it on fire atop and light your candles at either end. Married men have told me these things in confidence. They say that, once in London or Paris, the woman's financial sense and courage desert her entirely. She runs mad-financially mad. What she can't spend she gives away to beggars, street musicians—any body who is by to take the cash. To let her out on Regent or What she can't spend she gives away to beg-Oxford streets without a keeper is for her to return in two hours without a shilling, and in return in two hours without a shilling, and in another hour a van drives up to your lodgings laden with her purchases. When buying dry goods palls she falls back on charity, and wants to adopt an English infant, with the mother included, no matter how difficult it may be to cordingly, at find the father. Indeed, an uncertain paternity only renders the protege more desirable and interesting .- Prentice Mulford.

A Bombay newspaper says that among the hill people it is a common practice to place infants beneath a constant jet of water conveyed through a bamboo spout from a mountain stream, so that the water falls upon the head of the child, which goes to sleep under this cooling influence and sleeps for hours at a stretch. The water is believed "to strengthen the brain and make the children not only healthy, but hardy and fearless."

Leonard Scott Publishing Co., 140 FULTON ST., NEW YORK,

By arrangement with the English Publishers, who receive a liberal compensation.

These periodicals constitute a wonderful miscellany of modern thought, research and criticism. The cream of all European books worth reviewing is found here, and they treat of the leading events of the world in masterly articles written by men who have special knowledge of the matters treated. The American Publishers urge upon all intelligent readers in this country a liberal support of the Reprints which they have so long and so cheaply furnished, feeling sure that no expenditure for literary matter will yield so rich a return as that required for a sub-scription to these the leading Periodicals of Great Britain.
