FATHER'S TERRIBLE CRIME

Elkton, Md., June 17.—How the father crushed "big brother's" head with blows from a sledge hammer as the boy lay sleeping, was the story told States' Attorney Clayton yesterday by one of the trio of terrified little ones, children of Guiseppe Guilino, 60 years old, a farmer living near here.

The murder was committed Saturday morning, about 4 o'clock, Samuel, 14 years old, leaped from bed with the death cry of his brother, Vincent, 19 years old, ringing in his ears. At the command of his father, he stood by while the latter dragged the body down stairs, carried it in a wheelbarrow to a potato patch and there buried it.

After returning to the house, the father gathered up the boy's clothing and hid it in a clump of bushes, meanwhile telling his three younger children to say that Vincent had packed his effects and left the house a week previous.

When Tony Guilino, the oldest son, who lives at West Chester, Pa., came home Sunday morning he noticed something wrong. For several hours he could not comprehend what had taken place. Blood stains in the bedroom and on the porch so aroused him that he came to Elkton and asked Sheriff McAllister to investigate.

Careful questioning brought details of the orgy from one of the children, and the father finally broke down and confessed.

Guilino was brought to Elkton jail. When pressed to tell why he murdered the boy, the father stated that his son had ill-treated him, by throwing a pail of hot water in his face several weeks ago, and he swore to "get even."

INJURED ENGINEER DIES

Was Hurled Through Cab Window When Engine Fell in River

Lynchburg, Va., June 17.—Thomas E. Sydnor, aged 45, Chesapeake and Ohio freight engineer, who was injured when two fellow trainmen lost their lives near here Thursday, when his engine went into the James river, died Saturday, double pneumonia being a contributing cause of his death.

In lucid moments before his death the engineer told a remarkable story of his escape from instant death by being crushed and by drowning. When he noticed the slide ahead of his train he applied his emergency brakes, rising to a standing position at the time. The derailment threw him back to his seat and as the engine plowed into the swollen river he was hurled through the cab window. In this fall he fractured several ribs and crushed his liver. Coming to his senses after the first shock, Sydnor thought he was pinned under the water, but quickly released himself. He found footing on the cylinder of the engine and was found there standing in the water to his arm pits. The surviving train crew found a wire, fastened a stick at one end and threw it to the engineer. He caught the stick the first time and was drawn to the bank. Sydnor then walked a mile to Coleman's Falls, where he collapsed.

Sydnor is survived by his widow and four children, who live at Clifton Forge.
