PROBABLY the largest photograph ever printed has been produced in London. It is a picture of Mrs. Shaw, the whistler, and is nine feet high.

DERORAH POWERS, of the firm of D. Powers & Son, of Lansingburg, N. Y., is probably the oldest banker in the country, being ninety-nine years old.

PARIS green kills Louisiana's cotton worms, and Louisiana's poisoned cotton worms have in parts almost exterminated the partridges and prairie chickens.

PROBABLY the longest word in the German language is in the last edition of the official journal of commissions. Here it is: "Mettamidothethylmethylbenzylamidophenylcarbinol."

CONGRESSMAN O'NEILL, of Boston, against whom John L. Sullivan expects to run, says he will give the slugger the first complete wallpunch he ever got if he enters the field against him.

FOR the first time in the history of the Yale Law School an Italian is among the students. His name is Signor Paul Russo, and he has been employed as court interpreter in New Haven for several years.

S. L. M. BARLOW died a few months since in New York supposed to be worth $2,000,000. It is now discovered that his estate was really bankrupt, and his magnificent residence is to be sold to pay his debts.

JAY GOULD was recently offered $50,000 cash and a royalty of forty per cent on all copies that should be sold for a volume of reminiscences to be written by the noted financier. He did not even condescend to reply to the proposition.

A FULL-LENGTH oil portrait of Washington, which was purchased for ten dollars at the recent sale of the Barnum's Hotel effects in Baltimore, is now estimated to be worth one thousand dollars, experts having pronounced it to be an original by Gilbert C. Stuart.

A GERMAN scientist wishes to determine by means of photography if the moon is inhabited, and it is said that the King of Wurtemberg has decided, in order to solve this interesting problem, to cause to be made in the best possible condition, photographs of the moon; then to enlarge the negative one hundred and ninety thousand times.

A REMARKABLE dinner party was given recently by the citizens in charge of Bly's Hospital at Cincinnati. Twenty-six of the inmates sat down to the table. Fifteen were over sixty years of age, eight over seventy, one over eighty-three, another eighty-seven, and at the head of the table sat Mrs. Elizabeth Schulten, just one hundred and four years old.

TWELVE persons have now been shot and killed in the continuance of the Hatfield-McCoy feud in West Virginia. Of these one was Miss Allphare McCoy, shot pleading for mercy in her father's doorway by Ellison Mounts. Another, the second woman killed, was Julia Ann McCoy, shot by her groom's maid, together with the minister in the act of uniting them.

BALTIMORE has a secret organization, the object of which is to protect its members from undesirable marriages. When one of the club finds himself in love he reports the matter and a committee is appointed to investigate the matter and advise him. Any fellow who can't manage an affair of that kind without help is a pretty poor specimen for a level-headed girl to tie to.

A BUSTLING young man in New York named Max Solomon has just been sent to the city prison to serve out a sentence for obtaining money under false pretenses. He had been leading the dual life of a bon vivant in society; residing in a fashionable boarding-house, daily donning a disguise and begging from door to door, nightly splurging as a member of the Night Exchange.

The girl with the iron jaw is what the friends of Miss Lillian Loban, of New York City, have named the remarkable girl of seventeen. She has for a long time been the envy of grunting chaps. But she is not only a pretty poor specimen for a level-headed girl to tie to, but she shows kindling wood and broom handles, pine knots, bits of broken furniture and grinds the hardest wood into sawdust and pulp. More than this, her hair is so strong that she can tie the dumbbells to slender wrists of it and whirl them in dizzy circles around her head.

A GENTLEMAN living in Richmond, Va., owns a violin which is associated with the early history of Virginia. It is one of four violins connected with the early history of the Commonwealth. It is marked "Nicolaus Amati fecit, Cremona, 1651." This violin was brought to this country by Robert Bolling, the husband of Jane Rolfe, the granddaughter of Pocahontas, who was the daughter of the mighty Indian King Powhatan, of Virginia. The violin is of superior tone, volume and finish, and has been used by many prominent performers.

SOME time ago the boiler in the Delaware State almshouse exploded, killing a man supposed to be the engineer, Patrick Grogan, who had been in charge of the institution for years. The remains of the dead man were buried by Grogan's relatives, and an administrator appointed for his estate, which amounted to ten thousand dollars. Just as a visit to the property was about to be made Grogan turned up, having been on a hunting trip in Virginia. The man killed was a pauper whom Grogan had hired to take his place while he was away.

The Lord Zeltling states that an extraordinary discovery was made in an old lumber-room at Lodz. An old arm chair, which had belonged to the present owner's grandfather and had been put away in an attic for want of room, was brought out the other day to be recovered. When the old cover was taken off a large packet was found stuffed into the seat of the chair, containing three bank notes of 1,000 rubles each, 800 rubles in gold, and a bank receipt dated 1867, for 6,000 rubles. The chair has been in the possession of the present owner for some years.

BROOKS IN ONTARIO.

The Peaceful Life of Farmer Dagg Greatly Altered by the War.

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 18.—The neighborhood of Clarence has been thrown into a great state of excitement over the doing of some ill deeds. It is reported that a natural hand. The mysterious agency has wreaked the full force of its vengeance upon the household of George Dagg. A few days ago a boy named Dean was discharged from the Dagg family, and in taking his departure invoked the vengeance of the spirits upon the household of his late employer. Shortly after his departure the window of the house of Dagg was broken and every pane of glass in the house was broken. Mr. Dagg states that his first impression was that an earthquake was passing over the house, but he was told that the house was discovered to be on fire. This fire was extinguished. That night after the family had retired Mr. Dagg was awakened by a noise in the house. He was put out, when it was found another fire had just been started down stairs, which was also put out. The fire was put out, when it was found another fire had just been started down stairs, which was also put out.
