MORMONISM SPREADING.

"The danger of Mormonism is underrated, not overrated. When the public realizes that there are two Mormon churches in Brooklyn, one in Manhattan, one in Philadelphia, a strong and growing Mormon settlement on the borders of Pennsylvania and New Jersey and that the strongest church in a section fifty miles from Jersey City is Mormon, it may be understood that the situation is menacing."

This statement, which started the women's executive committee of the domestic missions of the Reformed church at its eighteenth anniversary in this city, was made by Miss Elizabeth B. Verandye, a member of the committee, in an address on "Mormonism in the East."

Miss Verandye said later "It was predicted in fifty years the Mormons would control a belt of states cutting the country in two from northeast to southwest. The prediction has been verified in twenty years instead of fifty. They own land from the Rocky mountains to the Sierras and are spreading west and have told you. They control four western states and at their present rate of progression in a number of others will soon have supremacy in them."

"If the constitutional amendment making polygamy a crime is not passed now it will soon be impossible to pass it, as they need to acquire control in twelve states to prevent legislation against them. Two thousand Mormon missionaries are actively pursuing their propaganda work, sixty of them in the state of New York alone," St. Paul Dispatch.

EXTEND A HELPING HAND TO THE BOYS.

Editor Advance:

Dear Sir:—As one reads the article in your issue of Nov. 15 entitled, "Do Something For The Young Men," our sympathy naturally goes out to those young men who are less surely drifting downstream, with a few hands held out to save or even slay them in their course. Although nearly every man in Worthington knew that some of them at least were thus drifting and some of course tried to inspire them with lighter motives, but what can one or even a dozen do toward reclaiming the inner life of such boys without some form of remunerative work the boys could not get money honestly so they sought to get it dishonestly, for money we must all have and from dishonest boys to criminal men is but the natural course of mankind, so as has been well said, save the boys and the men are saved thus far I think we are all agreed; but now comes the vexed question as to how to best reach the desired end. Viz: to save many of these boys as possible. We have good laws but they fail to meet the pressing need of our youths, but could not each town organize a society composed of the business men, whose sole object should be to look up just such children and furnish them profitable employment where they could be taught honesty. Even if such business men had to contribute a part of their wages, or better still have laws enacted where by a state fund could be drawn on for part of their wages. Provided such laws would be constitutional it would surely be conducive of more good than the same amount spent in penal or charitable institutions, as this would strike at prevention instead of cure and children would be reformed at home, without the blur on them which follows the child sent to a Reformatory, I hope none who read this will think it visionary or fanatical, we aim to be practical and fully believe that if put to the test it would prove itself to be a great boon to the neglected waifs. Yours for the uplifting of mankind. Farmer.

A MILD WINTER DUE.

Unless all signs fail—and the weather isn't particular dry just at present—the coming winter will be a hard one for coal-burners.

During the recent cold snap the musk rats, prognosticators extraordinary to the American people, began work upon their winter houses, says Red Lake Courier. They are constructing their homes with thin walls, an unfailing sign of mild weather for the winter.

Corn shocks this year are usually light. Moss growing on the north side of tree is much less luxuriant than in former years, and the fur of wild animals is comparatively thin.

All these signs indicate an open winter. Not within the memory of the oldest inhabitants have the indications been so pronounced.

It is on record that in 1800 the great, great grandfather of Bug-ah-nag-shig noticed that the maize cultivated by his wife had only a very light husk. That year the moss don't grow, and the muskrats scarcely took the trouble to build any houses at all. The season of winter arrived, but still the great Northwest remained warm. Even Medicine Hat sweltered in the heat. Birds neglected to migrate. In fact, the season was most remarkable in every respect.

Its memory has been handed down in Indian traditions, and the Aborigines say that not since that time has there been such complete unanimity of signs presaging warm weather as are to be seen this fall.

Minnesota winters seem to gradually growing warmer, and it may be that the state will soon be included in the banana belt.

MONEY IN KANSAS APPLES.

Judge Fred Wellhouse, the apple king of Kansas has sold his crop of apples for $18,000.

The yield of Judge Wellhouse's orchards was about 33,000 bushels—5000 bushels more than he expected. The judge sold to one firm in New York 5000 barrels of his first grade apples, receiving therefor $12,500—$2.50 a barrel.

Judge Wellhouse doesn't know how many apple trees he has, but is sure the number is greater than 100,000. His orchards extend over 1600 acres of ground. They are in Leavenworth and Osage counties.—Topeka Kas. Daily Herald.
