Attempt to Kill the Czar With Poison.

> Great Britain. LIFE AND DEATH OF DR. KENRALY.

LONDON, April 17 .- Dr. Kenealy, ex-barrister, died yesterdsy at his home. Edward Waugh Anhyde Kenealy, D. C., was born at Cork, Ireland, in 1819. He was educated at Trinity College, Dublin, and became early celebrated for his knowledge of many foreign languages, having published translations of songs and ballads from and into no less than thirteen languages. He was a contributor to Dr. Maginn's Homeric Ballads to the Dublin University Magazine and to Frazer's Magazine.

Coming to London he obtained an admission to the Bar. Shortly after his arrival in London he was arrested for inhumanly beating a lad, his illegitimate son, and after a trial and conviction, was sent to Newgate for several months. Surviving this disgrace he resumed his practice at the bar, and, by the force of his talents, won a very prominent place in his profession, and became a bencher in Gray's Inn and Queen's Counsel. He was in the enjoyment of a lucrative practice when he became the defender of the notorious Arthur Orton, the claimant to the title and estates of Sir Roger Tichborne.

Dr. Kenealy conducted this famous suit with much ability, but he committed the mistake during its long progress of attacking in the most virulent manner the presiding Judge, Lord Chief Justice Cockburn, and of doing other things equally unwise. His conduct finally became unbearable, and he was disbarred and expelled from Gray's Inn. Thus deprived of his professional means of livelihood he established a weekly jurnal, called "The Erglishman," and instituted a series of meetings all over the kingdom at which he puffed his journal, and declared that his client was Sir Roger, and asked for liberal subscription to aid him in exposing the conspiracy which had sent this unhappy baronet to languish in Dartmouth prison. He succeeded tolerably well, and for a while The Englishman and its founder prospered. He was returned to Parliament for the Borough of Stake-on-Trent, but his Parliamentary course was not a brilliant success. He was a candidate for re-election in the late election, but was

His death was caused by mortification of the right foot.

THE MISSING TRAINING SHIP.

LONDON, April 17.-A dispatch from Vienna states that a boat has been found washed sahore close to that place, which is a fortified seaport town of Portugal, in the province of Minho, at the mouth of the Lima, about forty miles north of Oporto, and that fears were entertained that it might have belonged to the missing training ship, Atlanta, as this point would be near the Atlanta's track from Bermuda.

On being notified of the discovery of the boat and of the surmises concerning its character Admiralty telegraphed to officers at Vienna to collect wreckage, and examine it carefully to ascertain if it is marked with a broad arrow, a distinguished mark which is placed on all the Queen's property.

No reply has yet been received. The ex-over the mysterious absence of the Atlanta is unabated, and as time g es by without bringing news of her the opintional disaster has occurred.
